Full sized tractor or lawn tractor?
Couldn't you have done it in "layers", just skimming off a little and making multiple passes?

As a Vietnam vet, presumably you are, like many of us here, not a spring chicken <g>. Not only is the snow bad for your back, it's bad for your heart -- a double whammy, the weight of the snow PLUS the cold air. Be careful, take it easy. Hire it done if you can't use the tractor. Even paying one or two hundred bucks is way cheaper than a visit to the ER...or funeral home.

Yep, Nom vet here. it was what i call heart attack snow. took my time, took breaks, made it. gotta use your head. sorry some people in the area didn't. lots of power lines down. i got lucky this time. over the hill from me, bout 2 miles, they lost 3 transformers. so, guess i missed the bullet. and, yep, no spring chicken here. on the bad side of sixty. been trying to retire for the last 2 years. but, i like to say, doin the best we can. thanks for the concern.

http://news.oneindia.in/2010/02/07/radiopakistan-cancels-voas-pushto-broadcast-followingtali.html

Peshawar, Feb.7 (ANI): Radio Pakistan has decided to discontinue the Voice of America's (VOA) Pushto-language programmes following a threat from the Tehreek-e-Taliban Pakistan (TTP).

The VOA launched its Pushto-language radio station, 'Deeva Radio', in 2009, targeting audience in the North West Frontier Province (NWFP) and other tribal areas.

"The Radio Pakistan central management ended its agreement with the VOA in light of the terror threats and political pressure, as many local listeners went to the (print) media to force the government to cancel the agreement," The Daily Times quoted a senior producer at Radio Pakistan Peshawar, as saying.

"The Taliban and other anti-American groups in the country threatened to bomb the Radio Pakistan Peshawar premises if the station continued airing Deeva Radio programmes," he said on conditions of anonymity.

However, Radio Pakistan Director General Murtaza Solangi said the broadcast was cancelled on mutual agreement between the state broadcaster and the VOA. (ANI)

The WebTV has an operating system stored in a solid state memory. That memory is fully capable of harboring malware.

The reason nobody hacks WebTV is because you are one of 3 people in the world who still uses it.

Liberty Net for Week of January 30 ï¿½ February 6

http://3950.net/2010/02/liberty-net-for-week-of-january-30-february-6/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

DESPITE CHALLENGES, like changing propagation that brought inadvertent conflict with another net, and intentional (and illegal) jamming from would-be censors, W1WCRï¿½s free speech current events discussion net, the Liberty Net, did itself proud once again this week, with information and analysis of the news that you simply canï¿½t get anywhere else.

Here are just a few of the topics discussed this week (times are from the beginning of the recording):

ï¿½ Obama, who looks increasingly like a one-term president, gives everything to the bankers and nothing to the small businessman. (32 minutes)

ï¿½ A Liberty Net member announces his support for the NAACP in their lawsuit based on lack of enforcement when it comes to Mestizo gangs attacking Black families. Why are no White Americans doing this? ï¿½ we are victims of these gangs too. Where are the mainstream ï¿½conservativeï¿½ pundits like Glenn Beck and Alex Jones? Why are they silent on this issue? (59 minutes)

ï¿½ A corporation ï¿½ Murray Hill, Inc. ï¿½ is actually running for Congress, as a protest against the Supreme Courtï¿½s bizarre ruling that corporations are ï¿½personsï¿½ with the ï¿½rightï¿½ to spend as much money as they want to buy politicians. (1 hour 4 minutes and also 2 hours 9 minutes)

ï¿½ There is now not enough money in existence to to pay back the debt of the U.S. government. Will the Chinese ï¿½ who hold much of that debt ï¿½ find a way to ï¿½forecloseï¿½? (1 hour 16 minutes)

ï¿½ When ï¿½Russianï¿½ and ï¿½Americanï¿½ oligarchs (most of whom are not ethnically Russian or American) get in trouble, they often ï¿½make Aliyahï¿½ and find refuge in Israel. This trail of billionaire criminality is a major conduit for stolen American technology. (1 hour 34 minutes)

ï¿½ Is Narcissism ï¿½ such as that obviously displayed by Barack Obama ï¿½ caused by Mamaï¿½s Boy Syndrome (the lack of a strong, responsible male in the household)? How dangerous are such people? How are they used by the power structure? (1 hour 36 minutes)

ï¿½ Are corporations ï¿½ even foreign ones ï¿½ ï¿½human beingsï¿½ who can participate, with their billions, in the political process? The current Supreme Court says they are. (2 hours 36 minutes)

ï¿½ Is Osama bin Laden a signatory to the latest global warming resolution? (2 hours 43 minutes)

ï¿½ Was Microsoft involved in developing the software which the government of China uses to censor the Internet? Are the oligarchs who rule us ï¿½ or their servants in the regime in Washington ï¿½ planning to do the same thing to us? (2 hours 15 minutes)

ï¿½ Did Indonesia send a statue of a ï¿½monkey godï¿½ to Barack Obama as a ï¿½good luckï¿½ totem? (2 hours 29 minutes)

ï¿½ Freedom-lovers have made their way into the public consciousness with their Tea Parties. But whatï¿½s next? How about a National Strike? (2 hours 49 minutes)

ï¿½ One hopes that the Tea Party movement stays out of the clutches of establishment hacks like Glenn Beck and Sarah Palin. (2 hours 50 minutes)

ï¿½ Is Microsoft purposely making older programs ï¿½ like Word 2000 ï¿½ unstable on the newer operating systems, to force users to purchase the latest versions? (2 hours 56 minutes)

ï¿½ Which has the worst and most corrupt state government ï¿½ Illinois, California, or North Carolina? (3 hours 14 minutes)

ï¿½ Should bankers and lawyers be forbidden to hold public office? (3 hours 18 minutes)

ï¿½ Should the illegal Federal Reserve and its banker shareholders be waterboarded? (3 hours 33 minutes)

ï¿½ Patriots should view the old Errol Flynn movie _Captain Blood_. The message in it is appropriate for these times: The day will come when the worm will turn and those forced to row under the whip will take power ï¿½ and then the bankers and their politicians will fear for their lives. (3 hours 46 minutes)

ï¿½ The inside story of the cover-up of the John Edwards love-child affair is shocking ï¿½ and shows the total corruption at the highest levels of American politics. (3 hours 57 minutes)

ï¿½ As the schools catastrophically fail, an increasingly incompetent education establishment repeats ï¿½Afrocentricï¿½ mantras to ï¿½boost the self-esteemï¿½ of Black students ï¿½ while White students are abandoned and left totally out in the cold. If you are a teacher, to even criticize this situation leads to a loss of employment. (5 hours 5 minutes)

ï¿½ There is now a nutritional supplement that can reverse age-related vision problems. (5 hours 42 minutes)

Net discussions begin at about the 13-minute point and the total length of the recording is 7 hours 25 minutes.

The participants on the Liberty Net are independent voices. They have no commercial, corporate, or partisan axe to grind ï¿½ unlike the paid shills of the Democrat/Republican axis on Fox News or CNN. You can listen in ï¿½ or take part, if you have an amateur radio license ï¿½ on or near 3950 kHz every Saturday night starting at 10PM Eastern Time and lasting until well into the wee hours of the morning. If you donï¿½t have a good quality shortwave radio, you can tune in live via N2SAG (and participate in live chat that is often relayed over the air) at http://stickam.com/thelibertynet. Or you can listen to delayed feeds via N2IRJ ï¿½ or download the Net every week right here at http://3950.net .

Iran Arrests 7 Linked to US -Funded Radio

VOA News 07 February 2010

Iranian state media say Iran has arrested seven people linked to U.S.-funded Radio Farda and has accused some of working for U.S. spy agencies.

The official new agency IRNA says the seven are suspected of provoking protesters during the violent anti-government demonstration last December.

At least eight people died on Ashura, the day of ritual Shi'ite Muslim mourning, after clashes broke out between security forces and opposition supporters.

IRNA did not identify those arrested. Radio Farda is a Farsi-language broadcast service based in Prague, Czech Republic, and funded by the U.S. government.

The arrests come as Iran is beginning to mark the 31st anniversary of the 1979 Islamic revolution that toppled the U.S.-backed shah.

Opposition leaders Mir Hossein Mousavi and Mehdi Karroubi have urged their supporters to make their voices heard when Iranians march on February 11. Iran's government has threatened severe reprisals if the protests take place.

1368. Were the Parables of Jesus a Critical Spirit, or Satire as a teacher?

No reply necessary or expected, this was inspired by someone who many of us know.....

Would the Parables of Jesus be a Critical Spirit, or an excellent teacher? Now, then, in politics, what happens when you begin to praise people for what they are expected to do in the first place? What happens when you start praising people for having a nice crease in their pants? What happens in politics when you say somebody is clean, or well spoken?
Did Jesus say, I love your white robes, or did he call them a generation of vipers? Tough love, huh?

Now, in a normal world, if you say something nice about someone, they take it to heart? But in the world of politics, in the world of media spin, will they take that praise and distract you from the more important issues of the day that deserve out attention? Sure, it's easy to be quiet, it's easy to not say anything, it's easy to say I like your smile, your voice, your family, etc? But if the press picks that up, that is all you will hear non stop for a whole week?

That gives the press an entire week to scan the news, and find something else, that is not important, that sounds good, why did you see that yellow shirt he wore? Is that really important, when you are spending in the back ground, more money in one day, then they spent during a whole year during the Viet Nam war? What's more important, cutting your yard, or working on a Noble Peace Prize? Critical spirit, or satire?

Now, is there a difference between teaching, and being critical? Being critical means, there is no hope, it does not matter how long he studies the issue, he is just not going to get it? But using satire as a teaching tool, you begin to work on that person, because they start to see the sharp angles, you start to see the big picture, by observing the satire behind it, how the satire worked, and why? Satire can cut through the distractions, to focus attention on what is really important?

No one likes being schooled, yet, when we look back, do we thank those teachers, for acting so mean to us (when in fact they were harmless), when in reality, they were determined to show us unconditional love? Also, in politics, do those who act critical, simply point out not the faults, but the ignorance, when people intentionally act like the critics are not there? So then satire serves two important purposes, one is to teach, and the other is to communicate the observation that hey, you are ignoring us, and if you think you can act like we don't know it, then acting like nothing is wrong, is worse than the satire?

Talent, on loan, from God? I don't ever plan on having a critical spirit, I have no control over anyone's decisions, but I will use satire to teach, and to communicate, the truth, when, and where ever that message comes to pass? Do we want political grid lock in Congress because we are all too politically correct to say drugs are bad, or gays are not a teachable role model, or other things our grand parents had NO SHAME talking about?

Were the parables of Jesus critical, or were they satire at times? The gifts of discernment, the gifts of wisdom, can not be bought, can they? No, why, you can't be critical, but if you can use sattire, you can say, hey I'm not perfect, but check that out?

You keep tapping into that anger, that frustration, that slight of hand, because, even though we initiated a lot of these policies, we are going to take responsbility, we are not going to blame George Bush, we are not going to blame the Republicans, because that's slight of hand, why, its the oldest play in the book?

HA HA HA HA HA HA HA HA HA HA HA HA HA HA HA HA!

Lets see, a critical spirit would put periods, at the end of sentences, not question marks?

mmmm mmmmmm mmmmm Rush Hudson Limbaugh mmmmm mmmmmm mmmmmm!

I don't mind cleaning up the mess with my big mop, I just need some clean water, good pay, and some time to clean it up?

legal disclaimer:

Universal Legal Disclaimer for the Public Domain, Version 1.5, dated Nov 7th, 2009 (which supersedes all previous versions, to which this new version applies)

The writings, views, expressions expressed by this author to include all written and electronic forms of communication are subject to the following disclaimer and conditions:

a) The views expressed by this website and the author to include all electronic forms of communication are not representative of advertisers, or other third parties that may store and or transmit the messages from this private computer, which you may observe at your own risk, with no liability to the authors, or any party related to transmitting, storing, or any other aspect of the material involved, including email correspondence, which is not necessary to the function of the website, and may or may not be archived due to other limitations incorporated into the licensed email software in use at the time such as automated spam or virus filters. No personal information exchanged will be shared without your consent, or provided to third parties with out the express permission of the parties and, or, individuals concerned.

b) The author(s) of this content and those who may interact with it in various known or unknown electronic methods do not give permission to any third parties to share or provide private personal information who may operate as part of any type of electronic or written communications system, including all parties, who may technically intercept communications due to the nature of network conditions beyond both the author's legal and physical control, unless those communications represent violations of the law, upon which the author, and or web site will cooperate to pursue any legal remedies.

c) The views expressed by the author or website may or may not contain factual information, due to the use of sarcasm or parody. The views may or may not be complete, either by design, to pre-empt being called a liar even if telling the truth, or by error due to typographical, grammer, or other technical communication problems not realized or imagined, or the possibility of views based on false or missing information, or with the intention of being used for entertainment purposes only, and not as a definitive judgment on the actions, character, or reputation of an organization, individual, or groups of individuals, with the intent of communicating with a limited group of people, and not the general public, however no distribution restrictions apply for fair use purposes described by the US Copyright Office, if no other restrictions are present or communicated, with all commercial proceeds associated with the distribution of the content to remain the sole possession of the original author.

d) Any reference to copyrighted material is done in the spirit of fair use, to illustrate the context of a discussion regarding public events for reference purposes that adds to the conversation, for which that discussion constitutes a new and separate piece of intellectual property, for which the referenced copyrighted material can not convey by itself, and that the author reserves the right to retain any profits from the newly created intellectual property. This term also serves to promote the referenced copyrighted material, without necessarily endorsing the material for any particular fitness, use, or purpose, for which the purpose of fair use referral law was created for, through inclusion of a partial, but not whole, body of works that the copyright fair use reference applies, for which the intent of all terms of this disclaimer apply to that reference of a copyrighted work.

e) Any humor if used, is not intended to offend people, and may be designed to apply the principals of peer pressure through reverse examination to accomplish the communication of principals or ideas that consist of traditional or proposed social values that are proven to advance the common good, and are not meant to discredit, disparage or demean any person or entities in any professional or personal manner, by attempting to share through the eyes or opinion of the author, for which it is expected that you read at your own risk, with no liability held to the author or any third parties who may store, transfer, or forward this message to others, in the traditions of free speech, fair use, and to play a positive role in a society that believes that graphically depicting male homosexuals having sex, and other unusual sex acts is considered free speech or that the use of abortion to limit Negros, Latinos, and other races from "spreading the wealth around" as a "matter of privacy" (which the author does not condone).

f) The use of humor is a known ingredient in providing teachable moments, and to validate and even demonstrate artistic expressions that are not shared by others, as demonstrated by many valuable scientific observations that were scoffed at in the past, yet proven to be quite valid decades later, upon which the humor used in all electronic communications by the author are based, in the principals and traditions of free speech and pursuit of happiness, and may not be a representation of others, including God.

g) It is the opinion of the author that you respect people when you consider their views, by reflecting their thoughts or actions against your own, which may include use of language that conveys an emotional depth that is to be imagined, but not enacted through use of language that accurately, or inaccurately describes the situation, circumstance, or idea, which does not imply that any action occur other than the consideration of the thought, for which beyond the author has no control, or liability for the action of the reader as presented in all terms of this diclaimer, and may simply be the venting of emotions with the intent of no consequence by the author to an audience the author assumes will understand the message and intent, and wishes to hear those views.

h) Since all intellectual property, discussions and other communications this disclaimer applies to, either in written, or electronic form, subscribe to the terms described in paragraph (e) and (g) of this disclaimer, under no circumstances are any communications meant to violate the terms of any electronic harassment laws which include the word “harm”, for which the author understands to be limited to the definition of physical harm (not self inflicted mental harm) that requires immediate medical attention based solely or in part by the communications of the author, regardless of whether the author chooses to remain anonymous or not.

i) It is the intention and opinion of the author that History is full of individuals that are not harmed by criticism, and in fact such criticism can motivate and inspire them to prove their critics wrong. Based on this historical evidence, any alleged mental harm amounts to self inflicted injury not treatable by either medical or other professionals (despite the fact that many people live from the profits of lies through gradual illusion, without judicial interference), for which the author has no control over the mental development of any potential reader prior to the discovery or reading of the material for which this disclaimer applies, as evident by the necessity that speech is to be protected by law as determined by the founders of the United States of America, who, in the opinion of the author, wrote the legal framework, which was created by God, not slaves.

j) Additional use of automated anonymous page use tracking computer scripts (web page programs) or advertisements may be licensed by www.google.com, for bandwidth verification, or determination of potential advertisement opportunities subject to all other terms described in this disclaimer.

k) Advertisements that may appear are not necessarily endorsed by the author, either by admission, or by silence, nor are any electronic links that may transport the reader to other web pages, sites, or computers, and such links that may be provided for all or any of the following known or unknown purposes, but not limited to, informational, educational, and for the purpose of giving copy right credit referral information under the terms outlined in the conditions applied to the term "fair use" regarding conversations and print under US Copy Right Law, and for which the author assumes no liability for any particular use, fitness, or legality there of, any link, current, past, or future, which the reader should use at their sole risk, with no liability to the author, or any other party that may store, transmit, or otherwise facilitate use of the material for which this disclaimer applies.

l) It is the opinion of the author that effective 1 December, 2009, the proposed regulations from the FTC violate the first and fifth amendments of the United States Constitution, by infringing through economic affliction the burden without compensation all financial details concerning the communications of both free enterprise and opinion, and other civil rights such as "punishment must be fair" and not at the "discretion" of public officials, or that advertisers are assumed to be guilty of deception when United States law provides that you are innocent before being proven guilty, and are in fact demonstrations that there are current members of Congress that neither understand the spirit of the law our founding fathers made for the United States of America, or understand how they work in the opinion of the author, as of October 10th, 2009, especially in light of anticipated, and hopefully defeated, legislative taxes relating to energy use and the burden of publishers and advertisers to comply with the law and manage the environment, and in light that there are various consumer protection agencies, including the Better Business Bureau, which has free consumer information which preclude the use and need for excessive government regulation that burdens business with obstacles it may sense that it can not overcome without inflicting harm on the business plan or survival ability of the business to provide advertised, goods and or services.

m) Although the content provided meets or exceeds those new requirements to the knowledge of the author, and modifications to version 1.3 or 1.4 of this disclaimer is a result of the opinion of the author that “blogging” is another definition for a potentially infinite number or forms of electronic communication, as such the author will retroactively apply this version, 1.5 to all forms of previous communications, when and wherever possible, as time allows, in order to properly convey the intention of the author and to demonstrate an enthusiasm to comply with the law.

n) Use of this disclaimer for either personal or professional use is permitted with no restrictions. These restrictions or disclaimers do not prohibit the author from pursuing or communicating in a truthful manner, or guarantee that the audience will understand all things as intended.

o) This disclaimer is meant to establish the intent of the author who may participate in message forums, or create other written or electronic forms of communication to comply with current law, and may be revoked without prior notice, due to circumstances beyond the author's control, changes in the law, or for any of the purposes, terms, or conditions that may be in effect or described by this disclaimer, or to changes in this disclaimer that the author may clarify in a revised version of this disclaimer.

p) This disclaimer is attached to this message, and retroactively applies to all previous forms of communication by the author, and is done so because there is no recognized central suppository of a public disclaimer recognized by the Government of the United States to the author, and as such, the legal imperative of the author is to apply this disclaimer to all manner of correspondence as the author seems fit or prudent, so that no misunderstandings occur, or to comply with past, current or future revisions of the law, due to any of, but not limited to, any or all of the terms, partial terms, or combination of terms, of this disclaimer, which is derived from the freedom of speech, for it appears to the author that the zeal of lawmakers to take away free speech outweigh the providence of attaching this disclaimer to all correspondence for which this applies, and any inconvenience for which this presents, is the result of simply complying with the law, and not to inconvenience the reader.

Use of this private web site or web page is at your own risk, for which you agree not to sue the authors or anyone who may publish or share this article (which must include this disclaimer) with or without the consent of the author(s) if you do not agree, you are violating the terms of conditions to view the content, and you may not use or view the content for any purpose. Discussions, and or links to media and (or) resources do not automatically indicate that either the author, this web site, or anyone who discusses the material either endorse the individuals or organizations referenced, either in part, or in whole, and the author's ask the readers to make their own conclusions.

No individual or organization, including CSPAN, Glenn Beck, Fox News, Rush Limbaugh, endorses this web site or the use of their material on this web site at this time, which may be either removed by request or without notice. Use of the material is assumed appropriate for use under the copy right act concerning fair use for discussion, to include artistic expression to demonstrate a particular viewpoint, in a single or group of discussions. Video or film footage may not include the full context of the original publishing video or audio clips, and therefore are not necessarily representative of any referenced individual or organization

Fag.

I'm down to an R75/7 BMW and two Sportsters, a 1975 and a 2005. I sold my 1996 Triumph Daytona 1200 a few years ago, soon after my Ducati 900 Super Sport. My wrists couldn't take the load imposed by the clip on bars anymore. The Norton Atlases were sold to buy a house in '86.

I've owned three 45s, a 62 Panhead, a '78 shovel and a fairly hot Evo that followed a new 1988 1200 Sporty. The vibration on the 1200 was obscene. You literally couldn't cruise at 65 to 75 MPH without loosening your fillings..

Your shameful and rather immature attitude towards Japanese motorcycles is the exact reason why South Park made the show about Harley riders. The Japs put millions of people on Motorcycles who might otherwise not have had the inclination.

The worst Japanese bikes I've owned were a pair of Kawasaki 500 triples. They were called the world's first disposable motorcycle. You had to put new rings in every 12,000 miles and the fuel mileage was obscenely BAD.

My best Japanese bike was a 1975 water cooled Suzuki 750. It used less oil than a four stroke and was still running two years ago. It probably still is, I haven't talked to the owner since my move.

OH no,there are are many of us ,still hanging on to the Jurassic WebTV! The old set top box I am using actually does contain a small hard drive and has been in use for about eleven years. Never had to deal with a virus. Never lost any information either.Great for messages only at this stage, since it is a low bandwith gadjet-restricted to a maximum of 56K. Very slow, but reliable old gizmo.

All of the windows users I know are very secure: if I send a link, they don't DARE to open it...

Used a Mac 1985-2005, now linux.

ham & linux:

If you buy hardware, and linux has the drivers, they will have them forever, cause it's open source. If you buy windows/mac, the drivers last for ? 3 years, and then you need to pay taxes again ;-)

Gee whiz Mike, i'm no trying to be shameful, or immature here. heaven forbid that.
i just don't ever remember you posting about anything other than rice burners. sorry bout that. BTW, i had a Commando-S for way too many years. the dam thing tried many times to kill me. I still got a 65 Bonnie sitting in the garage, one of these days i'll fix those carbs and bring her back to life. and no, it's not for sale. at my age, i should be riding a 3 wheeler anyhow. every time i stop for a stop sign, i remember being 16, and having a 44 tank shifter falling over on me.

took 2 buddies to lift her off me. i still have the pipe burn/ scar on my right leg. the bike was an old cop-cycle, with reverse, and that giant off sprung seat. can't remember the weight, but i believe it was over a 1,000lbs. at the time i was a skinny kid at maybe 120lbs.
so, no contest. guess i never did learn.

The following and thousands more web sites need to be informed of this fact. They all give credit to German and English influences on the design of Japanese vehicles. A few even have the nerve to claim that Harley's two stroke experiences were based on a DKW design, as was the BSA Bantam.

As far as I can tell, any country that can make huge ocean going tankers or battleships powered by monster diesels is more than capable of producing mopeds and motorcycles.

A great benefit produced by this competition is that Harley and others have had to vastly improve their product line. There is no comparison between the 1975 and 2005 Sportsters I own. Everything from the gaskets to the fasteners has been improved.

Rumour has it that a few ex Norton engineers were hired by Harley, resulting in the rubber mounting across the whole range. It's wonderful.

That's true. The Harland and Woolf line of mopeds is something of

They probably do. Then again, as we all know, if it's on the web it's inviolable truth.

I ghost write a radio show on motorcycling. I have to do a great deal of research. I've been through the archives in Milwaukee, and I spend a lot of time at motocycling museums, inspecting documents.

Check with the AMA Motorcycle Hall of Fame, and the Mungenast

You lemmings never cease to amaze. One of the most corrupt pieces of shit in Congress finally does something beneficial for the nation (i.e. dies) and the dumb downed American public gushes forth with the sentimental slop before the carcass is even cold. Really you should wait awhile before beginning the revisionist history project about "Abscam Jack".

The only reason the sleazebag didn't finish "serving" his country in Lewisburg Federal Penitentary instead of the U.S. Congress was because he was a SNITCH who testified against his partners in crime. A THIEF and a RAT FINK who personally engineered the theft of $BILLION$ from hard working Americans to the ruling elite via their military industrial complex to fund their war racket - corporate welfare wrapped in the flag.

But don't take it too hard, your masters will probably name a holiday after him in ten years.

By PETER JACKSON, Associated Press Writer

Murtha was a perennial target of critics of so-called pay-to-play politics. He routinely drew the attention of ethical watchdogs with off-the-floor activities, from his entanglement in the Abscam corruption probe three decades ago to the more recent scrutiny of the connection between special-interest spending known as earmarks and the raising of cash for campaigns.

Murtha became chairman of the House Appropriations defense subcommittee in 1989. The same year Paul Magliocchetti, a former subcommittee staffer, left Capitol Hill to found the now-defunct PMA Group. The lobbying firm, which specialized in obtaining earmarks for defense contractors, was one Murtha's biggest sources of campaign cash.
In 2007 and 2008, Murtha and two fellow Democrats on the subcommittee directed $137 million to defense contractors who were paying PMA to get them government business. Between 1989 and 2009, Murtha collected more than $2.3 million in campaign contributions from PMA's lobbyists and corporate clients, according to the Center for Responsive Politics, which tracks political money.

Shortly after the 2008 election, the FBI raided PMA's offices as part of a criminal investigation. In a separate development in January 2009, FBI agents raided the offices of a defense contractor from Murtha's district — Windber-based Kuchera Defense Systems Inc. — that had received millions of dollars in earmarks sponsored by Murtha while contributing tens of thousands to his campaigns.

A year later, Kuchera was suspended from bidding on government contracts because of allegations that it paid more than $200,000 in kickbacks to another defense contractor.

Around the same time, the House ethics committee was investigating the link between PMA-related campaign contributions and earmarks, but it had not named a subcommittee to look into possible violations by individual lawmakers.
Murtha's critics recall the Abscam corruption probe, in which the FBI caught him on videotape in a 1980 sting operation turning down a $50,000 bribe offer while holding out the possibility that he might take money in the future.
"We do business for a while, maybe I'll be interested and maybe I won't," Murtha said on the tape.
Six congressmen and one senator were convicted in that case. Murtha was not charged, but the government named him as an unindicted co-conspirator and he testified against two other congressmen.

1404. ABC should announce a new series, "Commies, the Next Generation"?

So will Whoopie Goldberg pilot the new series “Commies, the Next Generation”?

I didn't know that the social engineering staff at ABC were so talented? They've actually succeeded in edging a Negro talk show guest into goading us all to believe our civil rights demand to be only exercised in comedy clubs, and therefore, ABC has announced that soon, it will start a new action adventure series, called “Commies, the Next Generation”?

Unbelievable, eh? Since when does satire that illustrates the failings of socialism, the failings of communism, only belong in night clubs where alcoholic beverages are served? Well, is that being retarded, is that retarding your civil rights to free speech, how ever intelligent or not it may be?

So then Whoopie Goldberg is acting retarded, or has she become “retarded”? What is the point of sending kids to mandatory education if they don't even understand their bill of rights? Do you know why the word “retarded” is so successful as a teaching tool? It does not just suggest that what you did is stupid? It suggests that you should examine yourself from the inside out, as if you could see your own DNA, and attempt to discover if some how, the universe itself had re-arranged your molecules in such a fashion as to know render you and the several ounces of mush in your skull obsolescent?

That's why the word “retarded” became so popular, because it expanded on the suggestion that with some little scientific insight (worthless or not) that we have “evolved” our understanding of existence to suggest that being “retarded” was some sort of communicable disease that could in your existence itself result in taking a few steps back down the ladder of “expectations”? So now we do not just have a new word for “Raca” (this is not a new concept folks) but one that added the modern day scientific edge to it?

Now this has nothing to do with those with medical conditions, or rare birth defects? This has to do with the intentional disregard of common sense, and displaying that disregard in such a way as to invite a rebuke from your peers or elders? Remember Whoopie, the trial never ends? Isn't that what Q said?Will mankind be denied existence in the universe, by simply letting him destroy himself?

Is it retarded to not demand that neutral observers are let into the class rooms of Iranians to ensure that hatred is not being taught, or will you ponder if, when, how, or why, they might launch an EMP device into the atmosphere? They sent animals into orbit, ha ha ha ha!

Sure, drink another beer! The next desert storm could result in Israeli troops parking fuel tankers of some sort over their bunkers, and pumping fuel into newly drilled holes since they don't have bunker buster bombs? Or will they just incinerate everyone they can get their hands on, if millions starve with unconventional warfare by the Iranians?

Don't hold your breath ABC, we don't expect you to ask this leadership those questions, let alone the next round of potential elected candidates? In my humble opinion, the word “retarded” is not used enough?

g) It is the opinion of the author that you respect people when you consider their views, by reflecting their thoughts or actions against your own, which may include use of language that conveys an emotional depth that is to be imagined, but not enacted through use of language that accurately, or inaccurately describes the situation, circumstance, or idea, which does not imply that any action occur other than the consideration of the thought, for which beyond the author has no control, or liability for the action of the reader as presented in all terms of this diclaimer, and may simply be the venting of emotions with the intent of no consequence by the author to an audience the author assumes will understand the message and intent, and wishes to hear those views.

h) Since all intellectual property, discussions and other communications this disclaimer applies to, either in written, or electronic form, subscribe to the terms described in paragraph (e) and (g) of this disclaimer, under no circumstances are any communications meant to violate the terms of any electronic harassment laws which include the word “harm”, for which the author understands to be limited to the definition of physical harm (not self inflicted mental harm) that requires immediate medical attention based solely or in part by the communications of the author, regardless of whether the author chooses to remain anonymous or not.

i) It is the intention and opinion of the author that History is full of individuals that are not harmed by criticism, and in fact such criticism can motivate and inspire them to prove their critics wrong. Based on this historical evidence, any alleged mental harm amounts to self inflicted injury not treatable by either medical or other professionals (despite the fact that many people live from the profits of lies through gradual illusion, without judicial interference), for which the author has no control over the mental development of any potential reader prior to the discovery or reading of the material for which this disclaimer applies, as evident by the necessity that speech is to be protected by law as determined by the founders of the United States of America, who, in the opinion of the author, wrote the legal framework, which was created by God, not slaves.

j) Additional use of automated anonymous page use tracking computer scripts (web page programs) or advertisements may be licensed by www.google.com, for bandwidth verification, or determination of potential advertisement opportunities subject to all other terms described in this disclaimer.

l) It is the opinion of the author that effective 1 December, 2009, the proposed regulations from the FTC violate the first and fifth amendments of the United States Constitution, by infringing through economic affliction the burden without compensation all financial details concerning the communications of both free enterprise and opinion, and other civil rights such as "punishment must be fair" and not at the "discretion" of public officials, or that advertisers are assumed to be guilty of deception when United States law provides that you are innocent before being proven guilty, and are in fact demonstrations that there are current members of Congress that neither understand the spirit of the law our founding fathers made for the United States of America, or understand how they work in the opinion of the author, as of October 10th, 2009, especially in light of anticipated, and hopefully defeated, legislative taxes relating to energy use and the burden of publishers and advertisers to comply with the law and manage the environment, and in light that there are various consumer protection agencies, including the Better Business Bureau, which has free consumer information which preclude the use and need for excessive government regulation that burdens business with obstacles it may sense that it can not overcome without inflicting harm on the business plan or survival ability of the business to provide advertised, goods and or services.

m) Although the content provided meets or exceeds those new requirements to the knowledge of the author, and modifications to version 1.3 or 1.4 of this disclaimer is a result of the opinion of the author that “blogging” is another definition for a potentially infinite number or forms of electronic communication, as such the author will retroactively apply this version, 1.5 to all forms of previous communications, when and wherever possible, as time allows, in order to properly convey the intention of the author and to demonstrate an enthusiasm to comply with the law.

n) Use of this disclaimer for either personal or professional use is permitted with no restrictions. These restrictions or disclaimers do not prohibit the author from pursuing or communicating in a truthful manner, or guarantee that the audience will understand all things as intended.

o) This disclaimer is meant to establish the intent of the author who may participate in message forums, or create other written or electronic forms of communication to comply with current law, and may be revoked without prior notice, due to circumstances beyond the author's control, changes in the law, or for any of the purposes, terms, or conditions that may be in effect or described by this disclaimer, or to changes in this disclaimer that the author may clarify in a revised version of this disclaimer.

p) This disclaimer is attached to this message, and retroactively applies to all previous forms of communication by the author, and is done so because there is no recognized central suppository of a public disclaimer recognized by the Government of the United States to the author, and as such, the legal imperative of the author is to apply this disclaimer to all manner of correspondence as the author seems fit or prudent, so that no misunderstandings occur, or to comply with past, current or future revisions of the law, due to any of, but not limited to, any or all of the terms, partial terms, or combination of terms, of this disclaimer, which is derived from the freedom of speech, for it appears to the author that the zeal of lawmakers to take away free speech outweigh the providence of attaching this disclaimer to all correspondence for which this applies, and any inconvenience for which this presents, is the result of simply complying with the law, and not to inconvenience the reader.

Use of this private web site or web page is at your own risk, for which you agree not to sue the authors or anyone who may publish or share this article (which must include this disclaimer) with or without the consent of the author(s) if you do not agree, you are violating the terms of conditions to view the content, and you may not use or view the content for any purpose. Discussions, and or links to media and (or) resources do not automatically indicate that either the author, this web site, or anyone who discusses the material either endorse the individuals or organizations referenced, either in part, or in whole, and the author's ask the readers to make their own conclusions.

No individual or organization, including CSPAN, Glenn Beck, Fox News, Rush Limbaugh, endorses this web site or the use of their material on this web site at this time, which may be either removed by request or without notice. Use of the material is assumed appropriate for use under the copy right act concerning fair use for discussion, to include artistic expression to demonstrate a particular viewpoint, in a single or group of discussions. Video or film footage may not include the full context of the original publishing video or audio clips, and therefore are not necessarily representative of any referenced individual or organization

So if somebody shoots at you, and then they run outside and put their hands in their pockets, looking up and down with a stupid grin on their face, you have reasonable cause to go in there and confiscate their weapons, since apparently they don't know how to use them to prevent crime in their own neighborhood, Mr. Pow Wow?

Mr. "Negotiation"? Just resign, and let those who know how to get things done, done?

legal disclaimer:

Universal Legal Disclaimer for the Public Domain, Version 1.5, dated Nov 7th, 2009 (which supersedes all previous versions, to which this new version applies)

The writings, views, expressions expressed by this author to include all written and electronic forms of communication are subject to the following disclaimer and conditions:

a) The views expressed by this website and the author to include all electronic forms of communication are not representative of advertisers, or other third parties that may store and or transmit the messages from this private computer, which you may observe at your own risk, with no liability to the authors, or any party related to transmitting, storing, or any other aspect of the material involved, including email correspondence, which is not necessary to the function of the website, and may or may not be archived due to other limitations incorporated into the licensed email software in use at the time such as automated spam or virus filters. No personal information exchanged will be shared without your consent, or provided to third parties with out the express permission of the parties and, or, individuals concerned.

b) The author(s) of this content and those who may interact with it in various known or unknown electronic methods do not give permission to any third parties to share or provide private personal information who may operate as part of any type of electronic or written communications system, including all parties, who may technically intercept communications due to the nature of network conditions beyond both the author's legal and physical control, unless those communications represent violations of the law, upon which the author,

c) The views expressed by the author or website may or may not contain factual information, due to the use of sarcasm or parody. The views may or may not be complete, either by design, to pre-empt being called a liar even if telling the truth, or by error due to typographical, grammer, or other technical communication problems not realized or imagined, or the possibility of views based on false or missing information, or with the intention of being used for entertainment purposes only, and not as a definitive judgment on the actions, character, or reputation of an organization, individual, or groups of individuals, with the intent of communicating with a limited group of people, and not the general public, however no distribution restrictions apply for fair use purposes described by the US Copyright Office, if no other restrictions are present or communicated, with all commercial proceeds associated with the distribution of the content to remain the sole possession of the original author.

d) Any reference to copyrighted material is done in the spirit of fair use, to illustrate the context of a discussion regarding public events for reference purposes that adds to the conversation, for which that discussion constitutes a new and separate piece of intellectual property, for which the referenced copyrighted material can not convey by itself, and that the author reserves the right to retain any profits from the newly created intellectual property. This term also serves to promote the referenced copyrighted material, without necessarily endorsing the material for any particular fitness, use, or purpose, for which the purpose of fair use referral law was created for, through inclusion of a partial, but not whole, body of works that the copyright fair use reference applies, for which the intent of all terms of this disclaimer apply to that reference of a copyrighted work.

e) Any humor if used, is not intended to offend people, and may be designed to apply the principals of peer pressure through reverse examination to accomplish the communication of principals or ideas that consist of traditional or proposed social values that are proven to advance the common good, and are not meant to discredit, disparage or demean any person or entities in any professional or personal manner, by attempting to share through the eyes or opinion of the author, for which it is expected that you read at your own risk, with no liability held to the author or any third parties who may store, transfer, or forward this message to others, in the traditions of free speech, fair use, and to play a positive role in a society that believes that graphically depicting male homosexuals having sex, and other unusual sex acts is considered free speech or that the use of abortion to limit Negros, Latinos, and other races from "spreading the wealth around" as a "matter of privacy" (which the author does not condone).

f) The use of humor is a known ingredient in providing teachable moments, and to validate and even demonstrate artistic expressions that are not shared by others, as demonstrated by many valuable scientific observations that were scoffed at in the past, yet proven to be quite valid decades later, upon which the humor used in all electronic communications by the author are based, in the principals and traditions of free speech and pursuit of happiness, and may not be a representation of others, including God.

l) It is the opinion of the author that effective 1 December, 2009, the proposed regulations from the FTC violate the first and fifth amendments of the United States Constitution, by infringing through economic affliction the burden without compensation all financial details concerning the communications of both free enterprise and opinion, and other civil rights such as "punishment must be fair" and not at the "discretion" of public officials, or that advertisers are assumed to be guilty of deception when United States law provides that you are innocent before being proven guilty, and are in fact demonstrations that there are current members of Congress that neither understand the spirit of the law our founding fathers made for the United States of America, or understand how they work in the opinion of the author, as of October 10th, 2009, especially in light of anticipated, and hopefully defeated, legislative taxes relating to energy use and the burden of publishers and advertisers to comply with the law and manage the environment, and in light that there are various consumer protection agencies, including the Better Business Bureau, which has free consumer information which preclude the use and need for excessive government regulation that burdens business with obstacles it may sense that it can not overcome without inflicting harm on the business plan or survival ability of the business to provide advertised, goods and or services.

Well, everybody has an opinion...and one is as good as the next.

Too bad those Norton engineers couldn't fix the ROOT CAUSE of the vibration rather than using the band-aid of rubber mountings. (And you could always tell where a Norton had been -- just follow the trail of parts that vibrated off). Other than that, Nortons were very nice bikes.

Finally, just admit that the Japanese know how to make a great bike. My early 70s Honda CB-750 four cylinder was as smooth as an electric motor compared to my mid-70s BMW 750, much less to a Harley of the same era that would shake your teeth out.

Your mileage may vary.

I find it hard to believe that anyone actually thinks that the NSA can't hack a MAC! If you click on the link below, you'll see that ZDNET Australia announced that someone had hacked OS-X IN UNDER 30 MINUTES during a contest in which a Swedish Mac enthusiast issued a challenge after setting his Mac as a server.

http://www.zdnet.com.au/news/security/soa/Mac-OS-X-hacked-under-30-minutes/0,130061744,139241748,00.htm?omnRef=http://www.google.com/url?sa=t&source=web&ct=res&cd=2&ved=0CA4QFjAB&url=http://www.zdnet.com.au/news/security/soa/Mac-OS-X-hacked-under-30-minutes/0,130061744,139241748,00.htm&rct=j&q=the%20NSA%20has%20never%20hacked%20a%20MAC&ei=m6dwS6f6EYfQtAOfuMWbCA&usg=AFQjCNFYsWU2uz99QQg40YZCpOfAU0doOQ

By the way, that was in February of 2006, just under four years ago!
I asked a couple of IT people that I work with, and they confirm that OS-X is nowhere near as safe as many believe it to be. And, as the owner of an iPhone, I don't keep anything more personal than my contact list on it. It too is vulnerable!

legal disclaimer:

Universal Legal Disclaimer for the Public Domain, Version 1.5, dated Nov 7th, 2009 (which supersedes all previous versions, to which this new version applies)

a) The views expressed by this website and the author to include all electronic forms of communication are not representative of advertisers, or other third parties that may store and or transmit the messages from this private computer, which you may observe at your own risk, with no liability to the authors, or any party related to transmitting, storing, or any other aspect of the material involved, including email correspondence, which is not necessary to the function of the website, and may or may not be archived due to other limitations incorporated into the licensed email software in use at the time such as automated spam or virus filters. No personal information exchanged will be shared without your consent, or provided to third parties with out the express permission of the parties and, or, individuals concerned.

b) The author(s) of this content and those who may interact with it in various known or unknown electronic methods do not give permission to any third parties to share or provide private personal information who may operate as part of any type of electronic or written communications system, including all parties, who may technically intercept communications due to the nature of network conditions beyond both the author's legal and physical control, unless those communications represent violations of the law, upon which the author, and or web site will cooperate to pursue any legal remedies.

c) The views expressed by the author or website may or may not contain factual information, due to the use of sarcasm or parody. The views may or may not be complete, either by design, to pre-empt being called a liar even if telling the truth, or by error due to typographical, grammer, or other technical communication problems not realized or imagined, or the possibility of views based on false or missing information, or with the intention of being used for entertainment purposes only, and not as a definitive judgment on the actions, character, or reputation of an organization, individual, or groups of individuals, with the intent of communicating with a limited group of people, and not the general public, however no distribution restrictions apply for fair use purposes described by the US Copyright Office, if no other restrictions are present or communicated, with all commercial proceeds associated with the distribution of the content to remain the sole possession of the original author.

d) Any reference to copyrighted material is done in the spirit of fair use, to illustrate the context of a discussion regarding public events for reference purposes that adds to the conversation, for which that discussion constitutes a new and separate piece of intellectual property, for which the referenced copyrighted material can not convey by itself, and that the author reserves the right to retain any profits from the newly created intellectual property. This term also serves to promote the referenced copyrighted material, without necessarily endorsing the material for any particular fitness, use, or purpose, for which the purpose of fair use referral law was created for, through inclusion of a partial, but not whole, body of works that the copyright fair use reference applies, for which the intent of all terms of this disclaimer apply to that reference of a copyrighted work.

e) Any humor if used, is not intended to offend people, and may be designed to apply the principals of peer pressure through reverse examination to accomplish the communication of principals or ideas that consist of traditional or proposed social values that are proven to advance the common good, and are not meant to discredit, disparage or demean any person or entities in any professional or personal manner, by attempting to share through the eyes or opinion of the author, for which it is expected that you read at your own risk, with no liability held to the author or any third parties who may store, transfer, or forward this message to others, in the traditions of free speech, fair use, and to play a positive role in a society that believes that graphically depicting male homosexuals having sex, and other unusual sex acts is considered free speech or that the use of abortion to limit Negros, Latinos, and other races from "spreading the wealth around" as a "matter of privacy" (which the author does not condone).

f) The use of humor is a known ingredient in providing teachable moments, and to validate and even demonstrate artistic expressions that are not shared by others, as demonstrated by many valuable scientific observations that were scoffed at in the past, yet proven to be quite valid decades later, upon which the humor used in all electronic communications by the author are based, in the principals and traditions of free speech and pursuit of happiness, and may not be a representation of others, including God.

g) It is the opinion of the author that you respect people when you consider their views, by reflecting their thoughts or actions against your own, which may include use of language that conveys an emotional depth that is to be imagined, but not enacted through use of language that accurately, or inaccurately describes the situation, circumstance, or idea, which does not imply that any action occur other than the consideration of the thought, for which beyond the author has no control, or liability for the action of the reader as presented in all terms of this diclaimer, and may simply be the venting of emotions with the intent of no consequence by the author to an audience the author assumes will understand the message and intent, and wishes to hear those views.

j) Additional use of automated anonymous page use tracking computer scripts (web page programs) or advertisements may be licensed by www.google.com, for bandwidth verification, or determination of potential advertisement opportunities subject to all other terms described in this disclaimer.

k) Advertisements that may appear are not necessarily endorsed by the author, either by admission, or by silence, nor are any electronic links that may transport the reader to other web pages, sites, or

computers, and such links that may be provided for all or any of the following known or unknown purposes, but not limited to, informational, educational, and for the purpose of giving copy right credit referral information under the terms outlined in the conditions applied to the term "fair use" regarding conversations and print under US Copy Right Law, and for which the author assumes no liability for any particular use, fitness, or legality there of, any link, current, past, or future, which the reader should use at their sole risk, with no liability to the author, or any other party that may store, transmit, or otherwise facilitate use of the material for which this disclaimer applies.

l) It is the opinion of the author that effective 1 December, 2009, the proposed regulations from the FTC violate the first and fifth amendments of the United States Constitution, by infringing through economic affliction the burden without compensation all financial details concerning the communications of both free enterprise and opinion, and other civil rights such as "punishment must be fair" and not at the "discretion" of public officials, or that advertisers are assumed to be guilty of deception when United States law provides that you are innocent before being proven guilty, and are in fact demonstrations that there are current members of Congress that neither understand the spirit of the law our founding fathers made for the United States of America, or understand how they work in the opinion of the author, as of October 10th, 2009, especially in light of anticipated, and hopefully defeated, legislative taxes relating to energy use and the burden of publishers and advertisers to comply with the law and manage the environment, and in light that there are various consumer protection agencies, including the Better Business Bureau, which has free consumer information which preclude the use and need for excessive government regulation that burdens business with obstacles it may sense that it can not overcome without inflicting harm on the business plan or survival ability of the business to provide advertised, goods and or services.

m) Although the content provided meets or exceeds those new requirements to the knowledge of the author, and modifications to version 1.3 or 1.4 of this disclaimer is a result of the opinion of the author that “blogging” is another definition for a potentially infinite number or forms of electronic communication, as such the author will retroactively apply this version, 1.5 to all forms of previous communications, when and wherever possible, as time allows, in order to properly convey the intention of the author and to demonstrate an enthusiasm to comply with the law.

o) This disclaimer is meant to establish the intent of the author who may participate in message forums, or create other written or electronic forms of communication to comply with current law, and may be revoked without prior notice, due to circumstances beyond the author's control, changes in the law, or for any of the purposes, terms, or conditions that may be in effect or described by this disclaimer, or to changes in this disclaimer that the author may clarify in a revised version of this disclaimer.

p) This disclaimer is attached to this message, and retroactively applies to all previous forms of communication by the author, and is done so because there is no recognized central suppository of a public disclaimer recognized by the Government of the United States to the author, and as such, the legal imperative of the author is to apply this disclaimer to all manner of correspondence as the author seems fit or prudent, so that no misunderstandings occur, or to comply with past, current or future revisions of the law, due to any of, but not limited to, any or all of the terms, partial terms, or combination of terms, of this disclaimer, which is derived from the freedom of speech, for it appears to the author that the zeal of lawmakers to take away free speech outweigh the providence of attaching this disclaimer to all correspondence for which this applies, and any inconvenience for which this presents, is the result of simply complying with the law, and not to inconvenience the reader.

Use of this private web site or web page is at your own risk, for which you agree not to sue the authors or anyone who may publish or share this article (which must include this disclaimer) with or without the consent of the author(s) if you do not agree, you are violating the terms of conditions to view the content, and you may not use or view the content for any purpose. Discussions, and or links to media and (or) resources do not automatically indicate that either the author, this web site, or anyone who discusses the material either endorse the individuals or organizations referenced, either in part, or in whole, and the author's ask the readers to make their own conclusions.

No individual or organization, including CSPAN, Glenn Beck, Fox News, Rush Limbaugh, endorses this web site or the use of their material on this web site at this time, which may be either removed by request or without notice. Use of the material is assumed appropriate for use under the copy right act concerning fair use for discussion, to include artistic expression to demonstrate a particular viewpoint, in a single or group of discussions. Video or film footage may not include the full context of the original publishing video or audio clips, and therefore are not necessarily representative of any referenced individual or organization

So is whatever you're on readily available? I just wanted to know so I could tell the kids, "See what happens to you when you take
_____?"

If you're naturally addleheaded, my condolences.

Agreed considering how much hatred the Indian government has for the the Pakistani government. I doubt if the US would shut down a station over a threat from the Taliban.

And they could simply broadcast from Afghanistan into NW Pakistan without much trouble.

No, the Bush Commies who borrowed from Amerika's enemies will star in it.

Both Macs and Linux can get worms, viruses, and trojans just as easily as a Windows system. The difference is, few write them targeting those those systems.

Very easy to put in the following line in ANY script in Linux, and bye bye Linux.

sudo rm -rf /

I go into the Linux support IRC forum a lot and people are always running scripts without understanding them. I could with ease put that script and get people to do that to their system in no time flat.

What a stupid statement. The harm he did to the nation continues and will endure, even after the maggots have devoured his stinking corpse. Hard working, honest Americans will be forced to pay the tab "Sleazy Jack" and his military industrial complex masters ran up for generations to come.

As I said, you lemmings never cease to amaze - keep posting please. There is something perversely satisfying about seeing imbeciles get what they deserve.

By the by, Ultra liberal lefty Keith Olberman just praised the scumbag on his television show while ultra conservative righty's on Fox News were slobbering on about what a patriot "Abscam Jack" was. And the dumbed down American public still falls for the good cop/bad cop, right/left, LIbEral/CONservative charade the corrupt corporate propagandists spoon feeds them nightly. As I said, you lemmings...

P.S. Pursuing your logic, wasn't Lee Harvey Oswald a Marine? As I said, you lemmings ...lol... the gift that never stops giving... LMAO!!!

You're comparing a United States Congressman to Lee Harvey Oswald.

Makes as much sense as comparing John Wayne Gacy to Larry Harmon.

Speaking of logic.

Yeah I know, I dismissed the Warren Commission report as a cover-up

Not to worry, it's likely your wet dream will come true. The ruling elite will engineer her "election" to the Presidency (if not in 2012, then 2016). She's exactly the type of useful idiot they love to use as their sock puppet. They are undoubtedly working feverishly to find an unelectable dolt to run against her whenever her time comes. Maybe they can bribe Bob Dole to switch parties so he can play the role of Democrat "opposition" in the election, thereby creating the illusion that you lemmings had a say in the matter. After all he did it so well when they decided Slick Willie Clinton was to be their sock puppet in

Kim Elliot does state it is true, but only the Pushto MW transmission directed at NW Frontier Province. The Peshawar Urdu language FM is not affected. As our long time contributor RHF has stated last year, Radio Deewa had a program on 9370 KHz. How would the Taliban know where it comes from?

My pleasure.

It was certainly a bust here. The weather dorks were screaming
'one foot of snow by morning' for the last 24 hours like it was a hundred year storm. Barely dusted the shingles on the roof.

Have these people never seen Winter before?

I had the HTS 7100 version. It had a built-in satellite receiver. This Intelligent? She can see the moon from her back yard so that makes her an astronaut? She can see Russia, so that gives her International Relations credentials? Oh, sorry, ignore that one. It was a damned lie anyway -- she never was in the part of Alaska where you could see Russia.

And while we're on the subject of Failin' Palin the Quitter, everyone's favorite MILF, let me ask a sincere question about her (and others) that are perpetually whining about Obama's use of the Teleprompter.

Ronnie Reagan used it regularly.

Bush #1 used it regularly.

Bush #2 used it regularly.

EVERY president of both parties has used Teleprompters for the last 30 YEARS.

So why is she (and others) always whining about it????

http://www.cnn.com/2010/TECH/01/26/haiti.flying.radio/?hpt=T2

Sixty miles west of Port-au-Prince, Haiti, an Air Force C-130 makes slow and lazy ovals over the Golfe de la Gonzave, a 264-foot weighted wire dangling from its belly like a plumb line.
This is Commando Solo, a radio station in the sky. The long wire, kept vertical by a 500-pound lead weight, is helping transmit an AM radio signal to the people of Haiti. Four other antenna on the wings and fuselage are sending FM signals.
The U.S. government is using Commando Solo to deliver news and information to the survivors of the January 12 earthquake. During much of the day, the plane relays live broadcasts of Voice of America news call-in shows in Creole, the native tongue of Haiti.
During lulls in the VOA programming, it sends pre-recorded public service announcements, including advice on sanitation, what to do when encountering a dead body, and a warning from the Haitian government not to attempt dangerous and illegal ocean crossings to Florida in small boats.
iReporter shares view of Haiti from the sky
None of the 10-member crew aboard Commander Solo speaks Creole. But the technician who monitors the broadcast says he nonetheless can get a sense of the impact of the quake.
"You can hear in people's voices a lot of emotion, sometimes a little bit of frustration, sometimes really anxiety," said Brian. (The Air Force asked CNN to identify crew members only by first name and rank.)
"We hear a lot of people calling in trying to check in with their relatives and find out where they're at. And so it's pretty interesting just to hear it, even though I don't understand the language, the message really does come through," he said.
Haiti's missing and found | Are you there?
Commando Solo, part of the Pennsylvania Air National Guard, has engaged in special operations in Afghanistan, Iraq and other trouble spots around the world. The Haiti mission is a rare mission focused on humanitarian relief.
Video: Plane broadcasts radio to Haiti RELATED TOPICS
Haiti
U.S. Air Force
Radio
"I feel it's a very important mission. I feel very proud that we're a part of it," said Brian.
The plane's pilot, David, echoes the sentiment.
"I'm honored to be here. I mean anything we can do to actually help these people, I'm glad to do."

To insure that their message is being received, the Department of Defense has handed out tens of thousands of portable radios in Haiti. The radios are both solar and hand-crank operated, and don't need batteries.
Kathy, a first lieutenant and the mission control chief on the flight, says the plane is an effective way to communicate with the public in disasters.
"Anyone can turn on a radio, tune it up," she said. "We're able to reach all of Haiti right now with our message."
One of those messages is a dire warning from Raymond Joseph, Haiti's ambassador to the United States.
"Listen, don't rush on boats to leave the country," Joseph says in Creole. "If you do that, we'll all have even worse problems. Because I'll be honest with you: If you think you will reach the U.S. and all the doors will be wide open to you, that's not at all the case.
"And they will intercept you right on the water and send you back home where you came from."
U.S. Coast Guard spokesman Lt. Cmdr. Christopher O'Neil said there is no evidence of people fleeing Haiti for Florida, and officials do not expect a mass migration. Previous mass migrations were caused by geopolitical turmoil, not by natural disasters, O'Neil said.
In addition, there is a large U.S. government presence on the ground in Haiti, on the water, and in the air -- which is likely to deter migrants, authorities say.
Commando Solo is part of that presence.
Altogether, the Pennsylvania guard unit has three Commando Solo planes, two of which are deployed to the Haiti mission.
During the first week of operation, missions lasted about eight hours, but the flights have since been lengthened to 14 hours, allowing 10 hours a day of broadcast time. The flights are so long it requires aerial refueling of the plane.
The airplane flew an estimated 3,200 miles on Saturday, most of it in a loop above Haitian waters.
Commando Solo crew members say they are uncertain how long they will continue operations in Haiti. Several commercial radio stations damaged by the quake have resumed operations.
But they say their efforts are worthwhile.
"When people think of the military they think about going out, blowing things up, destroying," said Barry. "We're at the other end of it. We are there to assist people, to help people, to save people."

U S A / HAITI
Commando Solo broadcasting to Haiti on 1030 kHz AM.
The U.S. military has begun airborne broadcasts as part of the relief effort to help earthquake victims in Haiti. Broadcasts are conducted by "Commando Solo" aircraft of the Air Force Special Operations Command's 193rd Special Operations Wing, based in Pennsylvania.
According to the U.S. Department of Defense, AM transmissions are aired on 1030 kHz AM, as well as on 92.4 and 104.1 MHz FM. In coordination with the government of Haiti, the U.S. Joint Task Force-Haiti (JTF-Haiti) is broadcasting news and information on public health, safety and aid distribution. CNN reports that also messages discouraging Haitians from trying to flee to the United States have been aired. CNN, citing U.S. authorities, says that broadcasts last five hours daily, but no schedule has been published.

Commando Solo's frequency of 1030 kHz is the same as that of Radio Ginen in the Haitian capital Port-au-Prince. The office building of Radio Tele Ginen collapsed in the earthquake, and it remains unclear whether 1030 kHz is still on the air.
Jim Solatie and Håkan Sundman in Finland were the first DXers to pick up Commando Solo tentatively on January 19 on 1030 kHz, with a relay of Voice of America programming.

According to the 193rd SOW, three C-130 aircraft are involved, but only one serves as a flying radio station, while the other two transport cargo. The aircraft are "staged at locations outside the devastated area," says a press release by the 193rd SOW. In practise this would most likely mean Guantánamo or Puerto Rico. The aircraft left their home base on January 14 and 15.

The Air Force is also delivering 50,000 hand-held receivers for distribution to survivors of the recent earthquake. The receivers are distributed by Joint Task Force Haiti. The small emergency radios are both solar-powered and hand-cranked and don't require batteries.

It's starting to come down fairly steadily, now. Should amount to a nice cover. I'll be puttting an orange flag on the dog's tail so the coyotes can find him more easily in the drifts.

Truth is, the snowplow has taken out more mailboxes than it has snow, this week.

At least that keeps the highway department busy.

I think it is wise to objectively remember and learn from the mistakes that each generation, each person makes. Every person makes good and bad decisions and choices in his/her life. Murtha was one of these, one among billions. To say he was an honorable Marine and an occasionally dishonest politician in the same breath is truthful and objective, and thus does not dishonor his memory. Both things are worth remembering about the man, both provide important character studies and lessons for those that follow, and neither should be hidden nor forgotten.

My snail mail March 2010 Popular Mechanics magazine showed up here this morning.On page 14, Solo Act, it says,,,

New Forensic Analysis Shoots A Hole In A Kennedy Assassination Theory.By Alex Hutchinson.
Digital forensic tools have added to the evidence that Lee Harvey Oswald was a lone gunner rather than part of a conspiracy to kill President John F. Kennedy.Hany Farid, director of the Neukom Institute for Computational Science at Dartmouth College, analyzed a famous photo of Oswald that some say must have been doctored, because the shadows under Oswald's nose and behind his body appear to be caused by different light sources.However, Farid found no sign of tampering when he measured for inconsistencies in the image's underlying pixels.He also created a 3D image of Oswald that demonstrated that both shadows could have been made by the sun at the time Oswald's wife took the photo.Farid says that the image would be hard to fake today, and likely impossible using 1963 technology.

And I SAY, Hany Farid is FULL of SH.T!!! Photo film negatives are Easy to fake.

Make no mistake. I didn't like the guy. I didn't care for his politics. And there was quite a shadow over his public service career relating to his ethics.

That said, he served as a Marine. No mean accomplishment, there.
And he was elected to the Congress. And though I occasionally question his integrity, he was certainly no Rod Blagojevich.

But the man is now dead. He can do no harm. He can hurt no one.
He can have little influence. To bash the man, now, is pointless.
And as you correctly point out, Bruce, there are lessons to be learned and truths to be remembered.

Oh for the days of yore! The Cuban Missile crisis when the world came dangerously close to incinerating itself with nuclear missiles...when women had few rights and worked for half the pay of men even though performing the same work...disenfranchised blacks who were not permitted to vote even though they were citizens and paid taxes...forced conscription into the military to become cannon fodder for the war profiteers...ah yes, utopia lost indeed!

Isn't it interesting how Mr. "Drifter" exposes himself as the moronic racist he is without even knowing he is doing so. The sad part is that he and his ilk deny until their last breath that they are ignorant chauvanistic racists (he's probably a church going "Christian" to boot). I almost feel some sympathy for the old fart, after reading some of the drivel he has posted it is clear he doesn't have much gray matter left to work with. I suspect he ingested way too many drugs while in Vietnam back in the "good old days" or perhaps inhaled too much agent orange. Either way, he's a very sad case.

To my DXplorer friends--

It is my sad duty to inform you that yesterday John Bryant fell from a ladder and received injuries that resulted in his death this morning. As you are, I am shocked--John was not only one of my best friends but also a writing partner and travel buddy. As I find out details on arrangements I will keep you posted. Please raise a glass to John--we have all lost a valued friend and colleague.

Harold Cones
(via Horacio A. Nigro, DXLD)

After 8 hours of trying to work through this loss of my friend and colleague of over 25 years, I still find it difficult to write this, but I must, for John's sake and the wonderful memories.

John and I met and instantly hit it off in the mid 80's through involvement in Fine Tuning. He's the only guy that could ever convince me that I had something worthwhile to contribute to the hobby, even on the technical side of it, and a techie I'm not! That was evidenced by his volunteering me to participate in a jointly edited article (with John Clark) for one of Fine Tuning's Proceeding ventures...we wrote about the JRC NRD-515.

First time we met was at my house way out in the boondocks in north-central Oklahoma (9 miles NE of Newkirk, Oklahoma) in about 1985 I think (maybe 1986). He, Mitch Sams, and Glenn Hauser all came up and we spent the next 6 or 7 hours cussing and discussing the radio hobby. That was back when there were SO many great SW target stations to try for. Glenn brought his new (at that time) slides from his recent vacation to Hong Kong, and I recall he and John discussing some of the finer points of Chinese architecture...that was John's profession-architecture...John studied the Chinese forms of the profession by going to China on more than one occasion I believe. He was very intrigued with the Eastern styles. Mitch and I just said "uh-huh" and "yea", that sort of thing. We didn't want to sound stoopid or anything.

John and I always had a non-declared competition going on it seemed. Although neither of us ever declared war on the other, it was, at times, a state of war. Back in the 80's and first half of the 90's we were competing for the most Indonesians heard and verified on SW. More recently we had a competition for the XE stations on MW. A typical conversation between us sometimes included expletives that could lead some to believe we hated each other. That was certainly not the case! How he and I ever got that going is beyond me. I think that we just enjoyed challenging each other to extend oneself to the limit! That's the best way I can put it. John just had a natural ability to bring out the best in other people. God bless his heart for that! I will never ever forget what he helped me discover about myself. Challenged I was by John's influence. Thank you, John, for helping me find out for myself that I can do much more than I thought possible.

Most recently, John introduced me to ultralight DX'ing. I wasn't at first really keen on the idea, but after he personally brought me a Sony SRF-59 which I still am using today, I began to get the DX'ing bug again after a 13 year (more or less) hiatus in the hobby. Once again it was John that got to me to get off my butt and do a little writing about the hobby. Like him, I haven't had this much fun in radio in many years. As John would put it, "...having a barrel of fun..." Once again I have to say, "Thank you, John!"

I could write much more than I already have. I will leave it at what's been typed here. Tomorrow a letter will be sent to Linda, who courageously tolerated more than one DX'er at their place through the years. She's a gem just as John was!

Thanks, John, for always being such a wonderful friend. I will miss you Buddy.
Until we meet again I will remain,
Your Friend,
Kirk Allen

Such sad news to wake up to. RIP John.

Universal Legal Disclaimer for the Public Domain, Version 1.5, dated Nov 7th, 2009 (which supersedes all previous versions, to which this new version applies)

The writings, views, expressions expressed by this author to include all written and electronic forms of communication are subject to the following disclaimer and conditions:

a) The views expressed by this website and the author to include all electronic forms of communication are not representative of advertisers, or other third parties that may store and or transmit the messages from this private computer, which you may observe at your own risk, with no liability to the authors, or any party related to transmitting, storing, or any other aspect of the material involved, including email correspondence, which is not necessary to the function of the website, and may or may not be archived due to other limitations incorporated into the licensed email software in use at the time such as automated spam or virus filters. No personal information exchanged will be shared without your consent, or provided to third parties with out the express permission of the parties and, or, individuals concerned.

b) The author(s) of this content and those who may interact with it in various known or unknown electronic methods do not give permission to any third parties to share or provide private personal information who may operate as part of any type of electronic or written communications system, including all parties, who may technically intercept communications due to the nature of network conditions beyond both the author's legal and physical control, unless those communications represent violations of the law, upon which the author,

c) The views expressed by the author or website may or may not contain factual information, due to the use of sarcasm or parody. The views may or may not be complete, either by design, to pre-empt being called a liar even if telling the truth, or by error due to typographical, grammer, or other technical communication problems not realized or imagined, or the possibility of views based on false or missing information, or with the intention of being used for entertainment purposes only, and not as a definitive judgment on the actions, character, or reputation of an organization, individual, or groups of individuals, with the intent of communicating with a limited group of people, and not the general public, however no distribution restrictions apply for fair use purposes described by the US Copyright Office, if no other restrictions are present or communicated, with all commercial proceeds associated with the distribution of the content to remain the sole possession of the original author.

d) Any reference to copyrighted material is done in the spirit of fair use, to illustrate the context of a discussion regarding public events for reference purposes that adds to the conversation, for which that discussion constitutes a new and separate piece of intellectual property, for which the referenced copyrighted material can not convey by itself, and that the author reserves the right to retain any profits from the newly created intellectual property. This term also serves to promote the referenced copyrighted material, without necessarily endorsing the material for any particular fitness, use, or purpose, for which the purpose of fair use referral law was created for, through inclusion of a partial, but not whole, body of works that the copyright fair use reference applies, for which the intent of all terms of this disclaimer apply to that reference of a copyrighted work.

e) Any humor if used, is not intended to offend people, and may be designed to apply the principals of peer pressure through reverse examination to accomplish the communication of principals or ideas that consist of traditional or proposed social values that are proven to advance the common good, and are not meant to discredit, disparage or demean any person or entities in any professional or personal manner, by attempting to share through the eyes or opinion of the author, for which it is expected that you read at your own risk, with no liability held to the author or any third parties who may store, transfer, or forward this message to others, in the traditions of free speech, fair use, and to play a positive role in a society that believes that graphically depicting male homosexuals having sex, and other unusual sex acts is considered free speech or that the use of abortion to limit Negros, Latinos, and other races from "spreading the wealth around" as a "matter of privacy" (which the author does not condone).

f) The use of humor is a known ingredient in providing teachable moments, and to validate and even demonstrate artistic expressions that are not shared by others, as demonstrated by many valuable scientific observations that were scoffed at in the past, yet proven to be quite valid decades later, upon which the humor used in all electronic communications by the author are based, in the principals and traditions of free speech and pursuit of happiness, and may not be a representation of others, including God.

g) It is the opinion of the author that you respect people when you consider their views, by reflecting their thoughts or actions against your own, which may include use of language that conveys an emotional depth that is to be imagined, but not enacted through use of language that accurately, or inaccurately describes the situation, circumstance, or idea, which does not imply that any action occur other than the consideration of the thought, for which beyond the author has no control, or liability for the action of the reader as presented in all terms of this diclaimer, and may simply be the venting of emotions with the intent of no consequence by the author to an audience the author assumes will understand the message and intent, and wishes to hear those views.

h) Since all intellectual property, discussions and other communications this disclaimer applies to, either in written, or electronic form, subscribe to the terms described in paragraph (e) and (g) of this disclaimer, under no circumstances are any communications meant to violate the terms of any electronic harassment laws which include the word “harm”, for which the author understands to be limited to the definition of physical harm (not self inflicted mental harm) that requires immediate medical attention based solely or in part by the communications of the author, regardless of whether the author chooses to remain anonymous or not.

j) Additional use of automated anonymous page use tracking computer scripts (web page programs) or advertisements may be licensed by www.google.com, for bandwidth verification, or determination of potential advertisement opportunities subject to all other terms described in this disclaimer.

k) Advertisements that may appear are not necessarily endorsed by the author, either by admission, or by silence, nor are any electronic links that may transport the reader to other web pages, sites, or computers, and such links that may be provided for all or any of the following known or unknown purposes, but not limited to, informational, educational, and for the purpose of giving copy right credit referral information under the terms outlined in the conditions applied to the term "fair use" regarding conversations and print under US Copy Right Law, and for which the author assumes no liability for any particular use, fitness, or legality there of, any link, current, past, or future, which the reader should use at their sole risk, with no liability to the author, or any other party that may store, transmit, or otherwise facilitate use of the material for which this disclaimer applies.

l) It is the opinion of the author that effective 1 December, 2009, the proposed regulations from the FTC violate the first and fifth amendments of the United States Constitution, by infringing through economic affliction the burden without compensation all financial details concerning the communications of both free enterprise and opinion, and other civil rights such as "punishment must be fair" and not at the "discretion" of public officials, or that advertisers are assumed to be guilty of deception when United States law provides that you are innocent before being proven guilty, and are in fact demonstrations that there are current members of Congress that neither understand the spirit of the law our founding fathers made for the United States of America, or understand how they work in the opinion of the author, as of October 10th, 2009, especially in light of anticipated, and hopefully defeated, legislative taxes relating to energy use and the burden of publishers and advertisers to comply with the law and manage the environment, and in light that there are various consumer protection agencies, including the Better Business Bureau, which has free consumer information which preclude the use and need for excessive government regulation that burdens business with obstacles it may sense that it can not overcome without inflicting harm on the business plan or survival ability of the business to provide advertised, goods and or services.

m) Although the content provided meets or exceeds those new requirements to the knowledge of the author, and modifications to version 1.3 or 1.4 of this disclaimer is a result of the opinion of the author that “blogging” is another definition for a potentially infinite number or forms of electronic communication, as such the author will retroactively apply this version, 1.5 to all forms of previous communications, when and wherever possible, as time allows, in order to properly convey the intention of the author and to demonstrate an enthusiasm to comply with the law.

n) Use of this disclaimer for either personal or professional use is permitted with no restrictions. These restrictions or disclaimers do not prohibit the author from pursuing or communicating in a truthful manner, or guarantee that the audience will understand all things as intended.

o) This disclaimer is meant to establish the intent of the author who may participate in message forums, or create other written or electronic forms of communication to comply with current law, and may be revoked without prior notice, due to circumstances beyond the author's control, changes in the law, or for any of the purposes, terms, or conditions that may be in effect or described by this disclaimer, or to changes in this disclaimer that the author may clarify in a revised version of this disclaimer.

p) This disclaimer is attached to this message, and retroactively applies to all previous forms of communication by the author, and is done so because there is no recognized central suppository of a public disclaimer recognized by the Government of the United States to the author, and as such, the legal imperative of the author is to apply this disclaimer to all manner of correspondence as the author seems fit or prudent, so that no misunderstandings occur, or to comply with past, current or future revisions of the law, due to any of, but not limited to, any or all of the terms, partial terms, or combination of terms, of this disclaimer, which is derived from the freedom of speech, for it appears to the author that the zeal of lawmakers to take away free speech outweigh the providence of attaching this disclaimer to all correspondence for which this applies, and any inconvenience for which this presents, is the result of simply complying with the law, and not to inconvenience the reader.

Use of this private web site or web page is at your own risk, for which you agree not to sue the authors or anyone who may publish or share this article (which must include this disclaimer) with or without the consent of the author(s) if you do not agree, you are violating the terms of conditions to view the content, and you may not use or view the content for any purpose. Discussions, and or links to media and (or) resources do not automatically indicate that either the author, this web site, or anyone who discusses the material either endorse the individuals or organizations referenced, either in part, or in whole, and the author's ask the readers to make their own conclusions.

No individual or organization, including CSPAN, Glenn Beck, Fox News, Rush Limbaugh, endorses this web site or the use of their material on this web site at this time, which may be either removed by request or without notice. Use of the material is assumed appropriate for use under the copy right act concerning fair use for discussion, to include artistic expression to demonstrate a particular viewpoint, in a single or group of discussions. Video or film footage may not include the full context of the original publishing video or audio clips, and therefore are not necessarily representative of any referenced individual or organization

What a shock! I have never met John B but he has been a true friend to me since Coastal was started all those years ago. John B not only got us suped up on coastal DXing, but was instrumental in getting us going in the ultralight game by sending us radio's to encourage us.

John B's work in the radio field to us hobbyists throughout the world was no less than Titanic. His significant achievements are noted and he will be sorely missed.
RIP John B., I will say prayers for you tonight.

With a loop antenna in 2 different locations. They call it triangulation. It's in the Extra Class test.

Hi, folks - If you please, I am looking for recommendations for a PS that will provide the usual 12 or 13.8v, about 5 - 7 amps be plenty. Love to get rid of the myriad 500 ma wall-warts. I'd rather not have it be too expensive, but it would be nice if it didn't send spikes, blow up or cause hash or electrical hum. Any thoughts? There is a plethora of manufacturers and models, reviews are all over the place, I have no idea which ones are OK. Pyramid makes a 5-amp job that would be great, if it's any good. I also see Radio Shack PSs at about twice that current. Would a switching PS be better?

Thanks in advance ~

A switching supply may actually become another source of hash, depending on shielding, which usually, isn't so good. There are measures to attenuate the noise, though. It takes some doing.
Definitely not plug an play, if noise is a issue.

I replaced my wall warts in the radio room with an Astron VS-20M.
Serious power. Serious regulation. Very clean power. Nice listening.

Go to MCMelectronics.com and look at some of the Tenma supplies.
Cost effective, and they do what you need.

There are dozens of other makes.

Things to look for:

Voltage range.

Range of current delivery and at what voltages max current is available.

Meters for both current and voltage are nice. (Volt meter more important than current meter. If you dial up the right voltage, the radios will only take the current they need. Anything beyond a modest current reserve can be dialed back for safety. Without a current meter, if you dial back the current output of the power supply below the draw, you'll see a voltage drop at the radio.)

Lots of cooling vents.

Heavy input cable.

30A binding posts at the output.

You can even find a good power supply used on e-Bay.

I use an Astron RS-20M here to power the Drake R7.

A real piece of political shit who was also a marine at one time. So how many marines died as the result of Murtha pushing that worthless piece-of-junk called the V-22 Osprey so that his district gets a piece of the action? Cost is 114 million bucks per unit that can deliver some 10 (ten) M-16 rifles and their operators...Only qualified M-16 rifle operators need to reply. Good-Bye Murtha.

You could probably power a dozen R7s with 20 amps!. I'm shooting for the Astron 7 amp job - that should tide me over.

In boating...they call it '2 foot-itis.' In audio we call it a '4-track fix.'

No matter how bit a boat you have, you find it's just about 2 foot shy of what you need for a really good party. No matter how many channels you have, you find you need 4 more channels for the right mix.

If you're figuring 7 amps, within a year, you'll be looking for 2 more amps.

Think future growth.

Absolutely! I always expect to have a safe operating environment, and a bigger power supply is a must, not an overkill. In industrial installations, which run around the clock, p.s. are mandatory to be much heftier than what seems necessary to handle the usual load, so nothing terrible could possibly occur in the worth case scenario. At home I played with 12V gell cells for awhile, and was planning to acquire a deep discharge cycle battery from Sears, eventually. By the way Pyramid's p.s.current rating cannot be trusted.The 7 amp claim to supply a constant current is just not possible at all. Their ratings (and of many,many other brands) are based upon intermittent(!) use only. Actually, building a decent medium size (10 -15 Amp) regulated linear p.s. is not that difficult and parts are widely available from discarded electronics.

P.S. Switching p.s. should be avoided by all means,if possible. Just look how much RF the new florescent bulbs are causing lately.

Thanks Peter and Arthur - right now and foreseeably, my total demand at maximum is probably 3 amps. One main radio (Icom R75 - maxes at about 1 amp), a MFJ-1026 (500 - 600 ma) and maybe one other small RX or dsp unit at a time (1 amp max). All the other things I have do just great on 115 VAC. This, after 4 decades of s-l-o-w collecting! I have no TX and do not intend to resurrect my ancient ham license, so that sort of larger drain will never happen.

So, at 5 amps continuous on the unit I am thinking about, that will already give me another 100% of headroom to play with. I know I'm a bit odd in this respect ;-), but I don't collect stuff to run simultaneously (My entire active shack at any one time fits on 3 square feet of tabletop).

I could get a ~12 amp I guess, but that would be considerable overkill for anything I can foresee. Not figuring on the Pyramid any more. You guys and some research have pretty much talked me into Astron :-)

Arthur makes a pretty good point. PS ratings assume intermittent service. Continuous current rating is based on a limited time of service...a few minutes...against unlimited continuous demand. The result is not a lack of current, but an abundance of heat. And subsequent failure. In much the same way ham transmitters used for pirate stations experience failure. They can make their rated output, but they can't sustain it beyond an intermittent, conversational exchange. They can make half their rated output, but they often can't sustain that indefinitely either. The problem being inability to dispose of component heat.

So, look for a PS that can maintain your demand, plus a decent reserve and do it indefinitely, without component overheating. Most 'continuous' ratings do not actually reflect unlimited duration.

Not figuring on the Pyramid any more.
> You guys and some research have pretty much talked me into Astron :-)

A good choice. Don't skimp. You may regret spending the extra money, but you'll never regret having the extra capacity.

If more than 2, say 3 or 4 intercept monitoring stations are operating,then the results should be better. Just thinking in terms of plane and 3D geometry. Still, HF signals bounce off the ionosphere and are highly volatile as a result. Oops. This is weird. Just looked up the history Wullenweber of AN/FLR-9 from the 50's. The original contract was to have GTE-Sylvania to construct one antenna array in ...Pakistan! Guess, it was not considered to be safe enough territory even back in those days and the project was scratched. Good decision,thanks God.

For sale:

Nice example of GE Superadio II AM/FM Portable. The DX'ers choice and this is the rarer version with the 2-way speaker system. In great condition. Asking $70 plus $20 postage in the US. Outside of the US postage will be higher.

I also have a rare Sanyo RP-8880 portable. Sold for repair or parts as the SW side is not working. All other bands do work. One of the rack ears has been re-glued at one point but this is merely cosmetic. Asking $150 including postage for the Sanyo.

Pics are below for both radios. Please contact me with any questions or offers. Thanks.

Marriage taxes are thinly disguised evil plots to discourage spouses from collecting social security benefits? What happens if your spouse dies, or either of you have to retire? We have to stop electing speech writers, and start electing people who are CPAs?

1514. Tea Party Agenda, no property taxes?

Are we going to elect speech writers, or CPAs, or are political speech writers going to have to become CPA's before they write speeches? I assume you have property taxes because you need a guaranteed income from government services. Before you can eliminate property taxes, don't you have to freeze them and stop the practice of property appraisel (guessing) to make sure you don't disrupt your finances?

In order to do away with property taxes, you will cut what spending, and raise sales taxes by how much? If you don't provide the details, then you are guessing? If you don't have the funds in the bank for short falls, what do you do?

When poor people run out of money, can they pay sales taxes? When you raise sales taxes, what happens when you only have $200 in your pocket? Raise sales taxes too much, and instead of five purchases with $200 in your pocket, you can now only make four? What happens to your projected revenue across the board, not just for government, but for everyone?

Who has done this before? Who, What, When, Why, Where? Anyone can write speeches, and we see where that is getting us? Is there really a problem with border enforcement in Texas, or is the real problem the safe city haven policies? Make up your mind folks, either stop pretending you don't have open arms for immigrants, or stop blaming them for your imaginary problems?

Lets ask the sympathy card big dog player, Mr. South Park Glenn Beck?

No sympathy cards for your best bud in the White House? Wooooooof? Woooof?

Yeah, we're just waiting for that special guest appearance or national syndication of Herman Cain?

Who let the dogs out, woof woof wooof?

Well its no fun being a watch dog, if you can't bark, is it? What is the most fun at being a watch dog Glenn? Having a chew toy that you can throw up in the air occasionally? Did Master Glenn throw us a chew toy?

Woof?

k) Advertisements that may appear are not necessarily endorsed by the author, either by admission, or by silence, nor are any electronic links that may transport the reader to other web pages, sites, or computers, and such links that may be provided for all or any of the following known or unknown purposes, but not limited to, informational, educational, and for the purpose of giving copy right credit referral information under the terms outlined in the conditions applied to the term "fair use" regarding conversations and print under US Copy Right Law, and for which the author assumes no liability for any particular use, fitness, or legality there of, any link, current, past, or future, which the reader should use at their sole risk, with no liability to the author, or any other party that may store, transmit, or otherwise facilitate use of the material for which this disclaimer applies.

l) It is the opinion of the author that effective 1 December, 2009, the proposed regulations from the FTC violate the first and fifth amendments of the United States Constitution, by infringing through economic affliction the burden without compensation all financial details concerning the communications of both free enterprise and opinion, and other civil rights such as "punishment must be fair" and not at the "discretion" of public officials, or that advertisers are assumed to be guilty of deception when United States law provides that you are innocent before being proven guilty, and are in fact demonstrations that there are current members of Congress that neither understand the spirit of the law our founding fathers made for the United States of America, or understand how they work in the opinion of the author, as of October 10th, 2009, especially in light of anticipated, and hopefully defeated, legislative taxes relating to energy use and the burden of publishers and advertisers to comply with the law and manage the environment, and in light that there are various consumer protection agencies, including the Better Business Bureau, which has free consumer information which preclude the use and need for excessive government regulation that burdens business with obstacles it may sense that it can not overcome without inflicting harm on the business plan or survival ability of the business to provide advertised, goods and or services.

m) Although the content provided meets or exceeds those new requirements to the knowledge of the author, and modifications to version 1.3 or 1.4 of this disclaimer is a result of the opinion of the author that “blogging” is another definition for a potentially infinite number or forms of electronic communication, as such the author will retroactively apply this version, 1.5 to all forms of previous communications, when and wherever possible, as time allows, in order to properly convey the intention of the author and to demonstrate an enthusiasm to comply with the law.

n) Use of this disclaimer for either personal or professional use is permitted with no restrictions. These restrictions or disclaimers do not prohibit the author from pursuing or communicating in a truthful manner, or guarantee that the audience will understand all things as intended.

o) This disclaimer is meant to establish the intent of the author who may participate in message forums, or create other written or electronic forms of communication to comply with current law, and may be revoked without prior notice, due to circumstances beyond the author's control, changes in the law, or for any of the purposes, terms, or conditions that may be in effect or described by this disclaimer, or to changes in this disclaimer that the author may clarify in a revised version of this disclaimer.

p) This disclaimer is attached to this message, and retroactively applies to all previous forms of communication by the author, and is done so because there is no recognized central suppository of a public disclaimer recognized by the Government of the United States to the author, and as such, the legal imperative of the author is to apply this disclaimer to all manner of correspondence as the author seems fit or prudent, so that no misunderstandings occur, or to comply with past, current or future revisions of the law, due to any of, but not limited to, any or all of the terms, partial terms, or combination of terms, of this disclaimer, which is derived from the freedom of speech, for it appears to the author that the zeal of lawmakers to take away free speech outweigh the providence of attaching this disclaimer to all correspondence for which this applies, and any inconvenience for which this presents, is the result of simply complying with the law, and not to inconvenience the reader.

Use of this private web site or web page is at your own risk, for which you agree not to sue the authors or anyone who may publish or share this article (which must include this disclaimer) with or without the consent of the author(s) if you do not agree, you are violating the terms of conditions to view the content, and you may not use or view the content for any purpose. Discussions, and or links to media and (or) resources do not automatically indicate that either the author, this web site, or anyone who discusses the material either endorse the individuals or organizations referenced, either in part, or in whole, and the author's ask the readers to make their own conclusions.

No individual or organization, including CSPAN, Glenn Beck, Fox News, Rush Limbaugh, endorses this web site or the use of their material on this web site at this time, which may be either removed by request or without notice. Use of the material is assumed appropriate for use under the copy right act concerning fair use for discussion, to include artistic expression to demonstrate a particular viewpoint, in a single or group of discussions. Video or film footage may not include the full context of the original publishing video or audio clips, and therefore are not necessarily representative of any referenced individual or organization

OMG! We'll never find him, because they are going to moth ball the Space Shuttle Program, and instead of keeping two Space Shuttles operational for emergency repairs of orbiting satelites, Al Gore will have to wait several years for us to build a replacement satelite?

Nah, Glenn Beck is not concerned, is he? We all know where Al Gore is, he's inhaling CO2 somewhere? Bill Clinton does not inhale, does he? They did accurately measure the CO2 output of humans, by measuring the caloric metabolic rate, and not the exhalation rate since only measuring volume says nothing? Yes, inhale the CO2, deeply?

It's much more effective to make fun of people's wives, why bother focusing attention on silly things like NASA, something the NSA might want to use occasionally?

Woof?

legal disclaimer:

Universal Legal Disclaimer for the Public Domain, Version 1.5, dated Nov 7th, 2009 (which supersedes all previous versions, to which this new version applies)

The writings, views, expressions expressed by this author to include all written and electronic forms of communication are subject to the following disclaimer and conditions:

a) The views expressed by this website and the author to include all electronic forms of communication are not representative of advertisers, or other third parties that may store and or transmit the messages from this private computer, which you may observe at your own risk, with no liability to the authors, or any party related to transmitting, storing, or any other aspect of the material involved, including email correspondence, which is not necessary to the function of the website, and may or may not be archived due to other limitations incorporated into the licensed email software in use at the time such as automated spam or virus filters. No personal information exchanged will be shared without your consent, or provided to third parties with out the express permission of the parties and, or, individuals concerned.

b) The author(s) of this content and those who may interact with it in various known or unknown electronic methods do not give permission to any third parties to share or provide private personal information who may operate as part of any type of electronic or written communications system, including all parties, who may technically intercept communications due to the nature of network conditions beyond both the author's legal and physical control, unless those communications represent violations of the law, upon which the author, and or web site will cooperate to pursue any legal remedies.

c) The views expressed by the author or website may or may not contain factual information, due to the use of sarcasm or parody. The views may or may not be complete, either by design, to pre-empt being called a liar even if telling the truth, or by error due to typographical, grammer, or other technical communication problems not realized or imagined, or the possibility of views based on false or missing information, or with the intention of being used for entertainment purposes only, and not as a definitive judgment on the actions, character, or reputation of an organization, individual, or groups of individuals, with the intent of communicating with a limited group of people, and not the general public, however no distribution restrictions apply for fair use purposes described by the US Copyright Office, if no other restrictions are present or communicated, with all commercial proceeds associated with the distribution of the content to remain the sole possession of the original author.

d) Any reference to copyrighted material is done in the spirit of fair use, to illustrate the context of a discussion regarding public events for reference purposes that adds to the conversation, for which that discussion constitutes a new and separate piece of intellectual property, for which the referenced copyrighted material can not convey by itself, and that the author reserves the right to retain any profits from the newly created intellectual property. This term also serves to promote the referenced copyrighted material, without necessarily endorsing the material for any particular fitness, use, or purpose, for which the purpose of fair use referral law was created for, through inclusion of a partial, but not whole, body of works that the copyright fair use reference applies, for which the intent of all terms of this disclaimer apply to that reference of a copyrighted work.

e) Any humor if used, is not intended to offend people, and may be designed to apply the principals of peer pressure through reverse examination to accomplish the communication of principals or ideas that consist of traditional or proposed social values that are proven to advance the common good, and are not meant to discredit, disparage or demean any person or entities in any professional or personal manner, by attempting to share through the eyes or opinion of the author, for which it is expected that you read at your own risk, with no liability held to the author or any third parties who may store, transfer, or forward this message to others, in the traditions of free speech, fair use, and to play a positive role in a society that believes that graphically depicting male homosexuals having sex, and other unusual sex acts is considered free speech or that the use of abortion to limit Negros, Latinos, and other races from "spreading the wealth around" as a "matter of privacy" (which the author does not condone).

f) The use of humor is a known ingredient in providing teachable moments, and to validate and even demonstrate artistic expressions that are not shared by others, as demonstrated by many valuable scientific observations that were scoffed at in the past, yet proven to be quite valid decades later, upon which the humor used in all electronic communications by the author are based, in the principals and traditions of free speech and pursuit of happiness, and may not be a representation of others, including God.

g) It is the opinion of the author that you respect people when you consider their views, by reflecting their thoughts or actions against your own, which may include use of language that conveys an emotional depth that is to be imagined, but not enacted through use of language that accurately, or inaccurately describes the situation, circumstance, or idea, which does not imply that any action occur other than the consideration of the thought, for which beyond the author has no control, or liability for the action of the reader as presented in all terms of this diclaimer, and may simply be the venting of emotions with the intent of no consequence by the author to an audience the author assumes will understand the message and intent, and wishes to hear those views.

h) Since all intellectual property, discussions and other communications this disclaimer applies to, either in written, or electronic form, subscribe to the terms described in paragraph (e) and (g) of this disclaimer, under no circumstances are any communications meant to violate the terms of any electronic harassment laws which include the word “harm”, for which the author understands to be limited to the definition of physical harm (not self inflicted mental harm) that requires immediate medical attention based solely or in part by the communications of the author, regardless of whether the author chooses to remain anonymous or not.

i) It is the intention and opinion of the author that History is full of individuals that are not harmed by criticism, and in fact such criticism can motivate and inspire them to prove their critics wrong. Based on this historical evidence, any alleged mental harm amounts to self inflicted injury not treatable by either medical or other professionals (despite the fact that many people live from the profits of lies through gradual illusion, without judicial interference), for which the author has no control over the mental development of any potential reader prior to the discovery or reading of the material for which this disclaimer applies, as evident by the necessity that speech is to be protected by law as determined by the founders of the United States of America, who, in the opinion of the author, wrote the legal framework, which was created by God, not slaves.

j) Additional use of automated anonymous page use tracking computer scripts (web page programs) or advertisements may be licensed by www.google.com, for bandwidth verification, or determination of potential advertisement opportunities subject to all other terms described in this disclaimer.

k) Advertisements that may appear are not necessarily endorsed by the author, either by admission, or by silence, nor are any electronic links that may transport the reader to other web pages, sites, or computers, and such links that may be provided for all or any of the following known or unknown purposes, but not limited to, informational, educational, and for the purpose of giving copy right credit referral information under the terms outlined in the conditions applied to the term "fair use" regarding conversations and print under US Copy Right Law, and for which the author assumes no liability for any particular use, fitness, or legality there of, any link, current, past, or future, which the reader should use at their sole risk, with no liability to the author, or any other party that may store, transmit, or otherwise facilitate use of the material for which this disclaimer applies.

l) It is the opinion of the author that effective 1 December, 2009, the proposed regulations from the FTC violate the first and fifth amendments of the United States Constitution, by infringing through economic affliction the burden without compensation all financial details concerning the communications of both free enterprise and opinion, and other civil rights such as "punishment must be fair" and not at the "discretion" of public officials, or that advertisers are assumed to be guilty of deception when United States law provides that you are innocent before being proven guilty, and are in fact demonstrations that there are current members of Congress that neither understand the spirit of the law our founding fathers made for the United States of America, or understand how they work in the opinion of the author, as of October 10th, 2009, especially in light of anticipated, and hopefully defeated, legislative taxes relating to energy use and the burden of publishers and advertisers to comply with the law and manage the environment, and in light that there are various consumer protection agencies, including the Better Business Bureau, which has free consumer information which preclude the use and need for excessive government regulation that burdens business with obstacles it may sense that it can not overcome without inflicting harm on the business plan or survival ability of the business to provide advertised, goods and or services.

Yeah, did you notice how they did not specify what those requirements are? Why bother with the details, silly me? Did you notice how she just threw in there, the monthly ratio of men who become of age every month to serve the military, and what ratio of that total enlisted? Yeah, those facts and figures just make you drop your jaw, don't they?

Have you seen the size of these guys serving in the military? All the ones that I have seen don't look they are starving to me? They would turn you down from serving because you are a few pounds over weight, or you can't fit through the door? Who, What, When, Where, Why? Does the press even do their job any more?

Hey, Bagdad Bob, can you fit all that on the palm of your hand, or will that screw up your palm reader you got hiding behind the curtains in the White House?

I don't subscribe to these ethnic theories anymore than I subscribe to prophecy that was alleged to occur thousands of years ago? Why bother? The prophecies could have come true long ago, and you could find your self in time paradox by simply "feeding the trolls"? Do you find it odd that the Church promotes the theory that sin is passed down through the generations, but ignores the fact that the children of believers should be immortal, or is that why there is so much pressure to get children to sin in the first place? Anyone who asks such questions is scolded for partaking in vain or idle talk, or worse, heresy?

So then faith is supernatural, rather than scientific? Well, that explains everything, doesn't it? Now then, if Christ built his church on Peter, rather than Paul, that would mean that racial issues are the key dividing issue, the major obstacle to the success of Christ, and that all those who advance the divisions of race are the anti-Christ, and not those who advance the nuances of prophecy?

Well, you folks act like you are ready for meat, or can you even digest such a meal yet? Let me guess, we would rather hear the wonderful sound of screaming babies all around us, lets continue to feed milk to everyone?

History is not important if you can not learn from it?

Oh, you are too intellectual for issues of race, well what unites races besides language? Money?

Talent on loan, not buried, paid with interest, by God?

l) It is the opinion of the author that effective 1 December, 2009, the proposed regulations from the FTC violate the first and fifth amendments of the United States Constitution, by infringing through economic affliction the burden without compensation all financial details concerning the communications of both free enterprise and opinion, and other civil rights such as "punishment must be fair" and not at the "discretion" of public officials, or that advertisers are assumed to be guilty of deception when United States law provides that you are innocent before being proven guilty, and are in fact demonstrations that there are current members of Congress that neither understand the spirit of the law our founding fathers made for the United States of America, or understand how they work in the opinion of the author, as of October 10th, 2009, especially in light of anticipated, and hopefully defeated, legislative taxes relating to energy use and the burden of publishers and advertisers to comply with the law and manage the environment, and in light that there are various consumer protection agencies, including the Better Business Bureau, which has free consumer information which preclude the use and need for excessive government regulation that burdens business with obstacles it may sense that it can not overcome without inflicting harm on the business plan or survival ability of the business to provide advertised, goods and or services.

m) Although the content provided meets or exceeds those new requirements to the knowledge of the author, and modifications to version 1.3 or 1.4 of this disclaimer is a result of the opinion of the author that “blogging” is another definition for a potentially infinite number or forms of electronic communication, as such the author will retroactively apply this version, 1.5 to all forms of previous communications, when and wherever possible, as time allows, in order to properly convey the intention of the author and to demonstrate an enthusiasm to comply with the law.

n) Use of this disclaimer for either personal or professional use is permitted with no restrictions. These restrictions or disclaimers do not prohibit the author from pursuing or communicating in a truthful manner, or guarantee that the audience will understand all things as

Yeah, did you notice how they did not specify what those requirements are? Why bother with the details, silly me? Did you notice how she just threw in there, the monthly ratio of men who become of age every month to serve the military, and what ratio of that total enlisted? Yeah, those facts and figures just make you drop your jaw, don't they?

Have you seen the size of these guys serving in the military? All the ones that I have seen don't look they are starving to me? They would turn you down from serving because you are a few pounds over weight, or you can't fit through the door? Who, What, When, Where, Why? Does the press even do their job any more?

Hey, Bagdad Bob, can you fit all that on the palm of your hand, or will that screw up your palm reader you got hiding behind the curtains in the White House? So let me guess, are they trying to tell kids you can get out of serving the military if you get fat?

Or is Michelle Obama insulting every kid out there by saying you don't have the will power to loose weight to serve your country if you get fat? What do you think Bagdad Bob, we need some more photo ops at the White House, you people are just too boring?

Well, that's a new technique, tapping into the anger of children? Why, thank you Michelle, we never would have had to say that about you, that you think American children are too weak, too stupid to loose weight on their own, after all, you were not elected, so you want to debate your ideas along with your husband?

You want to act like the mommy of America?

Keep that slight of hand, accepting responsibility going folks, tapping into that anger, that's just never been done before, has it?

legal disclaimer:

Universal Legal Disclaimer for the Public Domain, Version 1.5, dated Nov 7th, 2009 (which supersedes all previous versions, to which this new version applies)

The writings, views, expressions expressed by this author to include all written and electronic forms of communication are subject to the following disclaimer and conditions:

a) The views expressed by this website and the author to include all electronic forms of communication are not representative of advertisers, or other third parties that may store and or transmit the messages from this private computer, which you may observe at your own risk, with no liability to the authors, or any party related to transmitting, storing, or any other aspect of the material involved, including email correspondence, which is not necessary to the function of the website, and may or may not be archived due to other limitations incorporated into the licensed email software in use at the time such as automated spam or virus filters. No personal information exchanged will be shared without your consent, or provided to third parties with out the express permission of the parties and, or, individuals concerned.

b) The author(s) of this content and those who may interact with it in various known or unknown electronic methods do not give permission to any third parties to share or provide private personal information who may operate as part of any type of electronic or written communications system, including all parties, who may technically intercept communications due to the nature of network conditions beyond both the author's legal and physical control, unless those communications represent violations of the law, upon which the author, and or web site will cooperate to pursue any legal remedies.

c) The views expressed by the author or website may or may not contain factual information, due to the use of sarcasm or parody. The views may or may not be complete, either by design, to pre-empt being called a liar even if telling the truth, or by error due to typographical, grammer, or other technical communication problems not realized or imagined, or the possibility of views based on false or missing information, or with the intention of being used for entertainment purposes only, and not as a definitive judgment on the actions, character, or reputation of an organization, individual, or groups of individuals, with the intent of communicating with a limited group of people, and not the general public, however no distribution restrictions apply for fair use purposes described by the US Copyright Office, if no other restrictions are present or communicated, with all commercial proceeds associated with the distribution of the content to remain the sole possession of the original author.

d) Any reference to copyrighted material is done in the spirit of fair use, to illustrate the context of a discussion regarding public events for reference purposes that adds to the conversation, for which that discussion constitutes a new and separate piece of intellectual property, for which the referenced copyrighted material can not convey by itself, and that the author reserves the right to retain any profits from the newly created intellectual property. This term also serves to promote the referenced copyrighted material, without necessarily endorsing the material for any particular fitness, use, or purpose, for which the purpose of fair use referral law was created for, through inclusion of a partial, but not whole, body of works that the copyright fair use reference applies, for which the intent of all terms of this disclaimer apply to that reference of a copyrighted work.

e) Any humor if used, is not intended to offend people, and may be designed to apply the principals of peer pressure through reverse examination to accomplish the communication of principals or ideas that consist of traditional or proposed social values that are proven to advance the common good, and are not meant to discredit, disparage or demean any person or entities in any professional or personal manner, by attempting to share through the eyes or opinion of the author, for which it is expected that you read at your own risk, with no liability held to the author or any third parties who may store, transfer, or forward this message to others, in the traditions of free speech, fair use, and to play a positive role in a society that believes that graphically depicting male homosexuals having sex, and other unusual sex acts is considered free speech or that the use of abortion to limit Negros, Latinos, and other races from "spreading the wealth around" as a "matter of privacy" (which the author does not condone).

f) The use of humor is a known ingredient in providing teachable moments, and to validate and even demonstrate artistic expressions that are not shared by others, as demonstrated by many valuable scientific observations that were scoffed at in the past, yet proven to be quite valid decades later, upon which the humor used in all electronic communications by the author are based, in the principals and traditions of free speech and pursuit of happiness, and may not be a representation of others, including God.

g) It is the opinion of the author that you respect people when you consider their views, by reflecting their thoughts or actions against your own, which may include use of language that conveys an emotional depth that is to be imagined, but not enacted through use of language that accurately, or inaccurately describes the situation,

circumstance, or idea, which does not imply that any action occur other than the consideration of the thought, for which beyond the author has no control, or liability for the action of the reader as presented in all terms of this diclaimer, and may simply be the venting of emotions with the intent of no consequence by the author to an audience the author assumes will understand the message and intent, and wishes to hear those views.

h) Since all intellectual property, discussions and other communications this disclaimer applies to, either in written, or electronic form, subscribe to the terms described in paragraph (e) and (g) of this disclaimer, under no circumstances are any communications meant to violate the terms of any electronic harassment laws which include the word “harm”, for which the author understands to be limited to the definition of physical harm (not self inflicted mental harm) that requires immediate medical attention based solely or in part by the communications of the author, regardless of whether the author chooses to remain anonymous or not.

j) Additional use of automated anonymous page use tracking computer scripts (web page programs) or advertisements may be licensed by www.google.com, for bandwidth verification, or determination of potential advertisement opportunities subject to all other terms described in this disclaimer.

k) Advertisements that may appear are not necessarily endorsed by the author, either by admission, or by silence, nor are any electronic links that may transport the reader to other web pages, sites, or computers, and such links that may be provided for all or any of the following known or unknown purposes, but not limited to, informational, educational, and for the purpose of giving copy right credit referral information under the terms outlined in the conditions applied to the term "fair use" regarding conversations and print under US Copy Right Law, and for which the author assumes no liability for any particular use, fitness, or legality there of, any link, current, past, or future, which the reader should use at their sole risk, with no liability to the author, or any other party that may store, transmit, or otherwise facilitate use of the material for which this disclaimer applies.

l) It is the opinion of the author that effective 1 December, 2009, the proposed regulations from the FTC violate the first and fifth amendments of the United States Constitution, by infringing through economic affliction the burden without compensation all financial details concerning the communications of both free enterprise and opinion, and other civil rights such as "punishment must be fair" and not at the "discretion" of public officials, or that advertisers are assumed to be guilty of deception when United States law provides that you are innocent before being proven guilty, and are in fact demonstrations that there are current members of Congress that neither understand the spirit of the law our founding fathers made for the United States of America, or understand how they work in the opinion of the author, as of October 10th, 2009, especially in light of anticipated, and hopefully defeated, legislative taxes relating to energy use and the burden of publishers and advertisers to comply with the law and manage the environment, and in light that there are various consumer protection agencies, including the Better Business Bureau, which has free consumer information which preclude the use and need for excessive government regulation that burdens business with obstacles it may sense that it can not overcome without inflicting harm on the business plan or survival ability of the business to provide advertised, goods and or services.

Courts threw that out... wouldn't let the NFL copyright it.

This is the first I've heard of this, but I would suggest that the Tea Party agenda is also in favor of much less government, so without all the bloat, there wouldn't be a need for all the taxes we are paying.

I use an Astron switch mode supply. It makes no noise. It makes no heat. Linear supplies waste electricity.

They're saying 3.8, now.

Actually, 2 feet of snow, single digit temperatures and the

Memorial for John Hulon Bryant View / Sign Guestbook [with portrait]

John Hulon Bryant, 68, passed away Tuesday, February 9, 2010, at St. John Medical Center in Tulsa, following a severe head injury sustained as the result of a fall from a ladder. A memorial service will be held at 3:00 p.m. on Friday, February 12, 2010 at First United Methodist Church in Stillwater, Oklahoma. Strode Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

John was born on April 30, 1941, in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma to Glenn H. and Bernice Cochran Bryant. John grew up in Stillwater, graduating from Stillwater

High School in 1959. He graduated from Oklahoma State University in 1964 with a Bachelorâ□□s degree in Architecture, and earned a Masterâ□□s degree from The University of Illinois in 1968.

John married Linda Sue Carhart, of Scottsdale, Arizona, on January 30, 1964. John and Linda raised one daughter, Mary Ellen.

Following graduation, John was employed as a professional architect at The Benham Group in Oklahoma City. But his true passion was teaching. In 1970, he was hired as a Regents Professor of Architecture at Auburn University, where he taught until 1976.

Following that, John was awarded the distinct honor of a Senior Fulbright Research Scholarship. Herewith, John, Linda, and Mary Ellen spent a year in Japan, where John researched and photographed ancient Japanese architecture. This research became the foundation for his later specialization in teaching Non-Western Architecture classes at Oklahoma State University.

Following his year in Japan, John was hired by Oklahoma State University as Head of the School of Architecture, a job he held from 1977 until 1985.

During his tenure as Head, John made two trips to China as a member of a delegation of U.S. Architectural Educators. They were asked to facilitate the re-establishment of schools of architecture when that country re-opened relations with the West.

Following his time as Head, John served as a professor, teaching Design Studio and Non-Western and Japanese Architecture, the latter of which was frequently voted as â□□Favorite Classï¿½? by the students he loved so much. He retired from teaching in 2000.

In 1997, John was chosen as a Fellow of the American Institute of Architects.

John not only loved to teach, he loved to learn. His adolescent hobby of shortwave radio listening led to a lifetime of radio study, and eventual expertise. John was internationally known as a radio antenna designer and tester. His standards were high, and he was never satisfied. John had a great interest in the history of radio, as well.
He co-authored four books on the history of the Zenith Radio Corporation with his dear friend, Harold Cones.

He and Harold also co-authored the book Dangerous Crossings, and account of the first modern polar expedition in 1925, in which radios and airplanes were first used in the far north.

From 1988 to 1992, John self-published six annual editions of Proceedings, a compilation of articles written by short-wave radio enthusiasts, sharing their expertise about this unusual and technically complicated hobby.

In 1986, John and Linda vacationed in the San Juan Islands in Washington State.
They loved the area so much, they eventually bought property for a second home, which they designed and built themselves over the course of several years, the ultimate do-it-yourself project.

Of all his many and diverse interests, John was most passionate about his role as both an educator and advocate for his students.

John is survived by his wife of 46 years, Linda, of Stillwater, Oklahoma and Orcas Island, Washington, daughter Mary Ellen Nesser, her husband Noel Nesser, and grandchildren Katherine and Charles Nesser, of Fort Worth, Texas.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Endowment fund at First United Methodist Church, 400 W. 7th St., Stillwater, Oklahoma.
Condolences may be e-mailed to the family and on online obituary may be viewed

Thanks Peter and Arthur - right now and foreseeably, my total demand at maximum is probably 3 amps. One main radio (Icom R75 - maxes at about 1 amp), a MFJ-1026 (500 - 600 ma) and maybe one other small RX or dsp unit at a time (1 amp max). All the other things I have do just great on 115 VAC. This, after 4 decades of s-l-o-w collecting! I have no TX and do not intend to resurrect my ancient ham license, so that sort of larger drain will never happen.

So, at 5 amps continuous on the unit I am thinking about, that will already give me another 100% of headroom to play with. I know I'm a bit odd in this respect ;-), but I don't collect stuff to run simultaneously (My entire active shack at any one time fits on 3 square feet of tabletop).

I could get a ~12 amp I guess, but that would be considerable overkill for anything I can foresee. Not figuring on the Pyramid any more. You guys and some research have pretty much talked me into Astron :-)

Bruce

You might try checking out other brands. I have a Kikusui I got locally for a very reasonable price and it is a very nice power supply (0-18V, 4.5A max.).

There's a nice Kikusui on eBay right now - item 320485731691.

Just a thought. HP power supplies are also plentious. I have an Astron RS-35M and are well pleased with it but I think for your purposes, it might be overkill.

You could always build a nicely-regulated power supply as well. It isn't hard to do...

None that I've noticed. These are specifically sold for Amateur Radio.
From what I've heard the Astrons and the MFJs are both electrically quiet.

I don't think so. Mr. Bush created a giant new federal agency, and expanded Medicare, and started 2 pointless wars, while cutting taxes.
He let the country go to shit and now things have to be fixed. I'm not convinced the current bunch in DC are up to the task, but whining about taxes is ridiculous.

I had not heard of Kikusui before I got this one either, but I am impressed with it overall. It is built quite well. The lower-priced units don't supply a lot of current so you might be as well off with an Astron, etc.
The one I got does 4.5A and I've never really needed that much for what I power it with.

Good luck with it,

1557. Demonstrating the theology of history?

Cross-posted to: alt.fan.rush-limbaugh,alt.politics.republicans,rec.radio.shortwave

Courtesy copy of a page out of book I am writing, no reply necessary or expected, although comments may be considered prior to the publication....

Of course my favorite radio teacher is Rush Limbaugh, for various reasons, but the main one being is just as there is no substitute for John Madden, no two Rush Limbaugh shows sound exactly alike. Rush seems to be able to condense in short bites what might take me hours to do on my own, so in that spirit of things, that is why I say the Glenn Beck Radio show is getting better in my opinion, by exercising excellence.

Demonstrating the theology of history? Lately I've been doing some research on the Internet, and I'll bounce some drafts of pending articles that I may publish now and then. And what is annoying sometimes is finding yourself reading some really weird, or disturbing material, and of course it is written that way to push you in another direction, or to censor you, or other various reasons. So its easy to loose your train of thought in research, and for those that intentionally try to distract you, you could give them back what they gave you?

So the other day I was reading this anonymous material, and it had a whole lot of historical detail in it that did not make sense. And I had two thoughts crossing my mind, the “radical right” mentality projection by political conservative critics who may wrongly think that conservatives want to bring about some kind of Apocalypse like some Muslims do, and the other thought about erasing American History by Glenn Beck.

Well, I'm listening to the Glenn Beck Radio Show today, and I was stunned, it was the best radio show they have produced all year long. It made sense, their references to erased history (the attempt at anyway) of the 1920 depression, and how they came out of it, etc. Glenn Beck and company are getting better at what they do, and they listen to criticism, and take it well I might add. Someone who asked you a question about 9/11, who felt the steel beams in his building shake, or smelled that inferno, was being “unfair”? Nice curve ball that demonstrates the projection of your character?

Getting back to my story, the thought crossed my mind, how to you teach radical Christians to beware of false prophets, and how do you teach those who use history as a spring board to intimidate you into thinking they are really smarter than they are? By showing a simple question about the theology of prophecy as currently taught in conjunction with history?

For example, the Christians might teach, or did in the past, that all have sinned, even though if you follow the Jewish theological background of “salvation”, or aspects of it, one could ask the question, that once the “Messiah” had come (Jesus Christ), and liberated mankind from the original sin, then all children from that point on, would not be born into sin, and would they be immortal? Or Muslims that come from Adam and Eve, hate the Jews when they are Jewish? So is the past that we can not witness for ourselves, relevant today? Yes, the tree of life was destroyed by the flood, but there are other references to the river of life, and this is not a bible lesson?

We can ask those questions, since there are allusions that Christ said that there were those among him who would not taste of death? Sounds interesting, would that apply to their children as well? So for all we really know, there is a secret society of immortals on the planet who could theoretically avoid many of the things that others do not through the power of the Holy Ghost? That would bring up a little different way of living and raising children, would it not? No, not just don't disobey Mommy for taking sneaking a cookie, but potentially loose your immortality? Unlikely scenario, but its fun to take poke at others who really think they can alter your way of thinking, when they have no idea how you really think?

Ah, I can just imagine the visions of virtual hell some of you are thinking right now? LOL. Should some think of themselves as children that are not meant to know the exact details, and the grace and supernatural nature of God grows a relationship with the Holy Ghost and with power? I've seen and felt the power of God, because I was looking for it? Well, now, you can't teach that, can you? So no I'm not teaching a new religion, or anything of the sort, I'm just opening the ears of the oppressed, and at the same time learning something new every day?

Now then, if the mentality of a “Quaker” was that if you sinned, you did not break a law, you lost your immortality (until redeemed by grace) where do you think the concept of “innocent until proven guilty” either came from, or could it play an important part of American history from one subtle part of the early American mind that viewed things in that manner to support those concepts?

So you think that would make kids squirm, if we taught that those kind of social expectations were common place back then? I haven't forced you to join a religion, and I've taught you some basic concepts in use back then? That is what is so amazing about the United States Constitution, is that in order to avoid arguments, it was short, and yet designed to be so powerful?

They knew there was only one real way to avoid the failed governments of their collective experience and wrote that document intentionally that way? I wonder if President Obama ever made those arguments in his “lectures”? These leaders instinctively knew that the one thing that divides a nation is money, and went out of their way to avoid those pitfalls, and it takes intentional acts of disregard for the US Constitution to harm the economy? People that invest in America, invest in our Constitution?

Well, I could write more today, however I can't just keep publishing everything for free, so we will see if I can do better than I have in the past....

Oh, the other radio shows? Do doctors heal, or confuse? What's confusing about Gitmo when you assume in order to be there, you were caught in the act of military aggression?

What terrorists have we "rehabilitated"? Does that take decades? Did we rehabilitate Hitler, or fry him in his bunker?

And Dats Da Way It Iz.......

Universal Legal Disclaimer for the Public Domain, Version 1.5, dated Nov 7th, 2009 (which supersedes all previous versions, to which this new version applies)

The writings, views, expressions expressed by this author to include all written and electronic forms of communication are subject to the following disclaimer and conditions:

a) The views expressed by this website and the author to include all electronic forms of communication are not representative of advertisers, or other third parties that may store and or transmit the messages from this private computer, which you may observe at your own risk, with no liability to the authors, or any party related to transmitting, storing, or any other aspect of the material involved, including email correspondence, which is not necessary to the function of the website, and may or may not be archived due to other limitations incorporated into the licensed email software in use at the time such as automated spam or virus filters. No personal information exchanged will be shared without your consent, or provided to third parties with out the express permission of the parties and, or, individuals concerned.

b) The author(s) of this content and those who may interact with it in various known or unknown electronic methods do not give permission to any third parties to share or provide private personal information who may operate as part of any type of electronic or written communications system, including all parties, who may technically intercept communications due to the nature of network conditions beyond both the author's legal and physical control, unless those communications represent violations of the law, upon which the author, and or web site will cooperate to pursue any legal remedies.

c) The views expressed by the author or website may or may not contain factual information, due to the use of sarcasm or parody. The views may or may not be complete, either by design, to pre-empt being called a liar even if telling the truth, or by error due to typographical, grammer, or other technical communication problems not realized or imagined, or the possibility of views based on false or missing information, or with the intention of being used for entertainment purposes only, and not as a definitive judgment on the actions, character, or reputation of an organization, individual, or groups of individuals, with the intent of communicating with a limited group of people, and not the general public, however no distribution restrictions apply for fair use purposes described by the US Copyright Office, if no other restrictions are present or communicated, with all commercial proceeds associated with the distribution of the content to remain the sole possession of the original author.

d) Any reference to copyrighted material is done in the spirit of fair use, to illustrate the context of a discussion regarding public events for reference purposes that adds to the conversation, for which that discussion constitutes a new and separate piece of intellectual property, for which the referenced copyrighted material can not convey by itself, and that the author reserves the right to retain any profits from the newly created intellectual property. This term also serves to promote the referenced copyrighted material, without necessarily endorsing the material for any particular fitness, use, or purpose, for which the purpose of fair use referral law was created for, through inclusion of a partial, but not whole, body of works that the copyright fair use reference applies, for which the intent of all terms of this disclaimer apply to that reference of a copyrighted work.

e) Any humor if used, is not intended to offend people, and may be designed to apply the principals of peer pressure through reverse examination to accomplish the communication of principals or ideas that consist of traditional or proposed social values that are proven to advance the common good, and are not meant to discredit, disparage or demean any person or entities in any professional or personal manner, by attempting to share through the eyes or opinion of the author, for which it is expected that you read at your own risk, with no liability held to the author or any third parties who may store, transfer, or forward this message to others, in the traditions of free speech, fair use, and to play a positive role in a society that believes that graphically depicting male homosexuals having sex, and other unusual sex acts is considered free speech or that the use of abortion to limit Negros, Latinos, and other races from "spreading the wealth around" as a "matter of privacy" (which the author does not condone).

f) The use of humor is a known ingredient in providing teachable moments, and to validate and even demonstrate artistic expressions that are not shared by others, as demonstrated by many valuable scientific observations that were scoffed at in the past, yet proven to be quite valid decades later, upon which the humor used in all electronic communications by the author are based, in the principals and traditions of free speech and pursuit of happiness, and may not be a representation of others, including God.

g) It is the opinion of the author that you respect people when you consider their views, by reflecting their thoughts or actions against your own, which may include use of language that conveys an emotional depth that is to be imagined, but not enacted through use of language that accurately, or inaccurately describes the situation, circumstance, or idea, which does not imply that any action occur other than the consideration of the thought, for which beyond the author has no control, or liability for the action of the reader as presented in all terms of this diclaimer, and may simply be the venting of emotions with the intent of no consequence by the author to an audience the author assumes will understand the message and intent, and wishes to hear those views.

h) Since all intellectual property, discussions and other communications this disclaimer applies to, either in written, or electronic form, subscribe to the terms described in paragraph (e) and (g) of this disclaimer, under no circumstances are any communications meant to violate the terms of any electronic harassment laws which include the word “harm”, for which the author understands to be limited to the definition of physical harm (not self inflicted mental harm) that requires immediate medical attention based solely or in part by the communications of the author, regardless of whether the author chooses to remain anonymous or not.

j) Additional use of automated anonymous page use tracking computer scripts (web page programs) or advertisements may be licensed by www.google.com, for bandwidth verification, or determination of potential advertisement opportunities subject to all other terms described in this disclaimer.

k) Advertisements that may appear are not necessarily endorsed by the author, either by admission, or by silence, nor are any electronic links that may transport the reader to other web pages, sites, or

computers, and such links that may be provided for all or any of the following known or unknown purposes, but not limited to, informational, educational, and for the purpose of giving copy right credit referral information under the terms outlined in the conditions applied to the term "fair use" regarding conversations and print under US Copy Right Law, and for which the author assumes no liability for any particular use, fitness, or legality there of, any link, current, past, or future, which the reader should use at their sole risk, with no liability to the author, or any other party that may store, transmit, or otherwise facilitate use of the material for which this disclaimer applies.

l) It is the opinion of the author that effective 1 December, 2009, the proposed regulations from the FTC violate the first and fifth amendments of the United States Constitution, by infringing through economic affliction the burden without compensation all financial details concerning the communications of both free enterprise and opinion, and other civil rights such as "punishment must be fair" and not at the "discretion" of public officials, or that advertisers are assumed to be guilty of deception when United States law provides that you are innocent before being proven guilty, and are in fact demonstrations that there are current members of Congress that neither understand the spirit of the law our founding fathers made for the United States of America, or understand how they work in the opinion of the author, as of October 10th, 2009, especially in light of anticipated, and hopefully defeated, legislative taxes relating to energy use and the burden of publishers and advertisers to comply with the law and manage the environment, and in light that there are various consumer protection agencies, including the Better Business Bureau, which has free consumer information which preclude the use and need for excessive government regulation that burdens business with obstacles it may sense that it can not overcome without inflicting harm on the business plan or survival ability of the business to provide advertised, goods and or services.

m) Although the content provided meets or exceeds those new requirements to the knowledge of the author, and modifications to version 1.3 or 1.4 of this disclaimer is a result of the opinion of the author that “blogging” is another definition for a potentially infinite number or forms of electronic communication, as such the author will retroactively apply this version, 1.5 to all forms of previous communications, when and wherever possible, as time allows, in order to properly convey the intention of the author and to demonstrate an enthusiasm to comply with the law.

n) Use of this disclaimer for either personal or professional use is permitted with no restrictions. These restrictions or disclaimers do not prohibit the author from pursuing or communicating in a truthful manner, or guarantee that the audience will understand all things as intended.

o) This disclaimer is meant to establish the intent of the author who may participate in message forums, or create other written or electronic forms of communication to comply with current law, and may be revoked without prior notice, due to circumstances beyond the author's control, changes in the law, or for any of the purposes, terms, or conditions that may be in effect or described by this disclaimer, or to changes in this disclaimer that the author may clarify in a revised version of this disclaimer.

p) This disclaimer is attached to this message, and retroactively applies to all previous forms of communication by the author, and is done so because there is no recognized central suppository of a public disclaimer recognized by the Government of the United States to the author, and as such, the legal imperative of the author is to apply this disclaimer to all manner of correspondence as the author seems fit or prudent, so that no misunderstandings occur, or to comply with past, current or future revisions of the law, due to any of, but not limited to, any or all of the terms, partial terms, or combination of terms, of this disclaimer, which is derived from the freedom of speech, for it appears to the author that the zeal of lawmakers to take away free speech outweigh the providence of attaching this disclaimer to all correspondence for which this applies, and any inconvenience for which this presents, is the result of simply complying with the law, and not to inconvenience the reader.

Use of this private web site or web page is at your own risk, for which you agree not to sue the authors or anyone who may publish or share this article (which must include this disclaimer) with or without the consent of the author(s) if you do not agree, you are violating the terms of conditions to view the content, and you may not use or view the content for any purpose. Discussions, and or links to media and (or) resources do not automatically indicate that either the author, this web site, or anyone who discusses the material either endorse the individuals or organizations referenced, either in part, or in whole, and the author's ask the readers to make their own conclusions.

No individual or organization, including CSPAN, Glenn Beck, Fox News, Rush Limbaugh, endorses this web site or the use of their material on this web site at this time, which may be either removed by request or without notice. Use of the material is assumed appropriate for use under the copy right act concerning fair use for discussion, to include artistic expression to demonstrate a particular viewpoint, in a single or group of discussions. Video or film footage may not include the full context of the original publishing video or audio clips, and therefore are not necessarily representative of any referenced individual or organization

According to newly established scientific standards established by the White House, it is suggested, but not proven, that One Hundred Quadrillion Snow Flakes were liberated from the atmosphere, by the cheerful, melodic, harmonious voice of Rush Limbaugh resonating through radio waves, causing an ionic reaction in clouds of water vapor, and all those snow flakes happily landed on the houses of liberals who believe that man can cause global climate change?

legal disclaimer:

Universal Legal Disclaimer for the Public Domain, Version 1.5, dated Nov 7th, 2009 (which supersedes all previous versions, to which this new version applies)

The writings, views, expressions expressed by this author to include all written and electronic forms of communication are subject to the following disclaimer and conditions:

a) The views expressed by this website and the author to include all electronic forms of communication are not representative of advertisers, or other third parties that may store and or transmit the messages from this private computer, which you may observe at your own risk, with no liability to the authors, or any party related to transmitting, storing, or any other aspect of the material involved, including email correspondence, which is not necessary to the function of the website, and may or may not be archived due to other limitations incorporated into the licensed email software in use at the time such as automated spam or virus filters. No personal information exchanged will be shared without your consent, or provided to third parties with out the express permission of the parties and, or, individuals concerned.

b) The author(s) of this content and those who may interact with it in various known or unknown electronic methods do not give permission to any third parties to share or provide private personal information who may operate as part of any type of electronic or written communications system, including all parties, who may technically intercept communications due to the nature of network conditions beyond both the author's legal and physical control, unless those communications represent violations of the law, upon which the author, and or web site will cooperate to pursue any legal remedies.

c) The views expressed by the author or website may or may not contain factual information, due to the use of sarcasm or parody. The views may or may not be complete, either by design, to pre-empt being called a liar even if telling the truth, or by error due to typographical, grammer, or other technical communication problems not realized or imagined, or the possibility of views based on false or missing information, or with the intention of being used for entertainment purposes only, and not as a definitive judgment on the actions, character, or reputation of an organization, individual, or groups of individuals, with the intent of communicating with a limited group of people, and not the general public, however no distribution restrictions apply for fair use purposes described by the US Copyright Office, if no other restrictions are present or communicated, with all commercial proceeds associated with the distribution of the content to remain the sole possession of the original author.

d) Any reference to copyrighted material is done in the spirit of fair use, to illustrate the context of a discussion regarding public events for reference purposes that adds to the conversation, for which that discussion constitutes a new and separate piece of intellectual property, for which the referenced copyrighted material can not convey by itself, and that the author reserves the right to retain any profits from the newly created intellectual property. This term also serves to promote the referenced copyrighted material, without necessarily endorsing the material for any particular fitness, use, or purpose, for which the purpose of fair use referral law was created for, through inclusion of a partial, but not whole, body of works that the copyright fair use reference applies, for which the intent of all terms of this disclaimer apply to that reference of a copyrighted work.

e) Any humor if used, is not intended to offend people, and may be designed to apply the principals of peer pressure through reverse examination to accomplish the communication of principals or ideas that consist of traditional or proposed social values that are proven to advance the common good, and are not meant to discredit, disparage or demean any person or entities in any professional or personal manner, by attempting to share through the eyes or opinion of the author, for which it is expected that you read at your own risk, with no liability held to the author or any third parties who may store, transfer, or forward this message to others, in the traditions of free speech, fair use, and to play a positive role in a society that believes that graphically depicting male homosexuals having sex, and other unusual sex acts is considered free speech or that the use of abortion to limit Negros, Latinos, and other races from "spreading the wealth around" as a "matter of privacy" (which the author does not condone).

f) The use of humor is a known ingredient in providing teachable moments, and to validate and even demonstrate artistic expressions that are not shared by others, as demonstrated by many valuable scientific observations that were scoffed at in the past, yet proven to be quite valid decades later, upon which the humor used in all electronic communications by the author are based, in the principals and traditions of free speech and pursuit of happiness, and may not be a representation of others, including God.

g) It is the opinion of the author that you respect people when you consider their views, by reflecting their thoughts or actions against your own, which may include use of language that conveys an emotional depth that is to be imagined, but not enacted through use of language that accurately, or inaccurately describes the situation, circumstance, or idea, which does not imply that any action occur other than the consideration of the thought, for which beyond the author has no control, or liability for the action of the reader as presented in all terms of this diclaimer, and may simply be the venting of emotions with the intent of no consequence by the author to an audience the author assumes will understand the message and intent, and wishes to hear those views.

h) Since all intellectual property, discussions and other communications this disclaimer applies to, either in written, or electronic form, subscribe to the terms described in paragraph (e) and (g) of this disclaimer, under no circumstances are any communications meant to violate the terms of any electronic harassment laws which include the word “harm”, for which the author understands to be limited to the definition of physical harm (not self inflicted mental harm) that requires immediate medical attention based solely or in part by the communications of the author, regardless of whether the author chooses to remain anonymous or not.

j) Additional use of automated anonymous page use tracking computer scripts (web page programs) or advertisements may be licensed by www.google.com, for bandwidth verification, or determination of potential advertisement opportunities subject to all other terms described in this disclaimer.

k) Advertisements that may appear are not necessarily endorsed by the author, either by admission, or by silence, nor are any electronic links that may transport the reader to other web pages, sites, or

computers, and such links that may be provided for all or any of the following known or unknown purposes, but not limited to, informational, educational, and for the purpose of giving copy right credit referral information under the terms outlined in the conditions applied to the term "fair use" regarding conversations and print under US Copy Right Law, and for which the author assumes no liability for any particular use, fitness, or legality there of, any link, current, past, or future, which the reader should use at their sole risk, with no liability to the author, or any other party that may store, transmit, or otherwise facilitate use of the material for which this disclaimer applies.

l) It is the opinion of the author that effective 1 December, 2009, the proposed regulations from the FTC violate the first and fifth amendments of the United States Constitution, by infringing through economic affliction the burden without compensation all financial details concerning the communications of both free enterprise and opinion, and other civil rights such as "punishment must be fair" and not at the "discretion" of public officials, or that advertisers are assumed to be guilty of deception when United States law provides that you are innocent before being proven guilty, and are in fact demonstrations that there are current members of Congress that neither understand the spirit of the law our founding fathers made for the United States of America, or understand how they work in the opinion of the author, as of October 10th, 2009, especially in light of anticipated, and hopefully defeated, legislative taxes relating to energy use and the burden of publishers and advertisers to comply with the law and manage the environment, and in light that there are various consumer protection agencies, including the Better Business Bureau, which has free consumer information which preclude the use and need for excessive government regulation that burdens business with obstacles it may sense that it can not overcome without inflicting harm on the business plan or survival ability of the business to provide advertised, goods and or services.

m) Although the content provided meets or exceeds those new requirements to the knowledge of the author, and modifications to version 1.3 or 1.4 of this disclaimer is a result of the opinion of the author that “blogging” is another definition for a potentially infinite number or forms of electronic communication, as such the author will retroactively apply this version, 1.5 to all forms of previous communications, when and wherever possible, as time allows, in order to properly convey the intention of the author and to demonstrate an enthusiasm to comply with the law.

n) Use of this disclaimer for either personal or professional use is permitted with no restrictions. These restrictions or disclaimers do not prohibit the author from pursuing or communicating in a truthful manner, or guarantee that the audience will understand all things as intended.

o) This disclaimer is meant to establish the intent of the author who may participate in message forums, or create other written or electronic forms of communication to comply with current law, and may be revoked without prior notice, due to circumstances beyond the author's control, changes in the law, or for any of the purposes, terms, or conditions that may be in effect or described by this disclaimer, or to changes in this disclaimer that the author may clarify in a revised version of this disclaimer.

p) This disclaimer is attached to this message, and retroactively applies to all previous forms of communication by the author, and is done so because there is no recognized central suppository of a public disclaimer recognized by the Government of the United States to the author, and as such, the legal imperative of the author is to apply this disclaimer to all manner of correspondence as the author seems fit or prudent, so that no misunderstandings occur, or to comply with past, current or future revisions of the law, due to any of, but not limited to, any or all of the terms, partial terms, or combination of terms, of this disclaimer, which is derived from the freedom of speech, for it appears to the author that the zeal of lawmakers to take away free speech outweigh the providence of attaching this disclaimer to all correspondence for which this applies, and any inconvenience for which this presents, is the result of simply complying with the law, and not to inconvenience the reader.

Use of this private web site or web page is at your own risk, for which you agree not to sue the authors or anyone who may publish or share this article (which must include this disclaimer) with or without the consent of the author(s) if you do not agree, you are violating the terms of conditions to view the content, and you may not use or view the content for any purpose. Discussions, and or links to media and (or) resources do not automatically indicate that either the author, this web site, or anyone who discusses the material either endorse the individuals or organizations referenced, either in part, or in whole, and the author's ask the readers to make their own conclusions.

No individual or organization, including CSPAN, Glenn Beck, Fox News, Rush Limbaugh, endorses this web site or the use of their material on this web site at this time, which may be either removed by request or without notice. Use of the material is assumed appropriate for use under the copy right act concerning fair use for discussion, to include artistic expression to demonstrate a particular viewpoint, in a single or group of discussions. Video or film footage may not include the full context of the original publishing video or audio clips, and therefore are not necessarily representative of any referenced individual or organization

According to new standards established by the White House, it is suggested, but not proven, there is a direct connection between condoms and Social Security solvency, according to the latest non-investigation reports and "economic impact statements" by Green Peace, The Sierra Club, and other various Hollywood VIP clubs?

You can't avoid satire for very long around here, it just magically appears? Even God has a sense of humor?

There is nothing controversial about the "oath to do no harm" by doctors?

legal disclaimer:

Universal Legal Disclaimer for the Public Domain, Version 1.5, dated Nov 7th, 2009 (which supersedes all previous versions, to which this new version applies)

The writings, views, expressions expressed by this author to include all written and electronic forms of communication are subject to the following disclaimer and conditions:

a) The views expressed by this website and the author to include all electronic forms of communication are not representative of advertisers, or other third parties that may store and or transmit the messages from this private computer, which you may observe at your own risk, with no liability to the authors, or any party related to transmitting, storing, or any other aspect of the material involved, including email correspondence, which is not necessary to the function of the website, and may or may not be archived due to other limitations incorporated into the licensed email software in use at the time such as automated spam or virus filters. No personal information exchanged will be shared without your consent, or provided to third parties with out the express permission of the parties and, or, individuals concerned.

b) The author(s) of this content and those who may interact with it in various known or unknown electronic methods do not give permission to any third parties to share or provide private personal information who may operate as part of any type of electronic or written communications system, including all parties, who may technically intercept communications due to the nature of network conditions beyond both the author's legal and physical control, unless those communications represent violations of the law, upon which the author, and or web site will cooperate to pursue any legal remedies.

c) The views expressed by the author or website may or may not contain factual information, due to the use of sarcasm or parody. The views may or may not be complete, either by design, to pre-empt being called a liar even if telling the truth, or by error due to typographical, grammer, or other technical communication problems not realized or imagined, or the possibility of views based on false or missing information, or with the intention of being used for entertainment purposes only, and not as a definitive judgment on the actions, character, or reputation of an organization, individual, or groups of individuals, with the intent of communicating with a limited group of people, and not the general public, however no distribution restrictions apply for fair use purposes described by the US Copyright Office, if no other restrictions are present or communicated, with all commercial proceeds associated with the distribution of the content to remain the sole possession of the original author.

d) Any reference to copyrighted material is done in the spirit of fair use, to illustrate the context of a discussion regarding public events for reference purposes that adds to the conversation, for which that discussion constitutes a new and separate piece of intellectual property, for which the referenced copyrighted material can not convey by itself, and that the author reserves the right to retain any profits from the newly created intellectual property. This term also serves to promote the referenced copyrighted material, without necessarily endorsing the material for any particular fitness, use, or purpose, for which the purpose of fair use referral law was created for, through inclusion of a partial, but not whole, body of works that the copyright fair use reference applies, for which the intent of all terms of this disclaimer apply to that reference of a copyrighted work.

e) Any humor if used, is not intended to offend people, and may be designed to apply the principals of peer pressure through reverse examination to accomplish the communication of principals or ideas that consist of traditional or proposed social values that are proven to advance the common good, and are not meant to discredit, disparage or demean any person or entities in any professional or personal manner, by attempting to share through the eyes or opinion of the author, for which it is expected that you read at your own risk, with no liability held to the author or any third parties who may store, transfer, or forward this message to others, in the traditions of free speech, fair use, and to play a positive role in a society that believes that graphically depicting male homosexuals having sex, and other unusual sex acts is considered free speech or that the use of abortion to limit Negros, Latinos, and other races from "spreading the wealth around" as a "matter of privacy" (which the author does not condone).

f) The use of humor is a known ingredient in providing teachable moments, and to validate and even demonstrate artistic expressions that are not shared by others, as demonstrated by many valuable scientific observations that were scoffed at in the past, yet proven to be quite valid decades later, upon which the humor used in all electronic communications by the author are based, in the principals and traditions of free speech and pursuit of happiness, and may not be a representation of others, including God.

g) It is the opinion of the author that you respect people when you consider their views, by reflecting their thoughts or actions against your own, which may include use of language that conveys an emotional depth that is to be imagined, but not enacted through use of language that accurately, or inaccurately describes the situation, circumstance, or idea, which does not imply that any action occur other than the consideration of the thought, for which beyond the author has no control, or liability for the action of the reader as presented in all terms of this diclaimer, and may simply be the venting of emotions with the intent of no consequence by the author to an audience the author assumes will understand the message and intent, and wishes to hear those views.

h) Since all intellectual property, discussions and other communications this disclaimer applies to, either in written, or electronic form, subscribe to the terms described in paragraph (e) and (g) of this disclaimer, under no circumstances are any communications meant to violate the terms of any electronic harassment laws which include the word “harm”, for which the author understands to be limited to the definition of physical harm (not self inflicted mental harm) that requires immediate medical attention based solely or in part by the communications of the author, regardless of whether the author chooses to remain anonymous or not.

j) Additional use of automated anonymous page use tracking computer scripts (web page programs) or advertisements may be licensed by www.google.com, for bandwidth verification, or determination of potential advertisement opportunities subject to all other terms described in this disclaimer.

k) Advertisements that may appear are not necessarily endorsed by the author, either by admission, or by silence, nor are any electronic links that may transport the reader to other web pages, sites, or computers, and such links that may be provided for all or any of the following known or unknown purposes, but not limited to, informational, educational, and for the purpose of giving copy right credit referral information under the terms outlined in the conditions applied to the term "fair use" regarding conversations and print under US Copy Right Law, and for which the author assumes no liability for any particular use, fitness, or legality there of, any link, current, past, or future, which the reader should use at their sole risk, with no liability to the author, or any other party that may store, transmit, or otherwise facilitate use of the material for which this disclaimer applies.

l) It is the opinion of the author that effective 1 December, 2009, the proposed regulations from the FTC violate the first and fifth amendments of the United States Constitution, by infringing through economic affliction the burden without compensation all financial details concerning the communications of both free enterprise and opinion, and other civil rights such as "punishment must be fair" and not at the "discretion" of public officials, or that advertisers are assumed to be guilty of deception when United States law provides that you are innocent before being proven guilty, and are in fact demonstrations that there are current members of Congress that neither understand the spirit of the law our founding fathers made for the United States of America, or understand how they work in the opinion of the author, as of October 10th, 2009, especially in light of anticipated, and hopefully defeated, legislative taxes relating to energy use and the burden of publishers and advertisers to comply with the law and manage the environment, and in light that there are various consumer protection agencies, including the Better Business Bureau, which has free consumer information which preclude the use and need for excessive government regulation that burdens business with obstacles it may sense that it can not overcome without inflicting harm on the business plan or survival ability of the business to provide advertised, goods and or services.

m) Although the content provided meets or exceeds those new requirements to the knowledge of the author, and modifications to version 1.3 or 1.4 of this disclaimer is a result of the opinion of the author that “blogging” is another definition for a potentially infinite number or forms of electronic communication, as such the author will retroactively apply this version, 1.5 to all forms of previous communications, when and wherever possible, as time allows, in order to properly convey the intention of the author and to demonstrate an enthusiasm to comply with the law.

n) Use of this disclaimer for either personal or professional use is permitted with no restrictions. These restrictions or disclaimers do not prohibit the author from pursuing or communicating in a truthful manner, or guarantee that the audience will understand all things as intended.

o) This disclaimer is meant to establish the intent of the author who may participate in message forums, or create other written or electronic forms of communication to comply with current law, and may be revoked without prior notice, due to circumstances beyond the author's control, changes in the law, or for any of the purposes, terms, or conditions that may be in effect or described by this disclaimer, or to changes in this disclaimer that the author may clarify in a revised version of this disclaimer.

p) This disclaimer is attached to this message, and retroactively applies to all previous forms of communication by the author, and is done so because there is no recognized central suppository of a public disclaimer recognized by the Government of the United States to the author, and as such, the legal imperative of the author is to apply this disclaimer to all manner of correspondence as the author seems fit or prudent, so that no misunderstandings occur, or to comply with past, current or future revisions of the law, due to any of, but not limited to, any or all of the terms, partial terms, or combination of terms, of this disclaimer, which is derived from the freedom of speech, for it appears to the author that the zeal of lawmakers to take away free speech outweigh the providence of attaching this disclaimer to all correspondence for which this applies, and any inconvenience for which this presents, is the result of simply complying with the law, and not to inconvenience the reader.

Use of this private web site or web page is at your own risk, for which you agree not to sue the authors or anyone who may publish or share this article (which must include this disclaimer) with or without the consent of the author(s) if you do not agree, you are violating the terms of conditions to view the content, and you may not use or view the content for any purpose. Discussions, and or links to media and (or) resources do not automatically indicate that either the author, this web site, or anyone who discusses the material either endorse the individuals or organizations referenced, either in part, or in whole, and the author's ask the readers to make their own conclusions.

No individual or organization, including CSPAN, Glenn Beck, Fox News, Rush Limbaugh, endorses this web site or the use of their material on this web site at this time, which may be either removed by request or without notice. Use of the material is assumed appropriate for use under the copy right act concerning fair use for discussion, to include artistic expression to demonstrate a particular viewpoint, in a single or group of discussions. Video or film footage may not include the full context of the original publishing video or audio clips, and therefore are not necessarily representative of any referenced individual or organization

Yes, you are changing the subject. The header discusses property

Yeah, did you notice how they did not specify what those requirements are? Why bother with the details, silly me? Did you notice how she just threw in there, the monthly ratio of men who become of age every month to serve the military, and what ratio of that total enlisted?
Yeah, those facts and figures just make you drop your jaw, don't they?

When I was in the army we had to take an annual fitness test.

Have you seen the size of these guys serving in the military? All the ones that I have seen don't look they are starving to me? They would turn you down from serving because you are a few pounds over weight, or you can't fit through the door? Who, What, When, Where, Why? Does the press even do their job any more?

Hey, Bagdad Bob, can you fit all that on the palm of your hand, or will that screw up your palm reader you got hiding behind the curtains in the White House? So let me guess, are they trying to tell kids you can get out of serving the military if you get fat?

Bobby Gibbs runs out of breath hiking up to the press room.

Or is Michelle Obama insulting every kid out there by saying you don't have the will power to loose weight to serve your country if you get fat? What do you think Bagdad Bob, we need some more photo ops at the White House, you people are just too boring?

Well, that's a new technique, tapping into the anger of children? Why, thank you Michelle, we never would have had to say that about you, that you think American children are too weak, too stupid to loose weight on their own, after all, you were not elected, so you want to debate your ideas along with your husband?

You want to act like the mommy of America?

Keep that slight of hand, accepting responsibility going folks, tapping into that anger, that's just never been done before, has it?

legal disclaimer:

Universal Legal Disclaimer for the Public Domain, Version 1.5, dated Nov 7th, 2009 (which supersedes all previous versions, to which this new version applies)

The writings, views, expressions expressed by this author to include all written and electronic forms of communication are subject to the following disclaimer and conditions:

a) The views expressed by this website and the author to include all electronic forms of communication are not representative of advertisers, or other third parties that may store and or transmit the messages from this private computer, which you may observe at your own risk, with no liability to the authors, or any party related to transmitting, storing, or any other aspect of the material involved, including email correspondence, which is not necessary to the function of the website, and may or may not be archived due to other limitations incorporated into the licensed email software in use at the time such as automated spam or virus filters. No personal information exchanged will be shared without your consent, or provided to third parties with out the express permission of the parties and, or, individuals concerned.

b) The author(s) of this content and those who may interact with it in various known or unknown electronic methods do not give permission to any third parties to share or provide private personal information who may operate as part of any type of electronic or written communications system, including all parties, who may technically intercept communications due to the nature of network conditions beyond both the author's legal and physical control, unless those communications represent violations of the law, upon which the author, and or web site will cooperate to pursue any legal remedies.

c) The views expressed by the author or website may or may not contain factual information, due to the use of sarcasm or parody. The views may or may not be complete, either by design, to pre-empt being called a liar even if telling the truth, or by error due to typographical, grammer, or other technical communication problems not realized or imagined, or the possibility of views based on false or missing information, or with the intention of being used for entertainment purposes only, and not as a definitive judgment on the actions, character, or reputation of an organization, individual, or groups of individuals, with the intent of communicating with a limited group of people, and not the general public, however no distribution restrictions apply for fair use purposes described by the US Copyright Office, if no other restrictions are present or communicated, with all commercial proceeds associated with the distribution of the content to remain the sole possession of the original author.

d) Any reference to copyrighted material is done in the spirit of fair use, to illustrate the context of a discussion regarding public events for reference purposes that adds to the conversation, for which that discussion constitutes a new and separate piece of intellectual property, for which the referenced copyrighted material can not convey by itself, and that the author reserves the right to retain any profits from the newly created intellectual property. This term also serves to promote the referenced copyrighted material, without necessarily endorsing the material for any particular fitness, use, or purpose, for which the purpose of fair use referral law was created for, through inclusion of a partial, but not whole, body of works that the copyright fair use reference applies, for which the intent of all terms of this disclaimer apply to that reference of a copyrighted work.

e) Any humor if used, is not intended to offend people, and may be designed to apply the principals of peer pressure through reverse examination to accomplish the communication of principals or ideas that consist of traditional or proposed social values that are proven to advance the common good, and are not meant to discredit, disparage or demean any person or entities in any professional or personal manner, by attempting to share through the eyes or opinion of the author, for which it is expected that you read at your own risk, with no liability held to the author or any third parties who may store, transfer, or forward this message to others, in the traditions of free speech, fair use, and to play a positive role in a society that believes that graphically depicting male homosexuals having sex, and other unusual sex acts is considered free speech or that the use of abortion to limit Negros, Latinos, and other races from "spreading the wealth around" as a "matter of privacy" (which the author does not condone).

f) The use of humor is a known ingredient in providing teachable moments, and to validate and even demonstrate artistic expressions that are not shared by others, as demonstrated by many valuable scientific observations that were scoffed at in the past, yet proven to be quite valid decades later, upon which the humor used in all electronic communications by the author are based, in the principals and traditions of free speech and pursuit of happiness, and may not be a representation of others, including God.

g) It is the opinion of the author that you respect people when you consider their views, by reflecting their thoughts or actions against your own, which may include use of language that conveys an emotional depth that is to be imagined, but not enacted through use of language that accurately, or inaccurately describes the situation, circumstance, or idea, which does not imply that any action occur other than the consideration of the thought, for which beyond the author has no control, or liability for the action of the reader as presented in all terms of this diclaimer, and may simply be the venting of emotions with the intent of no consequence by the author to an audience the author assumes will understand the message and intent, and wishes to hear those views.

h) Since all intellectual property, discussions and other communications this disclaimer applies to, either in written, or electronic form, subscribe to the terms described in paragraph (e) and (g) of this disclaimer, under no circumstances are any communications meant to violate the terms of any electronic harassment laws which include the word ï¿½harmï¿½, for which the author understands to be limited to the definition of physical harm (not self inflicted mental harm) that requires immediate medical attention based solely or in part by the communications of the author, regardless of whether the author chooses to remain anonymous or not.

j) Additional use of automated anonymous page use tracking computer scripts (web page programs) or advertisements may be licensed by www.google.com, for bandwidth verification, or determination of potential advertisement opportunities subject to all other terms described in this disclaimer.

k) Advertisements that may appear are not necessarily endorsed by the author, either by admission, or by silence, nor are any electronic links that may transport the reader to other web pages, sites, or computers, and such links that may be provided for all or any of the following known or unknown purposes, but not limited to, informational, educational, and for the purpose of giving copy right credit referral information under the terms outlined in the conditions applied to the term "fair use" regarding conversations and print under US Copy Right Law, and for which the author assumes no liability for any particular use, fitness, or legality there of, any link, current, past, or future, which the reader should use at their sole risk, with no liability to the author, or any other party that may store, transmit, or otherwise facilitate use of the material for which this disclaimer applies.

l) It is the opinion of the author that effective 1 December, 2009, the proposed regulations from the FTC violate the first and fifth amendments of the United States Constitution, by infringing through economic affliction the burden without compensation all financial details concerning the communications of both free enterprise and opinion, and other civil rights such as "punishment must be fair" and not at the "discretion" of public officials, or that advertisers are assumed to be guilty of deception when United States law provides that you are innocent before being proven guilty, and are in fact demonstrations that there are current members of Congress that neither understand the spirit of the law our founding fathers made for the United States of America, or understand how they work in the opinion of the author, as of October 10th, 2009, especially in light of anticipated, and hopefully defeated, legislative taxes relating to energy use and the burden of publishers and advertisers to comply with the law and manage the environment, and in light that there are various consumer protection agencies, including the Better Business Bureau, which has free consumer information which preclude the use and need for excessive government regulation that burdens business with obstacles it may sense that it can not overcome without inflicting harm on the business plan or survival ability of the business to provide advertised, goods and or services.

m) Although the content provided meets or exceeds those new requirements to the knowledge of the author, and modifications to version 1.3 or 1.4 of this disclaimer is a result of the opinion of the author that ï¿½bloggingï¿½ is another definition for a potentially infinite number or forms of electronic communication, as such the author will retroactively apply this version, 1.5 to all forms of previous communications, when and wherever possible, as time allows, in order to properly convey the intention of the author and to demonstrate an enthusiasm to comply with the law.

n) Use of this disclaimer for either personal or professional use is permitted with no restrictions. These restrictions or disclaimers do not prohibit the author from pursuing or communicating in a truthful manner, or guarantee that the audience will understand all things as intended.

o) This disclaimer is meant to establish the intent of the author who may participate in message forums, or create other written or electronic forms of communication to comply with current law, and may be revoked without prior notice, due to circumstances beyond the author's control, changes in the law, or for any of the purposes, terms, or conditions that may be in effect or described by this disclaimer, or to changes in this disclaimer that the author may clarify in a revised version of this disclaimer.

p) This disclaimer is attached to this message, and retroactively applies to all previous forms of communication by the author, and is done so because there is no recognized central suppository of a public disclaimer recognized by the Government of the United States to the author, and as such, the legal imperative of the author is to apply this disclaimer to all manner of correspondence as the author seems fit or prudent, so that no misunderstandings occur, or to comply with past, current or future revisions of the law, due to any of, but not limited to, any or all of the terms, partial terms, or combination of terms, of this disclaimer, which is derived from the freedom of speech, for it appears to the author that the zeal of lawmakers to take away free speech outweigh the providence of attaching this disclaimer to all correspondence for which this applies, and any inconvenience for which this presents, is the result of simply complying with the law, and not to inconvenience the reader.

Use of this private web site or web page is at your own risk, for which you agree not to sue the authors or anyone who may publish or share this article (which must include this disclaimer) with or without the consent of the author(s) if you do not agree, you are violating the terms of conditions to view the content, and you may not use or view the content for any purpose. Discussions, and or links to media and (or) resources do not automatically indicate that either the author, this web site, or anyone who discusses the material either endorse the individuals or organizations referenced, either in part, or in whole, and the author's ask the readers to make their own conclusions.

No individual or organization, including CSPAN, Glenn Beck, Fox News, Rush Limbaugh, endorses this web site or the use of their material on this web site at this time, which may be either removed by request or without notice. Use of the material is assumed appropriate for use under the copy right act concerning fair use for discussion, to include artistic expression to demonstrate a particular viewpoint, in a single or group of discussions. Video or film footage may not include the full context of the original publishing video or audio clips, and therefore are not necessarily representative of any referenced individual or organization

I did some research into the Pyramid supplies. As I said earlier, they were not built for continuous service. Apparently, at any load.
Shame, too. With modification, they can be a pretty decent supply.

Apparently Pyramid has been taking design tips for ICOM.

Any rioting in the streets in America, all over America, will be/would be, Directly Because of our Worse Enemy, U.S.fed govt! Do you understand that?

That Sunlight out there, reflecting off of that snow we got last night and also today is BRIGHT! I took some photos of that snow.Next week, when I go to Wal Mart, I will get them developed and snail mail them to that married Irish woman wayyyyyyyyyy over yonder across the big pond.Leetle doggy, she doesn't like that damn snow either.Smart doggy, she is.

OMG! BOA lowered someones interest rate? does that mean Hell freezes over? it's not quite the middle of Feb, in a new year, and it's really looking crazy. and, my bud can't get a flight plan to get out of Dodge today, so, i miss Daytona this year and get to freeze my butt off a few more days. fun stuff here. i was hopping to get a nice picture of Danica in Jr's number 7. or, i guess i should say Chips number 7. oh crap, such is life. stay safe out there.

If I recall correctly that's exactly where my RS-50M went, into a repeater vault.

I used to use it when I was running 170 watts or so on 2 meters.

Courtesy copy of another page in a book I am writing, no reply necessary or expected, however I may consider comments before the final edit:

What is the difference between condescending humor and satire? A big paycheck or a little paycheck, if you get one at all? That's why I would never use the word “punk”, because there are more interesting ways of saying things, and of course it gets boring to just copy what other people are doing? Condescending humor is rarely funny, and people are not really happy?

But of course, that is the business plan of some who splice that into their agenda, you can get into some really weird theories about the business plans of the “competition”? Well, I am not a doctor, and this is not a lecture. Rush Limbaugh contemplating that he retire based on everyone agreeing with him? Is that genius in action? A lot have tried, but there is nothing out there that approaches the effectiveness of what Rush does in three hours? I hope he does not retire unless he wants to, sure, there are other good radio shows out there, but none of them come close to the performance, and personal touch, the good manners, with the American People that Rush Limbaugh does, and I believe he has only begun to tap into the potential he represents?

That's saying a lot, considering that the competition is paying hundreds of people to do the work that he and his meager staff accomplish on a daily basis? That does not happen because Rush is white, or who he is, it is because of what he does? Wow, such a “progressive” thought? You would not believe the garbage I heard today from those who claim to be “progressive” and they were stirring up racial hate intentionally, I kid you not. They were saying that Rush Limbaugh was feeding on people's bigotry even if he was not a bigot. And that was the part that I could repeat without being ashamed. Feeding on people's racial bigotry requires that you talk about it? That's “progressive”? Or “delusional”?

Oh, and I also discovered that Martin Luther King, did not believe in civil rights, if what I heard earlier today is true? That “progressives” hi-jacked the Martin Luther King movement by feeding on the emotions of those who perceived some sort of “injustice” that is impossible to achieve in the first place, and call it “fighting for civil rights”?

It's not progressive to say you are “fighting for civil rights” when you don't want them people. If Billy Bob drinks beer every night, shows up for work when he wants to, but can't get fired because of a contract, you are violating the principals of my civil rights to take my tax money and just give it to Billy Bob when he has not earned it?

I can expand on that one sentence to write a whole book on the subject, couldn't I? If 60% of Shiela Jackson Lee's district has dropped out of high school, and we know that the unemployment rate for non-skilled workers is 30%, one out of five families in her district, will never come out of poverty unless they work their way out of it? Now is that a Martin Luther King explanation, or would you rather I hypnotize you with buzz words?

Health care is private property, it is a civil right issue, you are not entitled to other people's property. The future of the United States hinges on this simple concept, because all other laws are based on that law, your privacy, and a few others? And that's what the “progressives” want to do, disguise their agenda of “regression” by taking away your civil rights so you end up living like a slave on the plantation Cuba?

Oh, and they don't want to call Rush Limbaugh, what he is, a Conservative, they want to call them “right wingers”? What happens when you “wing it”? Good chance you will fail, that's why they try to deceive anyone who listens to them with their little “buzz words”? One little buzz word? Environmentalism? We only have one planet? We only have one economy people, we only have one currency. Part of what secures your currency (a responsibility of Congress) is the intellectual property, the concept that you understand the fiscal mechanics of what ever it is that you propose? You want alternative energy? It better be dirt cheap, or you won't get it, period. People can adapt fairly easily to weather changes, we're used to it. People do not adapt to financial chaos, do they? Progessive is not a buzz word, it is a lie?

Which brings me to the candidate in Texas, Deborah Medina, who has not provided the necessary details to accomplish her stated agenda? Did Barack Obama campaign on the “Constitution”? Did Barack Obama campaign on fiscal responsibility, and other buzz word topics? So Bagdad Gibbs, has written on the palm of his hand, the following four words:

Poll, Numbers, Hope, Change

So we've got to be very careful that just because you say you belong to the “Tea Party Movement” that you don't just put some buzz words out there, and make some speeches? You want to cut spending? Who, What, Where, When, Why? Who is the CPA? How many? Who is the legislative lawyer? What is going to be impacted? Why? When? For how long? You don't want property taxes? Who has done that before, what spending will you cut, etc., etc.

And I agree, Deborah has no clue about the danger of the job that she is asking to perform? If 9/11 is a grey area after all these years, how will the people who have the job to keep real killers, drugs, and money out of the borders do their job, when everything you do will be a question mark? Did I get fired because of x? Did so and so get transferred because of y? Law enforcement is a community, and if you can't trust that community, you will not be able to perform your duties, and vice versa?

That's just the tip of the ice berg with technical questions? Lets move on to personality? Do you have a bully personality? Are you condescending? Can you direct the National Guard? What are the three general orders? Do you answer questions with the same memorized answers? Can you think on the fly? Are you too pale or look physically ill? Should people that work in medical fields also have ties to law enforcement in relation to the DEA vs. a candidate that does not pose any risks in that area?

Gov. Rick Perry understands that transportation is a key element of future concerns, both on a state and national level, and he does not want to give rail roads a monopoly with freight? You can write a book on transportation, do you understand the subject? When asked “who are you” you can't just say, “Tea Party Member for 2 years, two kids, have a big dog, speak French, and want to cut your taxes?” Was that a non-complete sentence? Was there a noun, pro-noun, adverb, verb, or one of those other “thingy(s)” in there?

We've got armies of speech writers out there, and that's not working, we need armies of CPAs? When governments are telling home based business you belong to government unions, then the problem is government, and a band aid, the “labor union”, can not be used on deep financial wounds in the country, we have to stitch up the skin that was ripped apart by looters with knives? You've got to unite a nation so that we don't need unions in the first place?

Oh, and look forward to another special guest appearance by “LaWeezie” who will explain the benefits of how the Iraq war was a bi-partisan accomplishment that has united the People of the United States and that no political party would dare claim a partisan victory and no one with their “slight of hand” technique, which also has on the palm of that hand the following four words:

Poll Numbers Hope
Change

would dare say so in the “echo chamber”?

Oh, yah, we're gonna seize that moment....we're gonna lay it on ya brotha

Universal Legal Disclaimer for the Public Domain, Version 1.5, dated Nov 7th, 2009 (which supersedes all previous versions, to which this new version applies)

The writings, views, expressions expressed by this author to include all written and electronic forms of communication are subject to the following disclaimer and conditions:

a) The views expressed by this website and the author to include all electronic forms of communication are not representative of advertisers, or other third parties that may store and or transmit the messages from this private computer, which you may observe at your own risk, with no liability to the authors, or any party related to transmitting, storing, or any other aspect of the material involved, including email correspondence, which is not necessary to the function of the website, and may or may not be archived due to other limitations incorporated into the licensed email software in use at the time such as automated spam or virus filters. No personal information exchanged will be shared without your consent, or provided to third parties with out the express permission of the parties and, or, individuals concerned.

b) The author(s) of this content and those who may interact with it in various known or unknown electronic methods do not give permission to any third parties to share or provide private personal information who may operate as part of any type of electronic or written communications system, including all parties, who may technically intercept communications due to the nature of network conditions beyond both the author's legal and physical control, unless those communications represent violations of the law, upon which the author, and or web site will cooperate to pursue any legal remedies.

c) The views expressed by the author or website may or may not contain factual information, due to the use of sarcasm or parody. The views may or may not be complete, either by design, to pre-empt being called a liar even if telling the truth, or by error due to typographical, grammer, or other technical communication problems not realized or imagined, or the possibility of views based on false or missing information, or with the intention of being used for entertainment purposes only, and not as a definitive judgment on the actions, character, or reputation of an organization, individual, or groups of individuals, with the intent of communicating with a limited group of people, and not the general public, however no distribution restrictions apply for fair use purposes described by the US Copyright Office, if no other restrictions are present or communicated, with all commercial proceeds associated with the distribution of the content to remain the sole possession of the original author.

d) Any reference to copyrighted material is done in the spirit of fair use, to illustrate the context of a discussion regarding public events for reference purposes that adds to the conversation, for which that discussion constitutes a new and separate piece of intellectual property, for which the referenced copyrighted material can not convey by itself, and that the author reserves the right to retain any profits from the newly created intellectual property. This term also serves to promote the referenced copyrighted material, without necessarily endorsing the material for any particular fitness, use, or purpose, for which the purpose of fair use referral law was created for, through inclusion of a partial, but not whole, body of works that the copyright fair use reference applies, for which the intent of all terms of this disclaimer apply to that reference of a copyrighted work.

e) Any humor if used, is not intended to offend people, and may be designed to apply the principals of peer pressure through reverse examination to accomplish the communication of principals or ideas that consist of traditional or proposed social values that are proven to advance the common good, and are not meant to discredit, disparage or demean any person or entities in any professional or personal manner, by attempting to share through the eyes or opinion of the author, for which it is expected that you read at your own risk, with no liability held to the author or any third parties who may store, transfer, or forward this message to others, in the traditions of free speech, fair use, and to play a positive role in a society that believes that graphically depicting male homosexuals having sex, and other unusual sex acts is considered free speech or that the use of abortion to limit Negros, Latinos, and other races from "spreading the wealth around" as a "matter of privacy" (which the author does not condone).

f) The use of humor is a known ingredient in providing teachable moments, and to validate and even demonstrate artistic expressions that are not shared by others, as demonstrated by many valuable scientific observations that were scoffed at in the past, yet proven to be quite valid decades later, upon which the humor used in all electronic communications by the author are based, in the principals and traditions of free speech and pursuit of happiness, and may not be a representation of others, including God.

g) It is the opinion of the author that you respect people when you consider their views, by reflecting their thoughts or actions against your own, which may include use of language that conveys an emotional depth that is to be imagined, but not enacted through use of language that accurately, or inaccurately describes the situation, circumstance, or idea, which does not imply that any action occur other than the consideration of the thought, for which beyond the author has no control, or liability for the action of the reader as presented in all terms of this diclaimer, and may simply be the venting of emotions with the intent of no consequence by the author to an audience the author assumes will understand the message and intent, and wishes to hear those views.

h) Since all intellectual property, discussions and other communications this disclaimer applies to, either in written, or electronic form, subscribe to the terms described in paragraph (e) and (g) of this disclaimer, under no circumstances are any communications meant to violate the terms of any electronic harassment laws which include the word “harm”, for which the author understands to be limited to the definition of physical harm (not self inflicted mental harm) that requires immediate medical attention based solely or in part by the communications of the author, regardless of whether the author chooses to remain anonymous or not.

i) It is the intention and opinion of the author that History is full of individuals that are not harmed by criticism, and in fact such criticism can motivate and inspire them to prove their critics wrong. Based on this historical evidence, any alleged mental harm amounts to self inflicted injury not treatable by either medical or other professionals (despite the fact that many people live from the profits of lies through gradual illusion, without judicial interference), for which the author has no control over the mental development of any potential reader prior to the discovery or reading of the material for which this disclaimer applies, as evident by the necessity that speech is to be protected by law as determined by the founders of the United States of America, who, in the opinion of the author, wrote the legal framework, which was created by God, not slaves.

j) Additional use of automated anonymous page use tracking computer scripts (web page programs) or advertisements may be licensed by www.google.com, for bandwidth verification, or determination of potential advertisement opportunities subject to all other terms described in this disclaimer.

k) Advertisements that may appear are not necessarily endorsed by the author, either by admission, or by silence, nor are any electronic links that may transport the reader to other web pages, sites, or computers, and such links that may be provided for all or any of the following known or unknown purposes, but not limited to, informational, educational, and for the purpose of giving copy right credit referral information under the terms outlined in the conditions applied to the term "fair use" regarding conversations and print under US Copy Right Law, and for which the author assumes no liability for any particular use, fitness, or legality there of, any link, current, past, or future, which the reader should use at their sole risk, with no liability to the author, or any other party that may store, transmit, or otherwise facilitate use of the material for which this disclaimer applies.

l) It is the opinion of the author that effective 1 December, 2009, the proposed regulations from the FTC violate the first and fifth amendments of the United States Constitution, by infringing through economic affliction the burden without compensation all financial details concerning the communications of both free enterprise and opinion, and other civil rights such as "punishment must be fair" and not at the "discretion" of public officials, or that advertisers are assumed to be guilty of deception when United States law provides that you are innocent before being proven guilty, and are in fact demonstrations that there are current members of Congress that neither understand the spirit of the law our founding fathers made for the United States of America, or understand how they work in the opinion of the author, as of October 10th, 2009, especially in light of anticipated, and hopefully defeated, legislative taxes relating to energy use and the burden of publishers and advertisers to comply with the law and manage the environment, and in light that there are various consumer protection agencies, including the Better Business Bureau, which has free consumer information which preclude the use and need for excessive government regulation that burdens business with obstacles it may sense that it can not overcome without inflicting harm on the business plan or survival ability of the business to provide advertised, goods and or services.

m) Although the content provided meets or exceeds those new requirements to the knowledge of the author, and modifications to version 1.3 or 1.4 of this disclaimer is a result of the opinion of the author that “blogging” is another definition for a potentially infinite number or forms of electronic communication, as such the author will retroactively apply this version, 1.5 to all forms of previous communications, when and wherever possible, as time allows, in order to properly convey the intention of the author and to demonstrate an enthusiasm to comply with the law.

n) Use of this disclaimer for either personal or professional use is permitted with no restrictions. These restrictions or disclaimers do not prohibit the author from pursuing or communicating in a truthful manner, or guarantee that the audience will understand all things as intended.

o) This disclaimer is meant to establish the intent of the author who may participate in message forums, or create other written or electronic forms of communication to comply with current law, and may be revoked without prior notice, due to circumstances beyond the author's control, changes in the law, or for any of the purposes, terms, or conditions that may be in effect or described by this disclaimer, or to changes in this disclaimer that the author may clarify in a revised version of this disclaimer.

p) This disclaimer is attached to this message, and retroactively applies to all previous forms of communication by the author, and is done so because there is no recognized central suppository of a public disclaimer recognized by the Government of the United States to the author, and as such, the legal imperative of the author is to apply this disclaimer to all manner of correspondence as the author seems fit or prudent, so that no misunderstandings occur, or to comply with past, current or future revisions of the law, due to any of, but not limited to, any or all of the terms, partial terms, or combination of terms, of this disclaimer, which is derived from the freedom of speech, for it appears to the author that the zeal of lawmakers to take away free speech outweigh the providence of attaching this disclaimer to all correspondence for which this applies, and any inconvenience for which this presents, is the result of simply complying with the law, and not to inconvenience the reader.

Use of this private web site or web page is at your own risk, for which you agree not to sue the authors or anyone who may publish or share this article (which must include this disclaimer) with or without the consent of the author(s) if you do not agree, you are violating the terms of conditions to view the content, and you may not use or view the content for any purpose. Discussions, and or links to media and (or) resources do not automatically indicate that either the author, this web site, or anyone who discusses the material either endorse the individuals or organizations referenced, either in part, or in whole, and the author's ask the readers to make their own conclusions.

No individual or organization, including CSPAN, Glenn Beck, Fox News, Rush Limbaugh, endorses this web site or the use of their material on this web site at this time, which may be either removed by request or without notice. Use of the material is assumed appropriate for use under the copy right act concerning fair use for discussion, to include artistic expression to demonstrate a particular viewpoint, in a single or group of discussions. 1599. Will record snow falls create flooding?

If all that snow melts, either quickly, or slowly, if it causes flooding, will FEMA be prepared, or will it be exhausted by all the attention given overseas? We should ask Shiela Jackson Lee, because, as usual, she is one step ahead of all the tv cameras? Hmmm, I wonder who lives by rivers....

Now then, you have months to prepare for possible flooding, which is a common event, why it even happens overseas? Well, Gosh Darn Golly Gee, one of the biggest exports of the United States are powerful pumps that are economical enough to limit the damage of floods when properly installed, and maintained?

I know, I know, stop using bigotry in my partisan agenda, I'm just so selfish?

But what if your political party says they are concerned about people, but are not? That's tapping into that anger, that's slight of hand, that's accepting responsibility? Defect to the Republicans Mr. Obama! You said you wanted change, right? LOL.

legal disclaimer:

Universal Legal Disclaimer for the Public Domain, Version 1.5, dated Nov 7th, 2009 (which supersedes all previous versions, to which this new version applies)

The writings, views, expressions expressed by this author to include all written and electronic forms of communication are subject to the following disclaimer and conditions:

a) The views expressed by this website and the author to include all electronic forms of communication are not representative of advertisers, or other third parties that may store and or transmit the messages from this private computer, which you may observe at your own risk, with no liability to the authors, or any party related to transmitting, storing, or any other aspect of the material involved, including email correspondence, which is not necessary to the function of the website, and may or may not be archived due to other limitations incorporated into the licensed email software in use at the time such as automated spam or virus filters. No personal information exchanged will be shared without your consent, or provided to third parties with out the express permission of the parties and,

or, individuals concerned.

b) The author(s) of this content and those who may interact with it in various known or unknown electronic methods do not give permission to any third parties to share or provide private personal information who may operate as part of any type of electronic or written communications system, including all parties, who may technically intercept communications due to the nature of network conditions beyond both the author's legal and physical control, unless those communications represent violations of the law, upon which the author, and or web site will cooperate to pursue any legal remedies.

c) The views expressed by the author or website may or may not contain factual information, due to the use of sarcasm or parody. The views may or may not be complete, either by design, to pre-empt being called a liar even if telling the truth, or by error due to typographical, grammer, or other technical communication problems not realized or imagined, or the possibility of views based on false or missing information, or with the intention of being used for entertainment purposes only, and not as a definitive judgment on the actions, character, or reputation of an organization, individual, or groups of individuals, with the intent of communicating with a limited group of people, and not the general public, however no distribution restrictions apply for fair use purposes described by the US Copyright Office, if no other restrictions are present or communicated, with all commercial proceeds associated with the distribution of the content to remain the sole possession of the original author.

d) Any reference to copyrighted material is done in the spirit of fair use, to illustrate the context of a discussion regarding public events for reference purposes that adds to the conversation, for which that discussion constitutes a new and separate piece of intellectual property, for which the referenced copyrighted material can not convey by itself, and that the author reserves the right to retain any profits from the newly created intellectual property. This term also serves to promote the referenced copyrighted material, without necessarily endorsing the material for any particular fitness, use, or purpose, for which the purpose of fair use referral law was created for, through inclusion of a partial, but not whole, body of works that the copyright fair use reference applies, for which the intent of all terms of this disclaimer apply to that reference of a copyrighted work.

e) Any humor if used, is not intended to offend people, and may be designed to apply the principals of peer pressure through reverse examination to accomplish the communication of principals or ideas that consist of traditional or proposed social values that are proven to advance the common good, and are not meant to discredit, disparage or demean any person or entities in any professional or personal manner, by attempting to share through the eyes or opinion of the author, for which it is expected that you read at your own risk, with no liability held to the author or any third parties who may store, transfer, or forward this message to others, in the traditions of free speech, fair use, and to play a positive role in a society that believes that graphically depicting male homosexuals having sex, and other unusual sex acts is considered free speech or that the use of abortion to limit Negros, Latinos, and other races from "spreading the wealth around" as a "matter of privacy" (which the author does not condone).

f) The use of humor is a known ingredient in providing teachable moments, and to validate and even demonstrate artistic expressions that are not shared by others, as demonstrated by many valuable scientific observations that were scoffed at in the past, yet proven to be quite valid decades later, upon which the humor used in all electronic communications by the author are based, in the principals and traditions of free speech and pursuit of happiness, and may not be a representation of others, including God.

g) It is the opinion of the author that you respect people when you consider their views, by reflecting their thoughts or actions against your own, which may include use of language that conveys an emotional depth that is to be imagined, but not enacted through use of language that accurately, or inaccurately describes the situation, circumstance, or idea, which does not imply that any action occur other than the consideration of the thought, for which beyond the author has no control, or liability for the action of the reader as presented in all terms of this diclaimer, and may simply be the venting of emotions with the intent of no consequence by the author to an audience the author assumes will understand the message and intent, and wishes to hear those views.

h) Since all intellectual property, discussions and other communications this disclaimer applies to, either in written, or electronic form, subscribe to the terms described in paragraph (e) and (g) of this disclaimer, under no circumstances are any communications meant to violate the terms of any electronic harassment laws which include the word “harm”, for which the author understands to be limited to the definition of physical harm (not self inflicted mental harm) that requires immediate medical attention based solely or in part by the communications of the author, regardless of whether the author chooses to remain anonymous or not.

i) It is the intention and opinion of the author that History is full of individuals that are not harmed by criticism, and in fact such criticism can motivate and inspire them to prove their critics wrong. Based on this historical evidence, any alleged mental harm amounts to self inflicted injury not treatable by either medical or other professionals (despite the fact that many people live from the profits of lies through gradual illusion, without judicial interference), for which the author has no control over the mental development of any potential reader prior to the discovery or reading of the material for which this disclaimer applies, as evident by the necessity that speech is to be protected by law as determined by the founders of the United States of America, who, in the opinion of the author, wrote the legal framework, which was created by God, not slaves.

j) Additional use of automated anonymous page use tracking computer scripts (web page programs) or advertisements may be licensed by www.google.com, for bandwidth verification, or determination of potential advertisement opportunities subject to all other terms described in this disclaimer.

k) Advertisements that may appear are not necessarily endorsed by the author, either by admission, or by silence, nor are any electronic links that may transport the reader to other web pages, sites, or computers, and such links that may be provided for all or any of the following known or unknown purposes, but not limited to, informational, educational, and for the purpose of giving copy right credit referral information under the terms outlined in the conditions applied to the term "fair use" regarding conversations and print under US Copy Right Law, and for which the author assumes no liability for any particular use, fitness, or legality there of, any link, current, past, or future, which the reader should use at their sole risk, with no liability to the author, or any other party that may store, transmit, or otherwise facilitate use of the material for which this disclaimer applies.

l) It is the opinion of the author that effective 1 December, 2009, the proposed regulations from the FTC violate the first and fifth amendments of the United States Constitution, by infringing through economic affliction the burden without compensation all financial details concerning the communications of both free enterprise and opinion, and other civil rights such as "punishment must be fair" and not at the "discretion" of public officials, or that advertisers are assumed to be guilty of deception when United States law provides that you are innocent before being proven guilty, and are in fact demonstrations that there are current members of Congress that neither understand the spirit of the law our founding fathers made for the United States of America, or understand how they work in the opinion of the author, as of October 10th, 2009, especially in light of anticipated, and hopefully defeated, legislative taxes relating to energy use and the burden of publishers and advertisers to comply with the law and manage the environment, and in light that there are various consumer protection agencies, including the Better Business Bureau, which has free consumer information which preclude the use and need for excessive government regulation that burdens business with obstacles it may sense that it can not overcome without inflicting harm on the business plan or survival ability of the business to provide advertised, goods and or services.

m) Although the content provided meets or exceeds those new requirements to the knowledge of the author, and modifications to version 1.3 or 1.4 of this disclaimer is a result of the opinion of the author that “blogging” is another definition for a potentially infinite number or forms of electronic communication, as such the author will retroactively apply this version, 1.5 to all forms of previous communications, when and wherever possible, as time allows, in order to properly convey the intention of the author and to demonstrate an enthusiasm to comply with the law.

n) Use of this disclaimer for either personal or professional use is permitted with no restrictions. These restrictions or disclaimers do not prohibit the author from pursuing or communicating in a truthful manner, or guarantee that the audience will understand all things as intended.

o) This disclaimer is meant to establish the intent of the author who may participate in message forums, or create other written or electronic forms of communication to comply with current law, and may be revoked without prior notice, due to circumstances beyond the author's control, changes in the law, or for any of the purposes, terms, or conditions that may be in effect or described by this disclaimer, or to changes in this disclaimer that the author may clarify in a revised version of this disclaimer.

p) This disclaimer is attached to this message, and retroactively applies to all previous forms of communication by the author, and is done so because there is no recognized central suppository of a public disclaimer recognized by the Government of the United States to the author, and as such, the legal imperative of the author is to apply this disclaimer to all manner of correspondence as the author seems fit or prudent, so that no misunderstandings occur, or to comply with past, current or future revisions of the law, due to any of, but not limited to, any or all of the terms, partial terms, or combination of terms, of this disclaimer, which is derived from the freedom of speech, for it appears to the author that the zeal of lawmakers to take away free speech outweigh the providence of attaching this disclaimer to all correspondence for which this applies, and any inconvenience for which this presents, is the result of simply complying with the law, and not to inconvenience the reader.

Use of this private web site or web page is at your own risk, for which you agree not to sue the authors or anyone who may publish or share this article (which must include this disclaimer) with or without the consent of the author(s) if you do not agree, you are violating the terms of conditions to view the content, and you may not use or view the content for any purpose. Discussions, and or links to media and (or) resources do not automatically indicate that either the author, this web site, or anyone who discusses the material either endorse the individuals or organizations referenced, either in part, or in whole, and the author's ask the readers to make their own conclusions.

No individual or organization, including CSPAN, Glenn Beck, Fox News, Rush Limbaugh, endorses this web site or the use of their material on this web site at this time, which may be either removed by request or without notice. Use of the material is assumed appropriate for use under the copy right act concerning fair use for discussion, to include artistic expression to demonstrate a particular viewpoint, in a single or group of discussions. Video or film footage may not include the full context of the original publishing video or audio clips, and therefore are not necessarily representative of any referenced individual or organization

Well, "Snowmageddon" - the total shutdown of D.C. from snow most all this week (and from a rather commonplace snowstorm in its Snow Belt area at that) - was Obama's Katrina! Shut down federal government in D.C. metro area Monday-Thursday this week - and even no mail blocks from White House last Saturday.

I have now heard eartquake was part of same one in Salem a year ago that would be New Madrid. Then I read it was not new madrid fault line but a different north American plate fault line. Then today I read it was just siesmic activity from way in the earth's core as the area continues to adjust from the glaciers receding. Anyone know what the facts actuly r here?

It is true. Manhattan is clearly located smack in the middle of South of Baltimore, not sure why. It is relly confusing. NYC's Brooklyn is the biggest,out of many less known ones. And so-called Brooklyn accent has become completely extinct over here, last speakers of which have passed into the better world. When portrayed in old movies, letter ' r ' sounded like " oi " !

Mine runs constantly. I had it "restored" at ICOM USA a couple years back. They replaced something in the first mixer I think, (involved taking shielded circuitry apart-very messy). Today the radio serves as my 24/7 30 meter autospotter.

Why don't we just put the people who hire illegals out of business?

We'd starve to death. Most of the employers of illegals are farms and food processing plants.

The President has to follow the law, and Congress writes the laws, so Executive power in the EPA and other organizations will be limited by the new Republican Congress?

Sure, these Democrats can pass laws, but it demonstrates their real character, their real relish and appetite for looting and a disregard for their own ethic rules that saying that doing things more efficiently (by limiting spending) and general disregard for ignoring the will of millions of Americans?

I would not go to the "invitation" for the health care summit by the Republicans, and I would simply reference the video of his health secretary who on no uncertain terms, have basically said that Americans do not deserve civil rights. And its gonna take young people, who did not experience the Vietnam War, did not experience separate bath and class rooms, to finally make that point, and watch the Democrat Party fail if that's where they want to go?

Mandatory votes in Congress? Sure, get in front of the camera, that's better than an empty seat. But an invitation to some PR event? Why bother when everyone is saying it is a waste of time?

President Obama, you didn't live through this stuff, you've been "dumped on" in the past by all these angry people who thought their most important responsibility of the day was to get high, and they were not educated like we are today? Don't do their bidding, you know better?

And if you have any doubts about something, don't do it? You don't have a health care plan, don't do it?

Universal Legal Disclaimer for the Public Domain, Version 1.5, dated Nov 7th, 2009 (which supersedes all previous versions, to which this new version applies)

The writings, views, expressions expressed by this author to include all written and electronic forms of communication are subject to the following disclaimer and conditions:

a) The views expressed by this website and the author to include all electronic forms of communication are not representative of advertisers, or other third parties that may store and or transmit the messages from this private computer, which you may observe at your own risk, with no liability to the authors, or any party related to transmitting, storing, or any other aspect of the material involved, including email correspondence, which is not necessary to the function of the website, and may or may not be archived due to other limitations incorporated into the licensed email software in use at the time such as automated spam or virus filters. No personal information exchanged will be shared without your consent, or provided to third parties with out the express permission of the parties and, or, individuals concerned.

b) The author(s) of this content and those who may interact with it in various known or unknown electronic methods do not give permission to any third parties to share or provide private personal information who may operate as part of any type of electronic or written communications system, including all parties, who may technically intercept communications due to the nature of network conditions beyond both the author's legal and physical control, unless those communications represent violations of the law, upon which the author, and or web site will cooperate to pursue any legal remedies.

c) The views expressed by the author or website may or may not contain factual information, due to the use of sarcasm or parody. The views may or may not be complete, either by design, to pre-empt being called a liar even if telling the truth, or by error due to typographical, grammer, or other technical communication problems not realized or imagined, or the possibility of views based on false or missing information, or with the intention of being used for entertainment purposes only, and not as a definitive judgment on the actions, character, or reputation of an organization, individual, or groups of individuals, with the intent of communicating with a limited group of people, and not the general public, however no distribution restrictions apply for fair use purposes described by the US Copyright Office, if no other restrictions are present or communicated, with all commercial proceeds associated with the distribution of the content to remain the sole possession of the original author.

d) Any reference to copyrighted material is done in the spirit of fair use, to illustrate the context of a discussion regarding public events for reference purposes that adds to the conversation, for which that discussion constitutes a new and separate piece of intellectual property, for which the referenced copyrighted material can not convey by itself, and that the author reserves the right to retain any profits from the newly created intellectual property. This term also serves to promote the referenced copyrighted material, without necessarily endorsing the material for any particular fitness, use, or purpose, for which the purpose of fair use referral law was created for, through inclusion of a partial, but not whole, body of works that the copyright fair use reference applies, for which the intent of all terms of this disclaimer apply to that reference of a copyrighted work.

e) Any humor if used, is not intended to offend people, and may be designed to apply the principals of peer pressure through reverse examination to accomplish the communication of principals or ideas that consist of traditional or proposed social values that are proven to advance the common good, and are not meant to discredit, disparage or demean any person or entities in any professional or personal manner, by attempting to share through the eyes or opinion of the author, for which it is expected that you read at your own risk, with no liability held to the author or any third parties who may store, transfer, or forward this message to others, in the traditions of free speech, fair use, and to play a positive role in a society that believes that graphically depicting male homosexuals having sex, and other unusual sex acts is considered free speech or that the use of abortion to limit Negros, Latinos, and other races from "spreading the wealth around" as a "matter of privacy" (which the author does not condone).

f) The use of humor is a known ingredient in providing teachable moments, and to validate and even demonstrate artistic expressions that are not shared by others, as demonstrated by many valuable scientific observations that were scoffed at in the past, yet proven to be quite valid decades later, upon which the humor used in all electronic communications by the author are based, in the principals and traditions of free speech and pursuit of happiness, and may not be a representation of others, including God.

g) It is the opinion of the author that you respect people when you consider their views, by reflecting their thoughts or actions against your own, which may include use of language that conveys an emotional depth that is to be imagined, but not enacted through use of language that accurately, or inaccurately describes the situation, circumstance, or idea, which does not imply that any action occur other than the consideration of the thought, for which beyond the author has no control, or liability for the action of the reader as presented in all terms of this diclaimer, and may simply be the venting of emotions with the intent of no consequence by the author to an audience the author assumes will understand the message and intent, and wishes to hear those views.

i) It is the intention and opinion of the author that History is full of individuals that are not harmed by criticism, and in fact such criticism can motivate and inspire them to prove their critics wrong. Based on this historical evidence, any alleged mental harm amounts to self inflicted injury not treatable by either medical or other professionals (despite the fact that many people live from the profits of lies through gradual illusion, without judicial interference), for which the author has no control over the mental development of any potential reader prior to the discovery or reading of the material for which this disclaimer applies, as evident by the necessity that speech is to be protected by law as determined by the founders of the United States of America, who, in the opinion of the author, wrote the legal framework, which was created by God, not slaves.

j) Additional use of automated anonymous page use tracking computer scripts (web page programs) or advertisements may be licensed by www.google.com, for bandwidth verification, or determination of potential advertisement opportunities subject to all other terms described in this disclaimer.

k) Advertisements that may appear are not necessarily endorsed by the author, either by admission, or by silence, nor are any electronic links that may transport the reader to other web pages, sites, or computers, and such links that may be provided for all or any of the following known or unknown purposes, but not limited to, informational, educational, and for the purpose of giving copy right credit referral information under the terms outlined in the conditions applied to the term "fair use" regarding conversations and print under US Copy Right Law, and for which the author assumes no liability for any particular use, fitness, or legality there of, any link, current, past, or future, which the reader should use at their sole risk, with no liability to the author, or any other party that may store, transmit, or otherwise facilitate use of the material for which this disclaimer applies.

l) It is the opinion of the author that effective 1 December, 2009, the proposed regulations from the FTC violate the first and fifth amendments of the United States Constitution, by infringing through economic affliction the burden without compensation all financial details concerning the communications of both free enterprise and opinion, and other civil rights such as "punishment must be fair" and not at the "discretion" of public officials, or that advertisers are assumed to be guilty of deception when United States law provides that you are innocent before being proven guilty, and are in fact demonstrations that there are current members of Congress that neither understand the spirit of the law our founding fathers made for the United States of America, or understand how they work in the opinion of the author, as of October 10th, 2009, especially in light of anticipated, and hopefully defeated, legislative taxes relating to energy use and the burden of publishers and advertisers to comply with the law and manage the environment, and in light that there are various consumer protection agencies, including the Better Business Bureau, which has free consumer information which preclude the use and need for excessive government regulation that burdens business with obstacles it may sense that it can not overcome without inflicting harm on the business plan or survival ability of the business to provide advertised, goods and or services.

m) Although the content provided meets or exceeds those new requirements to the knowledge of the author, and modifications to version 1.3 or 1.4 of this disclaimer is a result of the opinion of the author that “blogging” is another definition for a potentially infinite number or forms of electronic communication, as such the author will retroactively apply this version, 1.5 to all forms of previous communications, when and wherever possible, as time allows, in order to properly convey the intention of the author and to demonstrate an enthusiasm to comply with the law.

n) Use of this disclaimer for either personal or professional use is permitted with no restrictions. These restrictions or disclaimers do not prohibit the author from pursuing or communicating in a truthful manner, or guarantee that the audience will understand all things as intended.

o) This disclaimer is meant to establish the intent of the author who may participate in message forums, or create other written or electronic forms of communication to comply with current law, and may be revoked without prior notice, due to circumstances beyond the author's control, changes in the law, or for any of the purposes, terms, or conditions that may be in effect or described by this disclaimer, or to changes in this disclaimer that the author may clarify in a revised version of this disclaimer.

p) This disclaimer is attached to this message, and retroactively applies to all previous forms of communication by the author, and is done so because there is no recognized central suppository of a public disclaimer recognized by the Government of the United States to the author, and as such, the legal imperative of the author is to apply this disclaimer to all manner of correspondence as the author seems fit or prudent, so that no misunderstandings occur, or to comply with past, current or future revisions of the law, due to any of, but not limited to, any or all of the terms, partial terms, or combination of terms, of this disclaimer, which is derived from the freedom of speech, for it appears to the author that the zeal of lawmakers to take away free speech outweigh the providence of attaching this disclaimer to all correspondence for which this applies, and any inconvenience for which this presents, is the result of simply complying with the law, and not to inconvenience the reader.

Use of this private web site or web page is at your own risk, for which you agree not to sue the authors or anyone who may publish or share this article (which must include this disclaimer) with or without the consent of the author(s) if you do not agree, you are violating the terms of conditions to view the content, and you may not use or view the content for any purpose. Discussions, and or links to media and (or) resources do not automatically indicate that either the author, this web site, or anyone who discusses the material either endorse the individuals or organizations referenced, either in part, or in whole, and the author's ask the readers to make their own conclusions.

No individual or organization, including CSPAN, Glenn Beck, Fox News, Rush Limbaugh, endorses this web site or the use of their material on this web site at this time, which may be either removed by request or without notice. Use of the material is assumed appropriate for use under the copy right act concerning fair use for discussion, to include artistic expression to demonstrate a particular viewpoint, in a single or group of discussions. If these were profitable ideas, then why are the banks not lending the money, so that if a business fails, the people that dreamed up these kooky ideas, loose their money in bankruptcy, instead of the tax payer money? When a bank says no, that means even if you go into bankruptcy, the idea is bad?

Is that being "progressive"? Your ignorant, blah, blah, blah?

How would you disguise the word "looting" if you did not want someone to know what you really wanted to do? That's liberalism?

Hey, didn't Captain Kirk rescue a bunch of orphan kids somewhere, and they tried to take over the ship (they had some kind of angle) and whenever someone tried to tell them to do anything, they said "blah, blah, blah", or something like that? And of course the adults don't let the children run the ship, because they would probably starve to death?

You progressives, your so new, why we've never seen these ideas before?

Blah, Blah, Blah?

Perhaps, but not many who WOULD. I worked the fields when I was in my tweens and early teens, just to have spending money (dad didn't believe in allowances). I was the only one there, ever, that wasn't either Mexican or Native American. Most Americans don't want the hard work for the low wages.
Field work is damn hard.

In the years to come, it will be interesting to see what effect internet communications has on direct broadcast radio. There have already been reports of shortwave broadcasters cutting back because of budget issues. There is something to be said about snatching invisible waves out of the air from a distant transmitter. I even prefer AM broadcast radio over FM, maybe because it takes me back to my childhood when the only radio at hand was AM. Oh well, nothing lasts forever .. an example is analog broadcast TV.

It has not escaped notice that you have become one of the more responsible contributors to the shortwave newsgroup. I've been following rrs for nearly 15 years and have never seen it so near death for such an extended period of time as it currently is.

As you know, the destruction was done by a relatively few number of individuals (the group has never recovered from RHF's i.e. Roy Fisk, relentless campaign of changing the subject heading of every shortwave related post to sabotage the thread. Consequently rrs was rendered nearly useless as an archived resource for shortwave information.

Frankly, I don't see it ever recovering to the former days of excellence but hope springs eternal. So thank you for at least keeping rec.radio.shortwave on life support while serious shortwavers hope for its resurrection. Your efforts are very commendable.

as RF design goes. R-75 was not their most sucessful, but it is worth the money. I believe it is still available at this time. It won't be Indeed, Romania is still on the air. They always had a very pleasant interval signal, even under Ceausescu. Classical music

Truthfully, he's always been like that. The only times he gets out into the ozone, is when he gets fed up with some of the noise. Or when someone whose purpose is not to serve the hobby starts making claims he can't backup. A certain mouthy college instructor comes to mind, but there are many who fit the criteria.

But he's always offered solid and consistent radio content, even when between distractions.

I bought an R8A because of his endorsement. And tried antenna configurations, and transmission line configurations based on his shared experiences.

There's no doubt, when things got noisy, he could be in there swinging with the best of them, but even then, he kept up his radio content.

Actually Bruce, I have only put into service one of them. I know I plugged in the one I have in the closet just to see if it worked, but that is where she has set for eight to ten yrs. more than likely.

The other one I have used quite a lot and after reading this thread I think I'll look into running it with some of my receivers. Maybe someone more astute can tell me about the ps I have and what was "told" to me. I don't know enough to call bullshit on it - but I got them from a former ham friend.

They both are the "Pyramid - Model #PS-9KX"
He told me that he modified both with a slightly bigger fan and could "do" more than it says. Is that possible? I know it's a pretty heavy piece for its size. I did transmit off it for a couple of years on the CB. When I would key up and talk into my Turner - the lighted red switch never gave a hint of dimming. {?}

It reads on the front:
Input:115V AC 60Hz 70W
Output: 13.8V DC
5 AMP Constant
7 AMP Surge

But yeah Bruce, at least as far as my experience with the one - I never had a problem with it and it has (from me at least) to have a couple thousand hours on it.

Radio Amateurs (in fact you only need a rudimentary Technician Class license for this) can use all that delightfully obsolete analog TV equipment for their own transmissions. That's right, NTSC color, test patterns, whatever. Ditto for mellow sounding AM radio (except you need a General Class license for voice below 29 MHz).

They're nice supplies. And as you pointed out, you DID work CB off of one for a couple of years without issue. But that was intermittent service, which is what most of these supplies are built for.

Most any supply will work for most applications. It's continuous draw that does them in. But that's not a surprise. ICOM's, like R71, R7000, R7100 are renowned for running so damned hot that the back panel can be too hot to touch. Even the factory recommends going in periodically and touching up solder joints, checking components for heat damage.

And ICOM"s not the only one. But that doesn't mean it's not poor design.

Which CB rig were you running, and what type of antenna did you use?

And classical music is something that is disappearing from shortwave.
If it weren't for pirate stations and a couple of annual DXpeditions, you're involvement seems minimal. At least I'm still relating to the band on a highly technical level, wrenching every last drop out of a state-of-the-art receiver, while you klunk along with your 20 years old designs.

I disagree, this board as you call it, went to shit, as it were, the day the wall street journal published that the law firm which did the first USENET SPAM got $230,000 in business from it.

The signal to noise ratio, always low, has gotten much lower over the years, but a good filter helps.

People come and go, and I remember the time anyone could bring a newsgroup to its knees with 3 words: "Turkish Armenian Genocide"

Oh, so you guys want to reduce welfare? Great. Let's start with Wall Street, which has sucked down 23 trillion dollars in publicly funded largesse since 2008. We'll deal with penny ante Mexicans later.

The blatant hypocrisy from Holland, Michigan is hilarious. One of the most prolific purveyors of off-topic postings is criticizing you for discussing an alternate way to receive the programming from a shortwave broadcaster. The arrogance is amazing!

I made a grammar error myself. They are always fair game, in the interest of advancing the wonderment of Western Civilization, if no other reason.

Apparently my usenet provider filters for me as I rarely see any spam here. I find toying with the dittoheads amusing.

I am always ready to talk radio. Unfortunately, what's left besides bad commercial radio, un-listenable non-commercial radio, and disappearing HFBC, is UTE monitoring, which seems to generate little interest around here.

Actually, the only problem with it was the S-AM, which was largely (if not perfectly) rectified by the Kiwa mods. Otherwise it is a remarkable performer, and for the general price (even modified) I think it is hard to beat by any other unit past or present. The only things standing between me and the most ridiculously weak signals are my antennas and propagation (and local RFI, of course).

I'd buy one again, no hesitation.

Liberty Net for Week of February 6-13

http://3950.net/2010/02/liberty-net-for-week-of-february-6-13/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THIS WEEK the longest-running current events discussion net on Amateur Radio, the weekly Liberty Net, took place on its 3950 kHz LSB nominal frequency ï¿½ though most weeks, interference, some of it intentional, forces the Net to be frequency-agile, usually within 10 kHz or less. Here are a few highlights from the free-swinging discussions that took place:

ï¿½ Obama has now publicly stated that Americans ï¿½should not be questioningï¿½ his citizenship. (25 minutes)

ï¿½ Armed Haitian gangs continue to terrorize the island, including one attack on a UN aid convoy. Similar attacks take place regularly in sub-Saharan Africa and in areas of the U.S. where Haitians have immigrated in significant numbers. Also, cock-fighting and Voodoo remain strong presences on the island, as is the folk belief in the ï¿½Loup garou,ï¿½ the possessed who kidnap and eat children; many accused of being ï¿½Loup garousï¿½ have been killed. (In France, the ï¿½Loup garouï¿½ is an old myth, like vampires are to us ï¿½ but millions of Haitians not only believe in such things, but kill to ï¿½protect themselvesï¿½ from them.) (27 minutes)

ï¿½ Why did the power structure which got the boobs whipped up to pull the levers for Obama pick such a person, whose background and even citizenship is highly questionable? Answer: he is blackmailable. The power structure always wants a back-door way to get rid of its puppets in case they get out of control, and Obama is no exception. (52 minutes)

ï¿½ Who are Obamaï¿½s handlers and controllers? Rahm Emanuel is one. (1 hour 7 minutes)

ï¿½ False flag operations have changed history ï¿½ think of the Gulf of Tonkin, Pearl harbor, and 9/11. Consciousness of this fact is spreading, and it is Glenn Beckï¿½s job to co-opt and squelch this consciousness. (1 hour 16 minutes)

ï¿½ Will Obama play the ï¿½war cardï¿½ and bomb Iran just to boost his poll numbers and his standing with the pro-Zionist media? Amazingly, National Review is advocating that he do so, almost in these very words. (1 hour 18 minutes)

ï¿½ Is the exaggeration of Toyotaï¿½s brake and accelerator defects a plot to make way for the Chinese cars that are currently being backed by Warren Buffet and GM? (1 hour 30 minutes)

ï¿½ The ï¿½Obamacareï¿½ health plan in all its incarnations constitutes a huge transfer of wealth from Whites to non-Whites. This is part of a two-pronged political strategy: the other part is to grant amnesty and voting rights to illegal immigrants. Democrats crassly believe that this will guarantee their political ascendancy in perpetuity. (1 hour 39 minutes)

ï¿½ The brand-new ï¿½Rosa Parks Transit Centerï¿½ in Detroit is now closed for a large part of every day because of the rampant crime and filth that quickly take over almost every public facility in that city. (1 hour 54 minutes)

ï¿½ What can Americans do to help their families and their neighborhoods survive the coming economic hard times? Beware: those living near Americaï¿½s big cities may not survive marauding Third World gangs. (3 hours 5 minutes)

ï¿½ America lost a great patriot and the English-speaking world lost a great writer and investigator when Eustace Mullins died this week. (3 hours 21 minutes)

Net discussions begin at about the 18 minute point, and the audio file is about 119 MB in size, 5 hours 49 minutes in length.

Remember that you can receive the Liberty Net on the nearest clear frequency to 3950 kHz every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time, or listen live on the Internet via N2SAG (who also includes a lively chat room during Net hours) or N2IRJ (whose delayed feeds also run throughout the week), or listen at your leisure via the mp3 files posted here at http://3950.net every week.

Once again, thanks to W1WCR for running this extraordinary net, and to N2IRJ for making these recordings available.

Peter - Shouldn't a 5 amp output supply be fully adequate to support a CB, even SSB, that would require a draw of maybe 2 amp at transmit?

It is true, the Icoms run hot - specifically with the R75, it is likely the power brick, which supplies almost 50% more voltage to the unit that it requires (near 18 volts). Another reason why I want the external PS.

I really like the RRI broadcasts of late. Their WNA transmissions are armchair copy, and their musical selections - classical and folk - are simply delightful. That plus letters read, good newsy articles and some SWL stuff make them what a SW broadcast ought to be. Kudos to the Romanians!

That's the point....How is that 5 amps measured? If the 5 amps was measured to be steady for, say 5 minutes, that's considered continuous service. In the case of 2 way radio, 'continuous' may be also considered anything that is not 'peak.'

The point then becomes 'how does the manufacturer define their terms Peak and Continuous?' And how do they measure these services.

If the power supply is rated at 5 amps continuous, one may safely assume that 2 amp draw will be no problem. HOWEVER, how is that 5 amp service measured? 5 minutes? 10 minutes? Or do they run the supply until the components reach constant temperature and then rate
THEN measure the continous output for a week?

Probably not.

Most of the time, the supply is built for intermittent service as found in 2 way radio service. Short bursts, a minute or more, of sustained current at rated output. In this case, 5 amps. And the supply does it handily. But the components never reach constant temperature.

That same power supply may, if run at 2 amps, reach constant temperature, and the components may not survive that temperature if run continously, ongoing. Read the user reviews at eHam of supplies that have burned up resistors, even though used within their defined ratings.

Consider. You can take a CB radio out of the box, hook it up and converse for an entire 1500 mile trip without difficult. The components are taking the full rated output--peak and continuous--of the transmission for the entire trip. In bursts of conversation, sometimes a minute, two minutes at a time.

But that's intermittent service. Tape that key down and let it transmit indefinitely. It will fail. And pretty quickly. The components were rated sufficiently for peak current during voice peaks, and continous current during a conversational segment, but not for continous broadcast. Neither the power input regulators, not the finals will take a full load indefinitely. Even though current can be many times average. Even though the power throughput never exceeds rating.

The radio used for conversation will be trouble free for years.
Used as a broadcast device, it will fail quickly.

Pirates like to use Ham rigs for their broadcasts. These have to be modified for the duration of a broadcast to meet the extremes of continous ongoing service. Even rigs built with conservatively rated, quality components will not be able to meet the demand of continous ongoing service. Though the same rigs will be in use all day, every day for 2 way conversation without issue.

It all depends on HOW the power supply ratings are determined.
Very few are tested with continous ongoing service in mind. Because that's not what they're purchased for.

So, that 5 amp rating may be illusory. And though 2 amps may seem logically assumed to be a safe, and troublefree, output for a 5 amp supply, if the components were selected with intermittent service in mind, they may find that 2 amps takes them more slowly to constant temperature, but they do reach constant temperature, where they sit and cook until they fail because they're not sufficiently cooled.
And because the supply is built with intermittent service in mind, component cooling is less of a priority, and not a design consideration beyond the minimums.

That's why when selecting a power supply, current ratings are usually meaningless unless you know how they were determined.
Assumptions may be made, but you have to know what assumptions the manufacturer was making as well when the device was designed.

Read the eHam reviews of some of these supplies. Failure after a short time at current draws well within the performance curve.

> It is true, the Icoms run hot - specifically with the R75, it is

The regulator, and the load draw down of the supply, itself, brings down that voltage. The heat is generated by the regulator, but generates so much heat that nearby resistors burn because they can't cool themselves.

The voltage input to the regulator is higher than the operating voltage at the output of the regulator so that there is something to actually regulate. It's this extra power that's dissipated as heat by the regulator. If there's a voltage sag due to peak draw, or lower input voltage, there's some play for the regulator to work with.

And the brick, itself is a 'just enough' supply...providing sufficient current for the operation of the radio, with a modest reserve so when all functions are active, and volume is high, audio peaks don't draw more than the radio can access, and modulate the supply rail. But the very load of the radio itself will draw down the voltage of the brick in operation.

Measure the voltage of the brick open circuit. 18 v. Now measure the voltage output while the radio is in operation....the voltage will be lower. Closer to 14. This PS is designed with this occurence in mind, and it's normal. A bigger supply with a 12-13.8 voltage input to your radio will provide the same current as the brick, and the radio will get just as hot.

On the Astron supplies, near as I can tell, the high rating (the amp value implicitly included in the model number) is the 50% duty value, which I assume is what it can more or less safely handle if you switch evenly between a high draw (such as during transmit) and a lower value during receive. The lower value Astron lists, which is typically about 20-25% below the top value, is what the company claims is the continuous amount it can safely provide continually.

Is it safe, then, to assume that a combination of draws that total somewhat less than the lower rating would not put undue stress on the supply? (FWIW, I'm still thinking the Astron 7/5 amp supply for my ~ 2.5 amp max needs, or if I feel unsure, the Astron 12/9). Might even throw a muffin fan on the back.

Gentlemen, thanks for all your great help!

I run a 12 Watt radio (K3/10), my LDG Z-100 tuner, and a 45 Watt amp (Tokyo Hy-Power HL45B) on an Astron SS-12. The thing never even gets warm.

That's reasonable I think. You'd need to amass in the neighborhood of 100-120 watts demand before you'd require roughly an ampere of current, and that should be just barely cruising for the SS-12.

13.8 V * 1 A = 13.8 W

13.8 V * 12 A = 165.6 W (33% duty cycle on the SS-12)

13.8 V * 10 A = 138 W (continuous on the SS-12)

Sorry, that's right - I was thinking of 110 VAC for those wattages.

BTW, where does the 33% duty cycle come in? Is that how the unit is rated? Most of the Astrons I see come rated for 50%...

Bullseye on all of this - although in fairness, if one does not count subscription fees, it is roughly just as cheap now to receive internet broadcasts as it ever has been to effectively listen to shortwave broadcasts of the same things. Maybe even cheaper in real sheckels.

Perhaps different from the UK, the move to HD radio in the States has been sluggish at best - for AM it's a dead duck to start with, and for FM where it might really count, it has been almost totally wiped out by the fact that youngsters pretty much ignore FM radio anyway in favor of ITunes players and downloads. In fact, the only kid I know who listens to any FM at all is my son, and that's a combination of jazz, classical and 60's-80's rock. For modern pop music, it's CDs, internet radio and ITunes/Rhapsody. AM is only for late nights ;-) and HF is not part of the game at all for him.

Ute monitoring - You think shortwave programs are becoming less popular? Just spring the idea of an automated beacon as riveting radio on the GP and see what happens!

Requires knowledge and equipment, usually, that goes beyond what typical radio listeners have. I knew code once, but let it slide; and I don't have any RTTY equipment. On top of that, it does not have the same romance or humanity as hearing a scratchy broadcast signal from 10,000 km away. Don't get me wrong - I appreciate the fact that a Ute can be just as DX-worthy and interesting in many respects, and have thought many times about getting some nifty add-ons to make a go of it
- but it does not grab most people as will a live voice and well-devised program across the miles.

The radio uses about 3 Amps on transmit. The amplifier about 5.

Those miles have vanished. All radio is local today.

You don't need RTTY equipment. You need a free program called Fldigi which turns your sound card into a teletype. You don't need a computer controlled receiver; it just needs to be stable and capable of tuning SSB.

Nothing awe inspiring Peter, it was part of six pieces I ran in my "fun car."
148GTL (old version) with the slider and 50 watt final with the extra channel kit . I have a homebrewed modulator box (from a firefighter friend) that I coupled with it when it was in the car. The mod box wasn't really a linear (though some may call it that) it wasn't really to talk further miles wise - - but it really cleared up the voice - almost like a speach processor if that makes sense. Ninety nine percent of the time I would talk on sideband, I really enjoy having the slider because I could tell a buddy to meet me at a specific freq (he has the same type of radio) - and it would be absolutely crystal clear - crystal. At times I can talk all over the world when the skip rolls, my funnest time was when I spoke to a gentleman in Trinidad West Indies - in his accent he told me "Unit 67 - you're sounding like a local out here." Fun times.:-) I can just imagine getting my ticket and actually legally be able to have a cup of coffee with someone in Guam. I also have the 29LTD Classic - all tricked out. Ha!

Antenna wise I have the Antron with the ground plane radials at the bottom. I also have a big yagi antenna up there but it's not quite setup the way I would like it - coax wise and not having a rotor at the present. How can someone not love this entire hobby is beyond me. I just wish the CB Newsgroup wasn't trashed like it is. You're a Ham I would assume Peter?

I forgot to answer the last part of your question. In my car I ran the seven and a half foot skipshooter antenna with the black gum drop mount. I had it drilled right through the middle of my trunk and then used the steel whip that was mounted on the side on the rear passenger side for my shortwave antenna. :-) I have a antenna fetish. <lowering my head>

I should take your advice Bob. I do - from time to time go over there

From Astron website I conclude: SS-XX series are switching power supplies. Great for heavy loads, usually stay cool,but... not perfect enough for me. They generate RF,even the better ones. The ones that were designed for the so-called 'TEMPEST' program probably exist, somewhere. Receivers designed with TEMPEST requirement must be around as well. Somewhere. Otherwise,there is no readily available substitute for a regulated linear power supply. This was recognized long time ago.

Oh, well. Back in 1998 took a bus trip to Dayton,OH. The biggest event of the yearin this hobby. On the way back, in a local diner, I couldn't find anything on the menu that wasn't containing some pork. This is truely a pig's country. A few years later a fellow co-worker, originating from Cleveland explained this phenomenon to me. Most farms in Ohio seem to raise almost exclusively pigs. This should bring us back to the topic of r.r.s. I hope!

What? You couldn't find -anything-? The roast beef sandwich and sirloin steaks had pork in them? :-)

My antenna is 30 feet away. The switch mode power supply noise is well below what is ambient at that location.

Linear supplies waste energy. I can leave my switcher on all the time and I don't have to worry that it is wasting energy.

Just a little fan, about 7cm x 7cm +/-, usually about 12v or so, used normally for cooling PCs but good for other small cooling tasks as well. RS has them for < $15 if you need one in a hurry, but they can be had many places on- and off-line for (much) less. If you got one, you'd probably just fasten it over the heat sink on the back.

Thanks - yes, I was including that in my verbal "equipment" bundle.
Looks great!

Moreover, no PC near the radio. So, more hardware too. I am (probably to your chagrin) a pretty old-fashioned guy when it comes to radio. I like the catch to be fairly tough (although QRN sucks).

We're getting hammered pretty good here in the Nati' - - I have a tad over eight inches all around my yard. Fun to go out and drive in it IMO , at least for a little while - it really wakes you up. :-) Then come home and put some logs in the fireplace.

Apparently we're gonna get it again this weekend.

Dawn does a lot. I have, for over twelve-thirteen years, mixed it with my windshield wiper fluid. The difference is just amazing. You do it once, you won't stop using it, truck drivers know of that friendly tip. Check it Cuhulin, you'll see what I mean. ;-)

Like I said, my antenna is 30' away from my computer. I live in a neighborhood with underground power lines and no detectable light dimmers. I can hear very weak stations from Europe that no one else on the West Coast of the USA can get. I can watch my razzle dazzle receiver from from work.. great fun.

Hey, dipshit retarded one...

Have your sister come over here and blow me, boy.

Obama is a two-bit punk! Heck, he doesn't even care about his relatives who live in squalor. What a guy! He could send his brother $20 which would more than double his income, and, his brother could probably afford a 'double-wide' hut.

You dumb sand niggers (sorry, I categorize ya all this way) need to understand that you need to get your collective shit together...

Obviously another clueless Canadian Cunt.

I'm waiting for Obama to start chucking spears and promising everyone their own hut and and a $12 stipend a year.

Better naked than Marxist!

How the f00k would you know what I intended or not you worthless piece of Canadian excrement?

Tamp some cotton in it, little girl.

In all fairness, it is I who make you drool on command, dumbass.

I'll bet you use those Vise-Grip's when the gerbils get stuck, right?

You were an automatic dumbass at birth.

However, a pile of crap (such as yourself) is an idiot!

Quit crossposting, ya little queer Canuck.

"Do you realize how childish you look?"
Nope, I refuse to look in the mirror.

Take a walk, buttfuck.

Sheesh... another f00kin queer!

I ain't white, but unlike you, I dislike no one.

Come on! How can anyone be straight after free beer and sausages

You are indeed a queer, are you not?

Who will you be bunking with, Bob?

Come lick me homo boy.

Come and arrest me, cockbite.

Yep, the Great Spirit watches over us all!

You are worthless.

Yeah, go ahead, you drooling idiot.

Nope, but you're a faggot now, right?

Yer mama tossed ya because you're a homo boy, ain't that true?

Did I make any distinction with regard to country, you pedantic little cocksucker?

Blow me, faggot boy!

Fuck YOU, and fuck CanaDuh.

Now asswipe, go take your meds.

Take your meds, retard.

Humanity would be better served if 'Eduardo' were to take his shtick to the fields and began picking lettuce.

And, 'Eddy', may I be so bold as to state that the best part of you obviously dripped down your mothers leg.

You are a nice retarded boy.

I don't know, though it might be fun to torture him!

Your move, bitch...

Dumbass Canucks, such as yourself, are not deserving of oxygen.

Even more ironic is that you never dispute the fact that you are a little cocksucker!

Hey, dumbass, I don't watch the Fox News channel. So, you can shove that dumbass idea right up your gaping Liberal ass!

But hey, I made $14,000 trading oil today.. blow me

Funny how the US Govt. sent me over $50,000 last year

LMFAO as I sit and look at my royalty cheques...

I prefer genuine ROLEX!

Shove it up your ass, you faux little SOB.

You're full of shit, SOB.

Jerking off not enough for you, boy?

Do you spit or swallow?

Very tasty!

Actually, I know quite a few homosexuals.

I interact on at least a weekly basis with them, and surprisingly

I know enough to realize that you most likely have BO.

But, let me say this: if we were to find that something was sent into CanaDuh, and it were not checked, and then passed to the USA for bad

Actually VA facilities are quite good, but if you Canucky niggahs poke around one might find a lot of things wrong.

Fuckin' dumbass.

You are certainly an SOB, you stupid, MF'ing, liar and poseur!

WRNO FM 99.5 became Rush Radio today.
Rush mentioned it on the show, and also seemed to say that at least for a while they'd be carrying his show for 18 hours a day.

Your birth trait is that you're a MORON, dumbass.

Something for your faux Hispanic cock sucking brain to think about, eh?

Blow it out yer ass, Canuck!

All your talk comes from within the contours of your ass.

Yes, I am witty, and I am wise!

my mommy blew it out her ass II wrote

True, ain't it, little faux Hispanic BOY.. (Heavy emphasis on the BOY!)

Stuff a taco in it, Ramon!

And don't forget SAMBLA, South American Man Boy Love Association.

Mouth wide open, ready to take a load.

Difficult for moi?

After eating the taco's wouldn't they be capable of gassing themelves?

It is then my patriotic friend, you must reach in the closet, place your hands upon the weapon, and blow the cock sucking, bean blower back into Mary's arms....

They are mere asswipes, suitable for flushing.

How many American lives were affected by the slant eyed shit throughout the entire war?

Dumbass Canucks, sure ain't Rolex wearin' respectable folk...!

Or better yet, go get yourself some IBO Cock!

Yeah, after all, you're the Queen of your drug addled world.

And that has exactly what to do with the fact that CanaDuh is a Third World Country?

Canucks need to be castrated.

Shame? Sorry, I'm not a dumbass Canuck. Blow me, boy.

Hey, buttfuck boy... try to pay attention, you little piece of non-listening excrement.

Why are the retards mostly dumbass Canucks?

Run along little Canucky dweeb.

One of my nicknames, starting around 1975 or so has been 'Raoul'

Well, now you know them, and you know me, Karl Mauritania!

Obviously you're just a retard boy who failed as a corporate manager.

Did I say it was, shit for brains?

Because you're a moron, Druggie!

Ace is doing ok!

They don't call me 'Ace' for nothing!

And you, just another retard on the short bus.

All of my DX is better than your DX no matter what I do.

Well, I cann assure most everyone here that I've done 100% of my DX'ing without the help from anyone here, and I've had a moderate amount of success.

You claim to be 'Cherokee'... I think you're just 'Wannabee'...

No need to do anything more productive than cash the checks, invest the money, do some DX'ing, and rile up the mentally ill Canucks!

Why is it that you queers always seem to SIGH a lot? (1)

LOLOLOLOLOLOL... what a damn dumb cunt you are!

Now get your homo ass working on that documentation, boy!

Give it a shot queer boys, I dare ya!Very tasty!

Cocksuckers such as your self.

Hit the road, 'tard.

Toss 'em all, especially the Canucks!

So, just why is it that you queers always seem to SIGH a lot? (2)

Now go suck on some sushi, you little miscreant.

I just asked you to have the cunt send me a letter, boy.

So, just why is it that you queers always seem to SIGH a lot? (3)

"I'm so obese I had to get the extra heavy duty plastic blow-up doll"

Let me sum up, you Canucks are assholes!

So, just why is it that you queers always seem to SIGH a lot? (4)

Hit the road, drug addled fool.

Shame on CanaDuh for killing thousands of people every day.

Be sure to tell the bitch to send me that letter, faggot!

get your bitch daughter to send me a letter

Inquiring minds want to know just why is it that you queers always seem to SIGH a lot? (5)

Have the bitch send me the letter!

Well, go tell your other cocksucking countrymen.

Hey, have the bitch send me a letter

I can show her mine, and she can show me yours?

Ain't gonna happen, ya got no air farce, ya got no ne vuy, va goy nuthitin?

If you think for a moment that they'll listen to a drunken dumbass Canuck you'd be sadly mistaken!

Have the bitch send me a f00kin letter!

You folk really think ya got balls?

Now run along to wherever it is you little debutantes run off to...

I'll be waiting for that letter from your daughter, asshole!

Oh yeah, tell me baby...

Hey, little pussy boy, we spell it "cunt" out here, just like I think I spelled it originally, boy.

Never touched the skanky,,,

If I don't get that letter, boy, then you and your daughter must both be drunk, eh?

Finally shut you up, eh boy?

Have the bitch send me a letter on whatever letterhead YOU might make up.

Ain't that just speshul! He's got to go find somewun to fake him a lettter.

Have the bitch send me a letter on her firms letterhead, boy.

Great, then get your bitch daughter to send me a letter on her firms letterhead within the next two weeks!

Have your daughter draw up a contract, BOY!

Hey, 'Edurado', have your daughter get in touch with me, amigo

Guess that shut the little boy up!

Stuff it up your prancing ass, 'Tardo!

I'm LMFAO, since I've busted the f00kin faggot!

You are after all a drug addled 'tard boy who obviously knows little about the SWL/DX hobby.

Go blow some IBO Cock, and leave the real radio hobbyists alone, OK?

Let the faggot boy prove it!

LMFAO at the f00kin faggot

Yes, I learn more and more with each passing day!

LMFAO at the pathological liar!

Lying 'tard boy, much like the other debutante, malcontent, faux boys who inhabit the lace we call RRS.

You, on the other hand are nothing more than a sorry little homosexual 'tard

Liar, liar, pantalunes on fire! (1)

New history will be made when we crush CanaDuh!

Kan you just imagining that, you little faggot Cannucky boy?

Anybody, even Bozo, is worth more than some dumbass, faggot, Canuck!

Get busy, boy!

But you can't prove it, retard boy!

I know you faggots have dreams

Blow it out your ass, you dumbass Canadian! You and the rest of your dumbass countrymen, and women too!

You'd not be very happy if I returned, little bitch boy!

Go get some IBOCock, 'tard boy, and bring home a taste for yer mama.

Go give your boyfriend a blow job!

Talk about misery, you're in f00kin CanaDuh, boy!

Poor little cocksucker just had it handed to him

Eh? You sum dumass Canucuy bithyboy...

As long as it screws you Canucks, I'm a happy camper!

That's because you're a fucking liar!

Cry me a f00kin river.

Awwwww... the poor whiny dumbass Canuck is back at it again today.

Huh... you be just another stupid white boy outta Cleveland...

I suggest you get together with your "significant other" and bump butt with each other,

Because I hate White Boy Canucks who suck cock...

Best you shuffle down the alley! That's what your mama wanted!

Crazy Retarded Australian People?

"Even 2 cents is more than a totally worthless Canuck"

You can preDICK all you want, you fraudulent cock sucking, pathologically lying old bastard boy!

Hey, dumbfuck Canuck, I was not asked to leave!

I don't use Chink stuff

I went and bought ammo... I still gots it case them tard boys such as edweena gets stirred up.

And 10,000 rounds isn't a lot.

It was Russian ammo. I don't like the Chinese stuff.

Now where did I put that other case of ammo..

I don't use Chink ammo.

That's not Canuckian, boy!

Kiss my ass, pedant!

I'm LMFAO, Mr. Gay-Lick!

Obfuscate, you little prancer!

LMAO at the 'tard.

Thing is, you 'tards are pretty fixated upon one set of parameters. That is after all why you are considered to be 'tards!

As always, your head is up your f00kin ass.

You fuckin' Liberal asswipes are always ready to give somebodys else's goodies away...

And, hopefully, my dumbass cousin in Mill Valley will leave me her Corvette.

Obviously, you leep your head up your f00kin ass all day long.

I don't 'fear' homos, oh faux one!

Liar, liar, pantalunes on fire! (2)

Apparently you are the 'bendover boy'....

Oh, I certainly have, time after time.

At least I went farther than you!

Good lubricant for you and the boys?

It's what dxAce uses!

that's good enough for me!

One can never slide the BS by dxAce

Not as well as you, fudge pack.

Go for it, dumbass!

Oh come on... it's Fall forward and Spring back. Everyone knows that!

Hit the road, drug addled fool.

Hey, I love kickin' gay-lick ass!

Pretty much what I indicated to you a while back, you f00kin prancer.

The only thing you know about short wave is that that is what your mother gave you when she sent your f00kin ass packin' outta Cleveland.

Screw the drug addled retards.

Nah, I only attack the messenger when he/she/it is obviously drug addled.

So, beat the rush and get the hell off of RRS, you f00kin retard.

Well, in you, we have a drug addled retard in our midst.

Get over it, you fake Hispanic piece of excrement.

And when you do confront HD, you'll have Cocksucker Dave and
The Prancer Boys to thank for it.

Damn... I'm of mixed race ancestry myself, what ever should I do?

Next time we come over the pond once again to save your sorry ass's we'll have to dismantle that stuff.

Heck, I bought 1000 shares of FSEAX the other day.

Don't do business with the Huntington Investment Company, in particular a fellow named Joseph Klein.

Not at all, we are both Miami Indians. ya got a problem with that, boy?

Then hit the road, you drug addled retard.

Just like you wish that you worked for me, retard!

Proven time and time again, fudge pack.

Get it, retard?

Dey done unnerstannn that us nateev boyyys R real Mericans!

I sure he is.

Insert your Gay-Lick reply here, boy:

And yet another Liberal rant

Nah, he was fake little cock sucker like you!

Your pathological lying is an offense to me, and more than likely an offense to God as well.

No medications here, cock sucker boy..

Stuff a watermelon up it

But that stuff isn't what dxAce uses!

Come on now, you being a nice Liberal, Carbon Footprint, Al Gore, Cock Sucking kinda Canuck Bastard..

I won R plantation up nord, dat dem dum ass Canuckys be oween us, ya be 'standin me?

CanaDuh is stupidity!

Stupid little pussy faggot!

Liar, liar, pantalunes on fire! (3)

Mr. Edweenie, the forces of Good are gonna come visit your sorry fake Hispanic White Boy Ass if you keep it up!

Pay attention, cock sucker...

You've done this before, cock sucker...

LMFAO at yet another dumb friggin Canuck..

I spit a wee bit of Guinness earlier!

Oh damn, I guess we pissed another wanker off, Cuz..

I get my ride be fixed, I be cruisin to be givin ya da shake, yu be knowin, eh?

Try again, shithead.....

Dem Canucky boyz are dumaz rasissts..

Nah, I'm just more intelligent than you are.

We gone be sen u to sumplac bad boy... u be so bad weben the reel Canuckys won wan u.

Fookin bustards! Like Edweenie!

Best you wake up soon... fookin retard leetle beetch..

Fookin 'retard.

Indeed, I'm now at WAR with Canuckistan..

May the Great Spirit help the hapless bastards.

At any rate, I'd bet it beats the Canucky Third World state of care...

CanaDuh sucks...

Wanna go to war, shit head?

Think you might win? Think you got a chance?

If you don't... I'd keep my fookin Canucky mouth shut, boy...

Meanwhile, I plan for the Spring campaign, looking forward to the Blind River Massacre.

I collect stamps!

I really don't want to say this, my many shortwave friends, but I find that I am giving up far to much of my increasingly valuable time here on RRS trying to educate the faux, the debutantes, and those who tote..

Therefore, I've simply decided to give up RRS.

Goodbye, I sincerely hope that you all find your niche in the world of SW.

Selective editing? With almost 300 (that's THREE HUNDRED) rude statements? Selective editing or not, that many statements are clearly indicative of Lare's behavior. And selective editing (or not) does not excuse the vicious racial slurs, vulgarity and homophobia.

Oh, sorry, I almost forgot. You are the best yes-man, cheer leader and "Amen Charley" that Lare ever had.

...and encourager of rudeness and racism.

Defending Lare's racism and vulgarity says a lot about YOU -- unfortunately, it doesn't say anything very good.

Go back and read what he actually wrote. I've never denied he doesn't get in there and swing with the best of them. In fact, that was the first clause in my sentence. The clause before the one you so conveniently ignored.

But if you're interested in Lare bashing, then by all means only read the clauses that most interest you.

That doesn't mean what you assert is true. '

Yes. Selective editing.

Lets look for the line that you draw....
As your republican't leader Ru$$$h Limpballs has stated in the past, the vatican is trying to control the United states by the cathlics elected into office.

When we waterboard a cathlic, do we ignore their miranda rights? Also, where do we draw the line? An ash or red dot on their forhead? How about a turban or bennie on their head? Skin color? Ya no Dar Hay, Ru$$$h says N. Wisc is too nuts for him so by your accent, you c/should be tortured too?!

EVERY prisoner take custody during the bush administration WAS GIVEN
HIS MIRANDA RIGHTS. HUNDREDS of them. That's a fact.

Now what?

Has (or a hacked computer) decided to forge my email address and start posting messages under false credentials on this usenet message board, not to mention try to incite violence against people (saying we should hunt down limbuagh fans like rats and shoot them?)

If you support usenet, then please report these violations to the proper authorities. This is not worth my time to post any more material, but it definitely looks like fun to report all the bad messages this person posted and get him banned from posting more stuff? He doesn't want to debate the issues, he wants to hack computers?

Mr. Lare's ass isn't the only one "mouse" has his nose up, he regularly springs to the defense of other morons whom he wishes to gain the favor of. Very odd behavior for an adult and there is something very peculiarly pathetic about it. Kind of like the weakling we all knew in high school who was water boy for the team, who'd volunteer to carry the jocks food trays back to the racks after they finished eating, who'd hang around the locker room hoping to steal a glimpse of one of his heroes in their underwear, etc., etc. etc. Very odd indeed.

P.S. I'm guessing he is a brown nosed mouse?

Goodness gracious these are the rantings of a very angry and bitter individual possessed by extremely disturbed mind. Clearly a ticking time bomb waiting to go off. Have the local authorities been notified?

With what seems to be an epidemic of rampage killings throughout the USA I'm just asking.

Thank you bringing this out in the open Michael, who knows how many lives you might have saved. The world would be a much safer place if everyone had the civic consciousness you do.

Any power supply has a signature. Should be visible on a good scope. Linear types normally don't create any RF harmonics. The TEMPEST program is an extreme example of suppressing ALL unwanted radiation. Whether from keyboards,oscillators in radio equipment and especially power supplies. The most important part of all electronic / electromechanical apparatus. Low level signals (audio and rf) could be affected by switch mode p.s. That's why it is highly desireable to install coax to the antenna. RF emenating from almost every gadjet we use today is a big headache . Some very sucessful high end audio designs implement a separate power supply for EACH stage . And none of them seem to favor switchers!

Thank you for the kind words but I am truly undeserving of such praise.

It is the duty of all responsible, compassionate and sentient beings to point out evil, degeneracy and morally corrupt thought wherever we may accidentally step in it.

I have done no more than you, or countless thousands of decent and caring folks would have done.

My K3 was the only 20 meter PSK31 autospotter (out of at least a dozen on the West Coast) to hear a station from Scotland last week. This stuff is reported on a Google map in near real time. SWLs are welcome trying[?] to hear 100,000 Watt stations from Maine or Cuba.

They probably don't have to buy their own electricity. If I was still using my 2 [ea] 9 Amp linear supplies my electric bill would be $100 a month higher. I got the switcher to save energy. The fact that it is tiny, quiet, and cool is all gravy.

There's an electric motor at a quarry, over a mile away, that has some sparky brushes. I can tell when they turn it on and off. This is a very quiet (QRM) spot.

Dave, I checked the link but it seems broken. Can you give us a few details? Freq, antenna, time and etc? This sounds quite interesting.

BTW, you are lucky - My neighborhood does NOT have buried powerlines (in fact, we have more than our share of aerial cordage) and the noise levels reflect it. Light dimmers and other noise sources are legion.
Did get some good copy on hams from South America the other night on 40, though - but still have to wait for the sunspots to rise again before the subkilowatt fleas come banging through again.

I will say, though, that the newest types of spiral fluorescent bulbs, when new and working properly, give off no perceptible RFI. I am impressed.

I had exactly this same problem last week when a bunch of guys about a half mile away were doing road work with a compressor. The noise level from that mess was an intermittent 20 over S9, and the MFJ-1026C had a hard time wiping it. Thank goodness they're gone.

I have noticed noise only when the bulb bearing fixture is plugged into the same outlet as the receiver and the lamp was also in close proximity to the radio.

I have no dimmers in the house, so I can't comment on their influence.

Liberty Net for Week of February 13-20

http://3950.net/2010/02/liberty-net-for-week-of-february-13-20/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THE LIBERTY NET was attacked by multiple jammers this week ï¿½ stations purposely transmitting sound effects and unidentified rude remarks and obscenities ï¿½ but, despite all the efforts of the would-be censors, the Net participants brought off one of the most interesting and thought-provoking discussions yet.

Jammers are less effective than ever, because listeners have multiple ways of hearing the Net these days: They can listen on their own receivers, or, by logging in to N2SAGï¿½s Stickam site, listen to N2SAGï¿½s or KC0OWï¿½s receivers (or others that are sometimes available), or tune in via N2IRJï¿½s feed which is also recorded and archived here.

With multiple receivers hundreds of miles apart ï¿½ some with steerable-null antenna arrays ï¿½ itï¿½s possible to minimize any intentional interference. Furthermore, N2SAG is building an e-list of monitoring stations which heï¿½ll be coordinating when the jammers are on the air. Using triangulation and propagation clues, along with the technical and behavior ï¿½signaturesï¿½ of the jammers, many will be identified and removed from the air. Listen to the Net for more details.

The Liberty Net is the longest-running current events discussion net on amateur radio, and is one of the most venerable gatherings of amateurs on the air. Itï¿½s a bastion of free speech and free inquiry. Here are just a few of the topics discussed this week:

ï¿½ Itï¿½s crazy for people to state, as some media ï¿½conservativesï¿½ have, that they ï¿½miss Bush.ï¿½ Obama is just Bush on steroids. You canï¿½t cure out-of-control spending and borrowing with more out-of-control spending and borrowing. (21 minutes)

ï¿½ The SPLC probably wonï¿½t be making an anti-White cause celebre out of the shooter at the University of Alabama: she is Jewish and the SPLC, though it pretends otherwise, is not objective in such matters. Gun bans at universities, by the way, make it almost impossible to stop such crazies. (27 minutes)

ï¿½ Goldman Sachs has colluded with corrupt elements in the Greek government to conceal the true extent of that governmentï¿½s debt, in a scam that could devastate the European Union. (47 minutes)

ï¿½ The ï¿½Patriot Actï¿½ was written in advance of the 9/11 attacks, which may well have been a false flag operation designed to destroy the U.S. Constitution. (1 hour 17 minutes)

ï¿½ Could the policies of Japan and Switzerland ï¿½ both favor closed borders and racial integrity ï¿½ be the reason that these two countries are now under covert financial attack by the U.S.? (1 hour 21 minutes)

ï¿½ Have the British people lost their will and initiative? Some say they are now a ï¿½people with a broken back.ï¿½ (1 hour 49 minutes)

ï¿½ The answer to high technology ï¿½traffic surveillance camerasï¿½ is a very old technology ï¿½ the grappling hook. (1 hour 50 minutes)

ï¿½ Why does the alleged Obama birth certificate released during the election utilize a font that did not exist at the time the certificate was allegedly printed? (1 hour 54 minutes)

ï¿½ The current ï¿½hate Iranï¿½ foreign policy is totally insane. (2 hours 8 minutes)

ï¿½ Iran is enriching uranium while the United States is enriching Goldman Sachs. (2 hours 12 minutes)

ï¿½ The Liberty Net has met on or near 3950 kHz every Saturday night for the last 36 years. (2 hours 25 minutes)

ï¿½ The Israel cult ï¿½ whose devotees are Zionists and Christian Zionists ï¿½ is one of the greatest threats to the United States. (3 hours 24 minutes)

This weekï¿½s audio file size is about 143 MB, with a total length of seven hours. The times listed are measured from the beginning of this weekï¿½s recording.

Remember that you can receive the weekly Liberty Net on the nearest clear frequency to 3950 kHz every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time, or listen live on the Internet via N2SAG or N2IRJ, or listen at your leisure ï¿½ on your computer or mp3 player ï¿½ via the downloadable audio files posted here at http://3950.net every week.

Once again, thanks to W1WCR for his excellent work as Net Control Station, and to N2IRJ for his superb receiving and recording efforts.

That neighborhood is across the Bay from my house, but still - a crash into a daycare is a real tragedy. I am so sorry for the folks who died, and for their families :-(

Yes, and while they're at it, those ugly and light-polluting exterior halogen lamps that drive a person insane with glare and weird wavelengths.

When we shut down for the night or day, they all go off.

The discussion has been, and led by Cheney, that the latest prisoners taken during the Obama administration were read their Miranda rights and Cheney says that shouldn't be allowed. The FACT is that under bush\Cheney EVERY suspected terrorist was given his Miranda rights.
Cheney is being hypocritical..which, granted is a trait all to common on the conservative side.

The nice thing about having a license is you can theoretically make

It's because of half-wits like Mr. Lare that many people don't bother with this potentially-useful forum for information exchange.

Despite many valuable and informative posts, it is possible to devalue yourself into the negative. Like a clever employee who is very difficult to manage - the benefits of that talent are somewhat eroded by the enormous amount of dross one has to put up with to get any useful output.

If Mr. Lare stuck to the point and avoided getting dragged into every petty little argument, then he would truly be leading the way by example. And, hey, rec.radio.shortwave would actually resemble it's name!

I bought my next door neighbors one about 25 years ago. The one they had was amazingly bad, and they had it going from 630 AM to 11 PM, every single day. They sometimes left the light on all night, too. I finally just went and talked to them about it, and told them I would put a new one if out of my own pocket. The woman next door was from London originally, and she wondered why the BBC wasn't coming in as well as it used to. She had an old Grundig SW that she listened to it on every morning. That sold her on it, so they gave me the ok to swap it out. I got one that really didn't bother anything at all, and as far as I know, it's still there.

To the extent he was in the Navy, Steve did the country a great service.

To the extent he sticks to shortwave, he is a fine contributor to the hobby (mostly ;-).

To the extent that he pokes the fire on everything political, Canadian, Gay, non-white, Michael Bryant and other, it is best to just consider his comments a sideshow. IMHO, that same thing can be said of every other person who drags out the politics and other unrelated crapola. They all contribute to RRS being a two-bit circus.

Cuhulin excepted. He's a force unto himself ;-)

Probably so, but that hardly makes him smart or anything else. I have a cousin who was a Navy F-14 pilot who was killed soon after the F-14 was deployed due to engine failure. He was very smart. I have another cousin who was in the AF for twelve years, and well, he's dumb as a brick. He's also been caught shoplifting dozens of times. Just once before the AF tossed him out though.

At the bottom left hand corner there is a toggle switch for ON OFF.In the middle above the metal plate with the knob there is a meter/gauge which says VOLTS A.C. 0 30 60 90 120 150.At the top right hand corner of the device there is a round plug socket.
There is a handle mounted on top of the device.
I plugged it into a wall outlet.I think it works A OK.Of course it is A.C.Voltage only.

Actually, Palo Alto is named for a rather tall and straight redwood tree that grows adjacent to the RR station in town - literally the Palo Alto. In fact, way back when, I am certain that is how the rail stop itself got its name. Big redwood? Good landmark, let's build a station there...

Sounds like a Variac...a big rheostat or something. With some

The same audio designs usually implement class A in the power output stages, so obviously they are not concerned about efficiency and electric bills. They don't sound too bad, untill one looks at their prices...

Checking 3810 at 1000 this morning I hear HD2IOA (Ecuador) time signal putting in a fairly good signal with time pips every ten seconds.

They changed their format a while back.

I have yet to QSL (verie, for those in Glendale) this one.

I do high-end pro audio. We have 1 RU amplifiers that produce 10,000
Watts each. They are decidedly not Class A.

Well, not completely true. The better (read more expensive) dimmers include "radio frequency interference suppression circuitry". You get

It wasn't the political stuff that ruined this group. It was all the HD-radio, IBOC crapola. The IBOC discussion has largely died down since the proponents of IBOC grew tired of trying to convince people that 2+2=7, but the damage is done and it is irreparable. I learned a lot in this group, made the best of it by getting my ham license and have never looked back. And I still like to drop in once in a great while. The group would have to have a moderator or SOMETHING though before it could recapture any past glory. As it is, any good discussion of shortwave is going to be interrupted the second someone like Jose Eduardo (or whatever his name was) shows up with some cockamamie BS to spout.

Nice! have not heard this one in awhile.

So, how does one write a reception report for a time station? I can see where it would be easy for a WWV or WWVH, where lots of additional changeable information is given on an hourly basis; but what about a simple "time pip" station?

Along a similar vein, Bangkok Metereological Radio has been putting in a decent signal every few days on its 8 MHz frequency.

I tried to find a photo of an Acme Electric Cororation Voltrol power supply thangy like mine on the net, no effing luck on that.Mannnnn,,, it's weird,,, take for instance, over a month ago when I removed the Carter Thermo Quad four barrel carburetor from my 1983 Dodge van so I could rebuild that carburetor, I looked all over for my flare nut wrenches.I Know I have a bunch of flare nut wrenches around here somewhere, I couldn't find them, I didn't want to eff up the metal fuel line to my carburetor.My old buddy loaned me one of his flare nut wrenches.Someday, when I am not looking for my flare nut wrenches, they will pop up in front of my eyes just like Magic!

My power Acme Electric Voltrol supply thingy has a retangular metal case.The metal grill around the sides of the case/cabinet/whatever, is sort of like a basketweave design.Sort of like a chair cane seat basketweave style.

LQQKa here, if you ever rebuild a Carter Thermo Quad four barrel carburetor and if you never done it before, I Guarantee you, you are in for a Treat! But, I did it and my old 1983 Dodge van runs like brand spanking new.I still need to get new mufflers on my van, maybe next week, at Acey's Performace Exhaust shop.

I have.

Not so good. They do reduce RF emission, but they don't keep the spike off the line, which creates most of the problems associated with dimmers.

I pulled the SCR and Triac dimmers from my house and replaced them with in-wall variacs where I absolutely had to have a dimmer.
VERY quiet.

Truth is, I don't really need dimmers in the house. Where I'd want mood lighting, there are multiple sources in the room, anyway, I put half of them on one switch and half on a second switch, and then simply turn on the level of illumination I want or need.

Outdoor dusk-to-dawn security lights are often as much noise as dimmers for us in the radio hobby. The most common solution is to use a screw-in security light/socket in an outdoor fixture. These screw-in solutions are usually SCR/TRIAC dimmers in a different configuration. Intermatic, however, makes these devices without SCR's, TRIACs or any other similar device. Intermatic devices use a photo sensor, a time constant, and a closure which eliminates flickering in lightning flashes, as well as radio noise. Intermatic screw-in security light solutions are only fractionally more expensive than the cheap crap usually found on shelves. I mean, like, a buck or two difference, if that. End of problems.

There is more elegant solution, and that's a separate photo sensor connected to the line that feeds the security lights. Also using a closure, these produce zero noise, no flickering with transient changes in ambient light, they can handle large loads without difficulty, and you can adjust their on and off conditions for optimal performance. For this application, I, again, use Intermatic controls. $12, takes 15 minutes to install. The instructions are clear, concise, and everything you need to do the install is in the package.

And no soldering is required. :)

Yes, the tulip seems to have originated in Asia.

By the way, I'm currently reading a book entitled 'Tulipo Mania' and it's not only about the history of the tulip, but about how folks went crazy over them in the Netherlands during the 1600's.

Not certain about HD2IOA. At one time they gave a pretty good ID. But now, I'm not certain. I'll have to listen a bit more to the 'new' format.

Had pretty good luck with the time signal stations, and now have 27 I believe QSL'd (veried, for those in Glendale).

Yeah, at times they come in pretty well. I QSL'd (veried, for those in Glendale) that one a few years back.

Sounds like rather pedestrian reading material. The copious files that the MIOC http://www.michigan.gov/mioc has compiled about you would be much more entertaining.

From their website: The Vision of the MIOC is to offer all elements of our state's criminal justice and public safety systems the highest standard of synthesized and analyzed intelligence so that:

* Any threats of terrorism will be successfully identified and addressed; and
* The criminal investigative and prosecutorial efforts of our criminal justice professionals will be enhanced.

The State of Michigan's Intelligence Operations Center shall collect, evaluate, collate, and analyze information and intelligence and then, as appropriate, disseminate this information and intelligence to the proper public safety agencies so that any threat of terrorism or criminal activity will be successfully identified and addressed.

They have done an outstanding job - trust me. :)

Steal? Heck, we actually pay market prices for our oil.

They are Powersoft Digam from Italy. They are switch mode power amplifiers.

We've now observed sunspots continuously for the past 30 days, certainly a turnaround from the quiet conditions of the past few years. In fact, in ten weeks we have seen only three days with no sunspots, on December 25, January 6 and January 19. This is a little over 4% no-sunspot days, a nice contrast with all of 2009, with over 71% days with no sunspots.

Sunspot group 1049 emerged on Wednesday, and it is growing.

The minimum non-zero sunspot number is 11. This is because the numbers are derived from the number of sunspot groups, plus areas inside the groups. Each group counts for 10, so the minimum sunspot number is 11, and the minimum sunspot number for at least two sunspot groups is 22.

In 2009 only 87 days (23.8%) had sunspot numbers greater than 11, and 21 of those days were in December. Only 43 days (11.8%) had a sunspot number greater than 15 (14 of those in December), and only 26 days in 2009 had a sunspot number of 23 or more (none had 22).

Since the first of the year, average weekly sunspot numbers were 14.6, 26.4, 18.6, 28, 14.6, 43.3, and 38.7.

This weekend is the ARRL International CW DX Contest, and there is every reason to expect continued good conditions. Predicted planetary A index for today, February 19 is 10, followed by 5 for the next week. Solar flux for February 19-25 is predicted at 85, 85, 84, 84, 82, 80 and 78. Geophysical Institute Prague predicts quiet to unsettled conditions for February 19, and quiet conditions February 20-25.

The wonderful STEREO tool at http://stereo.gsfc.nasa.gov/ disappeared about a week ago, and hasn't been seen since. Server problems, I am told, but the folks at NASA who work on the STEREO project say it is out of their hands. They keep expecting it to return in the next 24-48 hours, but it hasn't yet.

At http://stereo-ssc.nascom.nasa.gov/browse/2010/02/19/ you can see current images from the program, and note that the end of that URL is a date, which you can change to see images from different days. We just don't get to see that marvelous and very useful spinning Sun animation.

The http://stereo-ssc.nascom.nasa.gov/beacon/beacon_insitu.shtml page also has links to data, but I don't pretend to know what much of it means. Next Thursday, February 25 images from the STEREO spacecraft will achieve 88% coverage of the Sun.

Many emails have been coming in this week about a new application for the iPhone that gives real-time views of the Sun from STEREO, and will even alert users if a significant event is taking place. It is called "3D Sun," and you can find out more about it at http://3dsun.org/ and also in an article at http://science.nasa.gov/headlines/y2010/17feb_3dsun.htm?list1066509.

Another propagation related iPhone app was released last year, which you can peruse at, http://spaceweather.usu.edu/htm/news/featured-activities/articleID=8323.

We have some new links this week for those who like to monitor ionospheric sounders, or ionosondes.

For an introduction, see http://ngdc.noaa.gov/ionosonde/. Check out http://ngdc.noaa.gov/ionosonde/real_time/ for a geographic view of ionosonde stations and access to their real time data.

Carl Luetzelschwab, K9LA sent a link to an article from 2007 summarizing what must be all the known predictions for the current sunspot Cycle 24. See it at http://www.swpc.noaa.gov/SolarCycle/SC24/May_24_2007_table.pdf and note the last page for a colorful representation of the range of predictions.

There is a new article on helioseismology this week in Science Daily. See it at, http://www.sciencedaily.com/releases/2010/02/100215100517.htm.

Angel Santana, WP3GW of Trujillo Alto, Puerto Rico had fun on PSK31 on February 15. At 1500 UTC he heard on 2 meters that 12 meters was active. Then he went to 15 meters where he heard Western Europe and the Caribbean. Many PSK31 signals on 20 meters, then at 1700 UTC worked EI3GBS and 9H4N on 17 meters.

Angel wrote, "At 2000 UTC went to 10 meters and heard USA! (Absent for some months.) Began to call on 28.465 and K4KV answered at 2012.

He told me he was listening via backscatter, and I told him my antenna was pointing to Africa/Europe and he was booming in. Then went to 40 meters at 2245 UTC and worked 9A3AGS from the island of Brak. And heard the band so crowded we say here in Spanish, 'esta Esplaya!' coined by Fernando, KP3AH."

Jim Puryear, N5TSP at EM00xf in Austin, Texas wrote, "On Feb. 13 at 0300Z I noted Es propagation from XE1 on 10 and 6 meters coming into central Texas. Then heard VK2APG on 28.485 calling CQ and made a quick QSO with signals about 55 each way. I imagine this may have been an Es hop to XE1 followed by F2 to VK--a pleasant surprise for a late evening on the upper end of HF. Now if we can just get this happening on 6 meters."

Jeff Hartley, N8II of Shepherdstown, West Virginia has been excited about increased solar activity and better conditions. He asked for a good site to get solar flux data. The most immediate is straight from the observatory in Penticton, British Columbia at http://www.drao-ofr.hia-iha.nrc-cnrc.gc.ca/pub/solar/FLUX_DATA/fluxtableroll ing.text.

You will note there are three readings per day, and the one at local noon (2000z) becomes the official solar flux number for the day. Later it is rounded off and posted with the sunspot number at http://www.swpc.noaa.gov/ftpdir/indices/DSD.txt.

Jeff sent this report yesterday, February 18: "I feel we have turned the tide on very low solar activity and now can expect low to moderate activity consistently with daily good 17 and 15M openings to EU from this area."

"I took the day off from radio Saturday, and Sunday February 14 it didn't take long to realize something was up; at 1333Z I checked 15 meters to find lots of EU signals; I called E73XL and a UA4 running QRP 1 watt called me as I was signing. We both QSY up and UA4HFD went in the log first followed by the 1 watt station UA4CDV who was S3. Even during the good conditions on 15 during the CQWW phone last October, there was little or no opening to UA4."

"So, after a breakfast break at 1358Z, I check 12 meters to find the band just opening to EU. PY0FF was logged, then I called CQ. The first QSOs were with HA and OK followed shortly by weak LA5YJ at 1416Z. OQ5M was S9+, then at 1435Z 4Z4DX was logged S9 followed by a very loud OZ8ABE. 9X0CW was S7 next. The band was in good shape until after 1535Z when I went QRT."

"Monday was a day of strange conditions with obviously some solar flare activity. For example, at 2217Z well after the normal opening, I worked OH3SR on 17 meters and he went from S5 to S9, then back again to S5 within about a minute; the QSO was probably via auroral

E. 15 meters was open well to EU all morning, but the remarkable QSOs were with UX1UF and ER4DX (S9+) around 1650Z about 2 hours after their sunset. Signals from western EU were booming in then. 12 meters was open well to the Caribbean/SA most all of the day and was marginal to EU with only a few Is and EAs answering my CQs. 3B8DB was S5 at 1543Z. TX4T was logged on 17 meter CW very early at 1612Z. But 12 meters blew wide open to EU from 1730-1800Z with some incredibly loud signals from western EU; the Belgians seemed to have the sweet spot on the other end with a couple of them well over S9, including ON7TZ and a couple of QRP stations, ON3VR and ON6AB S5-S7. 10 meters opened for about 45 minutes to the west coast around 1900Z, then around 1945Z TX4T was worked on 10 meter SSB and FO/N6JA was logged at 2122 on 10 meter CW (both French Polynesia) followed by very loud signals from LU and PY. PU2KLM was over S9 with just a vertical and 100 watts on his end."

"Also of note was stateside propagation. I chase counties. Towards sunset N4JT/M in LA was S9 or better on 20, 30, and 40 meters near the same time. Also around 2300Z on 40 meters, everyone calling him on the net from NY, PA and VA to MO + MN and farther was S9 or better and N4JT was about 15 dB over S9. I've never heard 40 meters that good for several years going back to near the peak of the last cycle."

"15 meters has been open to JA between 2230-2315Z quite a few days and 17 meters open daily and longer."

Thanks Jeff.

Not necessarily. Cable isn't the only high speed internet choice. Most places have ADSL now, some have ISDN, but that's only 2x dialup speeds.

On WWCR 12.160 this morning Alex Jones said Beck has lost 500,000 televison viewers. Perhaps the simpletons are beginning to wake up and see him for what he truly is - a shameless self promoting huckster. It will be interesting to see how he reinvents himself after his latest created persona runs its course and flames out. A bright future in pro wrestling for him perhaps?

By the by, Salon Magazine has a 3 part in depth study about him on their website: http://www.salon.com/news/feature/2009/09/22/glenn_beck_two/

From making fun of a ladies miscarriage on the air to disrupting weddings to promote his show, etc. etc. etc. ad naseum, this clown has really been a life long piece of shit. Small wonder he has to utilize the devil made me do defense; "It was the drugs and alcohol". Spinning his sordid past of debauchery and being a cruel asshole into a parable of forgiveness and redemption - a brilliant career saving gambit. Considering his Messiah complex I suppose resurrection is yet to come.

As H.L. Mencken said; "No one ever went broke underestimating the intelligence of the American public".

“When we were in Texas, Glenn hated Texans, hated ’em,” Sumpter said. “Now he talks about how he just loves the people in Texas. He used to make fun of them—their belt buckles, the chunky jewelry, I mean the whole deal. And he just hated Mormons.”

It wasn’t just Mormons. Beck’s self-described mantra at the time was “I hate people.” Despite occasionally sharing the mic with a chimp named Zippy, despair was seeping in and Beck’s mood swings were alienating colleagues; one remembered him as “a sadist, the kind of guy who rips the wings off flies.” His competitive edge could certainly contain a cruel streak. When he faced off against a former friend in the Phoenix market, Beck called up the man’s wife on air after she had a miscarriage and mocked his friend-turned-rival, saying it was evidence that he couldn’t do anything right—he couldn’t even have a baby.

WebTV is strictly dial up.Every morning when I turn this thang (WebTV set top box) on, it takes about one minute for me to hop on the internet.Most websites pull up (WebTV can not down load anything, no hard drive for that purpose) on screen fast enough, takes only a few seconds.Sometimes, dial up/WebTV pulling up websites is faster than computers on broad band down loading websites.

Amazing. Simply amazing.

Yesterday was a HUGE news day but all the mainstream news channels were filled only with Tiger Woods.

Architects and engineers had a press conference to submit a petition to Congress to convene a Grand Jury to investigate what REALLY happened on September eleventh. Over 1,000 licensed architects and registered professional engineers believe W T C was controlled demolition.

UK Prime Minister Brown is calling for a WORLDWIDE constitution to replace countries' own .

5 US soldiers, all Muslim, arrested for plotting to poison the food at an Army base in South Carolina.

But yet, Tiger is all we are supposed to care about.

Thank goodness for shortwave.

Your sentiment above might carry a little more weight if you tell the unknowing who Smedley Butler was...

Smedley Darlington Butler (July 30, 1881 ï¿½ June 21, 1940), nicknamed "The Fighting Quaker" and "Old Gimlet Eye", was a Major General in the U.S. Marine Corps and, at the time of his death, the most decorated Marine in U.S. history. During his 34 years of service, Butler was awarded 16 medals, five of which were for heroism. He is one of only 19 people to be twice awarded the Medal of Honor, one of three to be awarded a Marine Corps Brevet Medal and a Medal of Honor, and the only person to be awarded the Brevet Medal and a Medal of Honor for two different actions. [from Wikipedia.org]

So, an anti-war statement coming from a guy that made his living in the military puts a little different twist on it, eh?

there are actually a couple of very nasty bugs in the wild for macs.
However, given all the press that windows (and linux) see on the subject, I am not at all surprised that the mac market gets lost in the noise level.

Still, one should NEVER EVER assume that because a different OS is being used, that it is MORE secure (it isn't). Its only less of a target than the more popular alternatives currently.

NEVER assume you are secure on the net. Any machine running ANY OS can be compromised.

I have an ok FM transmitter goes about 30 or 40 feet that runs off a AA battery. I also have a Jensen Wireless 900mhz for speakers that runs off 18 volt. Is there a part I can take off my FM transmitter so the Jensen can tranmit on 88.9-179 so I will have a more powerful transmitter?

Yes the corporate media is excellent at suppressing news the ruling elites don't want the populace to know. I recall a stunning moment of candor from Ronald Reagan's CIA Chief William Casey (after his retirement) in which he revealed that the CIA controls all major media in the USA. It was true back then and it is certainly true today.

Did you happen to notice what significant event was immediately pushed out of the news cycle by the "shocking" revelation that Sen. Harry Reed referred to then candidate Obama as not having a "negro dialect"?

Answer: the Federal Reserve reported record earnings of $48,000,000,000 for the past year. It is noteworthy that the Reed story was known for months prior but was sat on and released adjacent to the Fed's earnings report.

P.S. Don't let the peanut gallery (dxAce) bother you with his lame remarks. He learned a new word last year ('tard) and can't stop using it - such a wit!

By the by, Mr. Lare still believes the "LET'S ROLL" fiction concocted about Flight 93 on 911 so consider the source. He also thinks the "dramatic" rescue hoax of Private Jessica Lynch actually occurred even though she spilled the beans about it being an Army propaganda op intended to ramp up public support for the war.

In short, he's the consummate American lemming.

He was in the White House press room the day of the shooting, answering questions about what had happened, the President's condition, etc...not really able to give much information.

Neither the Vice President, nor the Speaker were available to answer questions. One reporter asked, 'Who's in charge, right now?'

And Haig answered, "I am."

Being a retired teacher, wonder if he uses the "dustless" chalk"! All old "chalk boards" had been replaced by erasable whiteboards with markers long ago. Another "prop" for the show I guess.

Yeah, but it was "glow in the dark" cacti and sagebrush!

I believe St. George took a -huge- dump of radioactive fallout from one of the atmospheric bomb tests that gave cancer to most of the movie crew that was filming there, including John Wayne.

Two aerial bomb detonations in Japan, dozens of them in the western US.

...And as disclosed documents from the Former Soviet Empire have shown, it made the Politburo and the Red Army chiefs think three times before even considering launching a sneak attack. The idea had actually been proposed and quickly shot down when Haig made his statement, as the initial Soviet reception of this statement was that
a) a coup may be in progress and b) the guy claiming to be in charge was someone who wouldn't hesitate to push the button if it even appeared that the Soviets were gearing up for any sort of attack. The Soviets went on alert, but only one equivalent to DEFCON 2.

From these historical events I conclude: Hinckley and Cheney went to the same firearms training

I heard Radio Japan NHK this evening 0510-0530z
February 22,2010 on approximately 9770KHz.
The broadcast was in English,.
The broadcast seemed to be intended for somewhere other than North America.
The sound quality was poor ,the signal was weak and fading completely out at times.

R. Japan has an English broadcast directed toward Africa at that time on 9770, relayed via France (via www.PrimeTimeShortwave.com). This is probably what you heard. Not a bad catch, actually, depending on where you are located.

Warning: SW radio content!

Just picked up a Drake SW-8. Seems a nice radio. Not the newer model, but the old one with 500-30000 plus Air and FM. No whip pre-amp. Still, it's pretty impressive. Gain seems to be at least as good as my Eton E1XM, but I swear the audio sounds BETTER! Especially on the FM, which is one of the hottest FM tuners I've ever had the pleasure to own.

I've only been able to play with it on the whip so far. I'm hoping to get my long(?) wire back up soon (it came down under heavy snowfall.. not that it was very well installed in the first place) so I can better put it through it's paces. What I would REALLY like to do is take it out to the coast, away from all the local QRM to really try it out at it's best. But, that will have to wait, likely till summer.

Anyone know where I can pick up a used 4 or 5 band vertical? That's all I really have a place for here.. and would probably have to plant it in our garden plot.

Happy DX!

You're going to LOVE this radio. Audio IS much better than E1.
And if you put it through a better speaker, you're going to be A-MAZED.

The FM tuner IS pretty hot. Though surprisingly free from overload. And the stereo performance is as good as some freestanding tuners. I've used it as an air monitor for remotes with dramatic results in fringe locations.

Whip performance is fair. Nothing compared to what you'll enjoy on a decent, even mediocre antenna. I use an RF Systems MTA with mine. More than enough sensitivity to overcome the lower output of the MTA, but the lower noise floor of the MTA makes for some very nice DXing.

There are service manuals out there for it. And the Drake website has tips and tricks in the FAQ for cleaning up irritating, age related issues.

Battery life is passable.

A couple of caveats. Whip impedance isn't matched to the input.
Drake will bring that up to spec for you. But with your experience, it should be no problem for you. And it will make a significant difference.

Keybounce is a problem with this rig as the years progress.

The audio output is balanced but not referred to ground. If you take one leg to ground, for any reason, you'll blow the audio amp.
Transform the audio before you connect it to a single ended input.
Or simply plug it into a balanced amp.

It's a fun radio. Very nice listening, and the right choice for DXpeditions.

Nice find. Congratulations.

Here I thought that South Florida was the "ghetto" of the radio world.
Every BCBDX I try to get is flooded with all the Cuban AM stations, and down here, there must be a station on every frequency in Dade, Broward and Palm Beach that runs 24/7!1 I use a loop just to try and null out the noise.

No such critters here. Unlike the states, ham radio here is more of a closed society. Pretty controlled, too (guess they worry about DPRK spies). You pay a fortune for a permit (at least foreigners do.. it was about $100 for a year, about 5 years ago..), and they actually come out and inspect your station before granting the permit. They also try to get you to use only a radio capable of 144-146 MHz on 2m. Barring that, they tell you don't go over 146 on your radio. Fair enough... I don't want to talk to taxi drivers anyway.

The BC was fading deeply, almost totally gone at times at times, but I did manage to catch the S/off ID.
The announcer had a North American English accent. Not what I expected

Yes, the fact that simulating insane to avoid the death-penalty for coward actions in wartimes, doesn't have an impact on the guys in Pentagon. You're a very good comedian here, but you cannot fool the professional foxes out there.

I have been listening to Bruce Williams since he came on air in the early 1980's. He was a genuine pioneer in talk radio, always informative, entertaining, cordial and civil to all. Quite a contrast to the abrasive pompous asses that dominate the radio dial today. I doubt any of the gasbags even know that Bruce Williams was one of a few talents who paved the way for the talk radio format to make it.

In the 1990's I had the pleasure of attending one of Bruce's live lectures and he was as nice in person as he came across on the radio. There was nothing phony or pretentious about the man at all - a class act all around.

Thanks for the thousands of hours of radio listening enjoyment you provided Mr. Williams, you are one of the best.

Many people from Asia are very strong in English as a second language - however, I think actual westerners at Asian and other shortwave stations are pretty common. I was just listening to CRI Beijing yesterday briefly for an ID, and sure enough, a woman with a proper English accent identifies herself as being an announcer in Beijing for CRI, and when she says her name (a proper English name) you could have knocked me over with a feather.

That means very little. She could be Chinese from Hong Kong with a British father, or someone who changed the pronunciation of their Chinese name to fit British standards.

It's also very common for DJ's, news "readers", actors, etc to take western sounding names or more common sounding names to make them more attractive to the public. For example, I'm sure you were a big fan of Marion Morrison when he was alive, although I'd say it's likley you have never heard of him by that name.

As for NHK, they also have an English language TV service, which is on DBS here. My kids watch it.

I do know that CRI (40dB over S-9 here) has a couple expats as announcers on their regular China Drive show. One is from the US, the other from, IIRC, New Zealand. Can't say whether they're there because of their political beliefs, or just to make a Yuan...

His draft dodging is questionable, and to answer your question, look at Jane Fonda, who actually fired a North Vietnamese anti-aircaft gun at US airplanes.

Political beliefs as in worldwide communist domination, or the right to

Yes, I realize this - but the mannerisms, the flow of speech, the timbre of the voice and everything I could tell, suggested a solidly European background. Not that it matters - I was just surprised

> It's also very common for DJ's, news "readers", actors, etc to take western Yeah, I know. Why an international shortwave program host would do this is beyond me - I doubt if psychologically it would make much difference to the listening audience. Similarly and as an example, there is a reporter by the name of Willoughby who works at/for Radio Prague in the Czech Republic, and he fully gives the impression that he is not a native-born Czech but an import who does English service for them. Not as extreme an example as the CRI example, but along the same lines. Everything is international these days.

As for the movies - I am neither a big fan nor detractor of Marion Morrison, whose pseudonym I know well, although I have enjoyed a few of his movies when they were good movies. He played a limited number of character types, and played them very well. Some of his somewhat lesser known movies (such as The Quiet Man) are among his better ones. I have yet to see John Ford's "Stagecoach", which is on my list of must-sees. A movie I enjoy very much is 'The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance" but as much or more for the ensemble cast, the story and the fine Ford direction as for MM's performance.

Thanks, Brenda. I guess this gets to my fascination with the phenomenon. If CRI wants to put its best foot forward, do they have their own best native-born people do the talking (which of late they have done pretty effectively IMHO), or do they put forward some sympathetic Westerners who have the appropriate gift of gab? Of the announcers' beliefs - I cannot speak for anyone else, but as a person who does not buy into the Communism "thing" or much else that goes along with living under such a regime, I'd have a mighty hard time staying in Beijing if my primary goal was to have a broadcasting career. Assuming, of course, that they'd allow me to leave... ;-)

FWIW, here in North America west coast, CRI blasts in on several channels, and its domestic subsidiaries and jammers muddle up quite a number more. Every other 5 kHz channel has Chinese radio on it - but you knew that.

:-D Sort of like that - but a lot more convincing. No suspicious accents, and a full accounting with first and last names. If I could remember her name, I'd tell you what it was. If you could have heard her, you'd agree with me.

You guys are going to force me to listen for hours to CRI to try and catch her again, aren't you? Dammit... ;-)

2023. Liberty Net for Week of February 20-27

Liberty Net for Week of February 20-27

http://3950.net/2010/02/liberty-net-for-week-of-february-20-27/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

IONOSPHERIC PROPAGATION was wildly inconsistent this week and there was interference from a CW contester who runs very high power, but the weekly Liberty Net current events discussion was as free-spirited and informative as always. The jammers that plagued the Net last week, probably disappointed by their inability to disrupt the proceedings, seem to have given up. Here are a just a few of the many topics brought up on the latest Liberty Net:
Listen to or download this week's Liberty Net

ï¿½ The tragic intentional plane crash by Andrew Stack, a victim of the IRS, is just the tip of the iceberg ï¿½ many good, hard-working, honest Americans have committed suicide because of abuse by the IRS. There are hundreds of other, more honest, less intrusive ways of financing needed public functions. Itï¿½s time to abolish the income tax. (22 minutes)

ï¿½ What was the motivation of the Ohio man who, besieged by banks and creditors and tax collectors, decided to bulldoze his own beautiful house? (37 minutes)

ï¿½ With the massive infusion of created ï¿½money,ï¿½ will the American economy experience inflation higher than the 16% that some are predicting? (45 minutes)

ï¿½ Thereï¿½s no need for cable or satellite pay television now that the Web has sites like http://justin.tv (52 minutes)

ï¿½ Will Tea Party enthusiasts reject the establishment ï¿½conservativesï¿½ (like Dick Armey and John McCain) who are attempting to muscle their way into control of that grassroots liberty movement? (59 minutes)

ï¿½ Will commissars from the European Union now be dictating new taxes and laws for Greeks ï¿½ effectively taking away their sovereignty? (1 hour 22 minutes)

ï¿½ Why was George Soros badmouthing investment in gold at the very same time he was buying it? (1 hour 32 minutes)

ï¿½ Many of the nicest people on amateur radio are those who operate in the amplitude modulation (AM) mode. (1 hour 35 minutes)

ï¿½ No one could have predicted that East Germanyï¿½s once all-powerful secret police organization, the Stasi, could have been overthrown in a few hours by an aroused populace ï¿½ but it was. Will the same things happen to the modern American versions of the Stasi, the IRS and other branches of the regime in Washington? (2 hours 10 minutes)

ï¿½ The Washington regime is telling Social Security retirees that the inflation rate is now negative, so no Cost of Living Adjustment (COLA) will be given to them this year. But at the very same time Congress granted itself a 9% COLA! (2 hours 31 minutes)

ï¿½ Was former Congressman Jim Traficant railroaded into federal prison on false charges because he was telling the truth, as was Liberty Net participant Kevin Strom? He can now tell his own story on the radio and the Internet. (3 hours 10 minutes)

ï¿½ The reign of Jack Welch at GE was not at all like it has been presented to the public; there were many shady practices and insider deals that hurt both shareholders and the American public. (4 hours 30 minutes)

This weekï¿½s audio file size is about 114 MB, with a total length of 5 hours 34 minutes.

The Liberty Net is one of the longest-running nets in amateur radio history, and is certainly the most exciting discussion net in existence. If youï¿½re an amateur operator, feel free to join in ï¿½ and, license or not, join in on N2SAGï¿½s live chat during Net hours.

Remember that you can receive the Liberty Net on the nearest clear frequency to 3950 kHz every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time, or listen live on the Internet via N2SAG or N2IRJ, or listen at your leisure ï¿½ on your computer or mp3 player ï¿½ via the downloadable audio files posted here at http://3950.net every week.

Once again, thanks to W1WCR for his superb work as Net Control Station, and to N2IRJ for his excellent receiving and recording efforts.

I remember watching Ole Miss with Archie Manning at quarterback playing on television back in the day. I can still see all those fans waving their minature Stars and Bars flags. Say what one will about the South but ya gotta love SEC football.

And yes Colonel Reb is a great mascot. I always think of Burl Ives playing "Big Daddy" in Cat On A Hot Tin Roof when I see it - a great movie. So I voted twice in favor of keeping it, why don't they show the tally?

Sadly there is no way the school will bring the Colonel back, even if they have to cheat to make sure it doesn't happen. Why you ask? Because they need the black athletes to be able to compete in football and basketball. Recruiting is a dirty busy and their rival schools never miss the opportunity to bring up the negative about opposing schools to impressionable youths. Fair or not, having a decal of a plantation owning white guy on your helmet is not going to fly in today's world.

The University's voting results are to be announced tonight, post them when you have them. I'm betting the yea's will actually win but the administration have rigged the count so the nays will prevail and they can have their public relations success; "Oh look how wonderful our student body is!", the typical politically correct BS (and that doesn't stand for Bachelor of Science)..

Miss students vote to replace Colonel Reb http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2010/02/23/AR2010022304566.html
By SHELIA BYRD
The Associated Press
Tuesday, February 23, 2010; 8:40 PM
JACKSON, Miss. -- University of Mississippi students voted Tuesday for the school to pursue a new mascot to replace Colonel Reb, the goateed Southern gent banished from the sidelines nearly seven years ago as the school continued its move away from symbols of the Old South.

The university's Associated Student Body released the results of the online election after voting ended at 5 p.m. CST.

"This wasn't about Colonel Reb at all. This is a new body of students. This vote is about deciding that we need a new personification of what a Rebel is," said John Kaiser, the Associated Student Body's deputy attorney general of elections.

Students were asked to vote "yes" or "no" on whether they support "a student-led effort to develop and propose a new 'on-field' mascot to represent the Ole Miss Rebels." The school has more than 18,000 students, but only 3,366 votes were cast. The referendum passed with nearly 75 percent of the vote.

It's been an issue fraught with significance for the students, alumni and fans of the university located in the Deep South, where many consider football the ruling sport.

Ole Miss will remain the Rebels, but Colonel Reb won't be back on the field.

The university has taken other steps in recent years to throw off what many perceive as lingering reminders of a Confederate past. Last year, the band stopped playing the fight song, "From Dixie With Love," to discourage fans from chanting, "the South will rise again." In 1997, the school ended the waving of Confederate flags at sporting events.

But not everyone is happy about the decision to move on from Colonel Reb.

"I'm extremely disappointed. I do think Colonel Reb is getting a bad rap," said Hannah Loy, a senior political science major and a member of the Colonel Reb Foundation.

Loy said her generation should be allowed to define issues of race and school spirit.

"I think the older generations need to stop pressing their feelings about race and what happened in the past on those of us who weren't even alive then," Loy said.

The Colonel Reb Foundation, a group formed in 2003 when the mascot was dropped, had bought advertisements in the student newspaper in hopes of winning a "no" vote on the proposal.

Koriann Porter, liberal arts major who started the petition initiative that led to the vote, said she's hoping students will be able to choose a new mascot by the end of next fall's football season.

Collins Tuohy, a recent graduate interviewed a few days before the vote, said her parents recognized the need for the change when they attended the school.

"My dad was an athlete and my mom was a cheerleader. They saw firsthand that the flag and Colonel Reb were having an effect on people," she said of Sean and Leigh Anne Tuohy, who are depicted in the Oscar-nominated film, "The Blind Side."

Tuohy said when she was involved with the Student Alumni Council, there was more of a move by older alums to push for a new mascot.

Associated Student Body President Artair Rogers said a student mascot committee will be selected to develop and propose a new mascot. He said he would present a plan to the Associated Student Body Senate and Ole Miss Chancellor Dan Jones next week.

I was home sick today, so I was listening to V. Nigeria on 15,120 KHz from about 2000 to 2100z. A potent signal to say the least, would have been easy armchair copy except for one thing - their audio is terrible. The sound is either muffled, or overmodulated, or the high tones are omitted, or something, but the distortion makes an otherwise great African signal almost unlistenable much of the time. Any ideas what their problem might be?

Gee, cuhulin - I'm not a fan of pit bulls, but demanding that a somewhat unfairly stereotyped dog gets banned because of paranoia - that's sort of like banning guns (which I also do not favor) because one might go off and hit you. That's not a very libertarian POV - ???

This is a problem they had for a long time. My guess : equalization is way overdone. The low frequencies are dominant and human speech sounds like rumbling elephants. Some D.Welle transmissions used a similar technique over the years. May be V.of Nigeria is doing the same. On the other hand, overmodulation may cause something very similar,perhaps. It does make extended listening very uncomfortable.
Just checked their live audio stream on the website and even that was not that great. The highs are attenuated significantly above 6KHz or so,and there is an annoying heterodyne[!] that is an obvious porblem in the studio equipment.

Thanks for this...I had not thought of it, maybe because I think this would seem rather obvious to an engineer, or maybe just because I'm me ;-). I did not notice the het on the b'cast, but I had on the autonotch to slice out some interference, so that might have banned it, too.

My Icom R75 on AM-wide has a 6 KHz filter on it, generally completely adequate for every other station, especially strong ones; and come neither love nor money, could I get a decent top end out of the signal. Not be detuning, not by passband tuning, not on SSB either. Only on a handful of audio bits - all recorded interviews of people with high, mousey voices - was there truly intelligible voice. I have this problem only with one other station in my recollection - Radio Cairo, and that's not its only problem (RC's audio is so weak it is almost a whisper).

Anyway, I wrote them a reception report (those program details were tough!), and in honesty had to explain my perception of this problem.

Whether they choose to QSL or not, if they have received even a single other complaint of this type, I am not sure how they could ignore it. I just hope the engineers do not lose their jobs...

The issue isn't owning or operating any given radio, and there's no need for a covert antenna. There's really no big deal at all. It's just more involved than working with the FCC. The MIC actually comes to your station and measures power output and frequency accuracy. They also advise you of power and frequency limitations (such as not allowing 2m between 146-148 MHz, no 15m, etc. and no 70cm stuff. Again, no big deal. When in Rome, do as the Romans do.

The UK banned them several years ago, and collected up and destroyed all the ones they could find. Personally, I think that's not right... overkill.
Yes, they have been known to maul children, sometimes to death, but those cases are actually pretty rare compared to the total population of the dogs
(they were very popular in the UK.)

I meant to say he was in great shape throughout his entire life. And he passed away very shortly after checking into a hospital that declared his condition incurable. This was in June1940. Almost 70 years ago. Wonder if the Fall of France was making him worse.

Something is fishy here. Only 3,366 of 18,000 eligible voted? That is only a 18.7% turnout for a issue that has been hotly debated on campus. Additionally, kids who spend half their lives on the computer, could vote online without even leaving their dorm room...hmm...very suspicious...I don't buy the lack of interest.

According to the Colonel Reb Foundation, in 2003 the University Administration tried to change the mascot despite 94% of students voting to keep Colonel Reb on the field. 94% to 18.7%? Liars liars pants on fire. The fix was in.

Could go both ways. I remember seeing film of her sitting at the gun. Since the 1980's when she "appologized", she's claimed she was photographed at it, which implies still photos of her sitting there.

However photographed could mean filmed, and she never really addresses the issue of firing the gun and at what if she did.

Considering the US was at war with North Vietnam at the time, that could be considered "giving aid and comfort to the enemy", even if all she did was sit at the gun, smile and let her picture be taken.

May I quote you on that? I can make up a YouTube video, which will then be quoted in blogsphere, who will be quoted in the paper press, which will make the radio/tv press and be all over the place.

All I have to say now, is "as stated on the internet".

Now ,here is a station that obviously doesn't care at all as far as their audio quality goes!!! Not only the audio is nearly not hearable, but on top of it they had the worst hum (50Hz) . Talk

Upon reflection the numbers are worse. 94% wanting to keep the Colonel dropped to approximately 4.67% wanting to keep him (using the Administration's tally claiming 75% of the 3366 voters favored banning Colonel Reb).

Even Chicago politicians are blushing over this one. Good grief.

Murder, actually.

Agreed, and I think grandfathering in existing owners and requiring spay/neuter for all dogs in fact, every breed) is a reasonable alternative to mass execution of innocent animals and their loving owners.

According to this news story
http://www2.wjtv.com/jtv/news/local/article/ridgeland_ordinance_bans_certain_dogs_after_april_16/11672/current owners are grandfathered but only for one dog. That would really be a difficult position to be put into if you own more than one of the banned dogs. How sad.

Either Soviet or a Chinese copy. N.Vietnam did not have it's own industry in those days. Majority of Russian weaponry was based on sucessful Western designs . T-34 and maxim machine gun are the most obvious. BTW Jane Fonda was married to none other than Ted Turner for

Thank you for posting a weekly synopsis of what was said on the Liberty Net.

When listening to the recording on your website is there a way to fast forward the streamed audio? Usually one can push the recording forward but I am unable to do so with yours. Am I missing something?

Thanks.

There's a gross overreaction to stories where pits are concerned.
And the media plays it for all it's worth. I dated a reporter from Channel 3 in Shreveport who did nothing but pit bull stories for a year. The Kennel Club finally made her put a sock in it.

The problem is generally not the dog, but one at the other end of the leash. There are owners who don't know how to socialize any dog, much less a pit. Those dogs are fine at home, but out in the world they're wildcards. Then there are the owners who keep a pit as a deterrent to trespassers, much the same way they used to keep dobermans.

The truth is a pit, or more specifically, the Staffordshire Terrier, is a strong working dog, with an inbred aggressive streak, that if properly socialized doesn't assert itself. Pits have been family dogs for more than a century, and are particularly good at protecting a family, especially the children.

An Akita or a Chow-chow is natively more dangerous than a pit.

The quintessentially gentle child companion dog was Petie, from the Our Gang comedies. Petie and his sons, were registered Staffordshire Terriers...Pit Bulls...and with the chaos of a movie lot, the strangers of a film crew, and the horror of a room full of 5 year olds, there was never a problem with the dogs. Hell even a Golden would get fed up with THAT crap. Which underscores that problems lie not with the breed but with ignorant owners. And a community ignorant of the dog, or how to handle an incident.

The guy next door to me raised pits. They were loud, to be sure. Boisterous. But very sweet dogs in person. He would take them around to the neighbors, introduce them to the dogs on the neighbors' properties to indicate to the dogs that these are friends, and that these people were friends even when not on the dog's home soil. Clever move. Because the dogs got out, occasionally. And there was never an unpleasant incident. They'd run to the nearest friend and expect to be taken home. Which is precisely what would happen.

These dogs would also be introduced to the other dogs in the neighborhood for the same reasons. And, when the pits would get out, there would be nothing other than a little noisy play.

There is a retired cop up on the next block. When he found out that there were pits here, he barred his kids from playing on the block. And he got up a petition to force the guy next door to get rid of his dogs. He came to me, being next door and demanded that I kick up a fuss living next door to such dangerous animals. I went over to the fence reached in and petted both of them in front of him.

He was so pissed he one of my flower boxes over.

I'm so comforted that he carried a badge and a gun.

He made so much noise that the neighbors finally had enough, and after 2 and a half years, they ran the neighbor off with his dogs. They moved out in October.

There's now noise about banning pits throughout the county with armed enforcement. Coyotes take a dog a week in this area, and we can't take them out, animal control won't take them out, and they're multiplying faster than the foxes, but animal control wants send a truck and a sheriff's deputy complete with shotgun to pick up a pit in someone's home.

Nice.

The problem, as with Dobermans, which we no longer hear about, is at the other end of the leash.

But speaking in general (not any one specific dog), the pit bull has 50 Hz if the hum -originates- in the audio chain or 100 Hz if in the power supply (presuming they are using full-wave rectification, single phase power supply).

Most anything over 1KW uses 3 phase power. Full wave rectification of 3 phase 50 Hz power would have hum at a 150 Hz rate, IIRC... but shouldn't have much of it, since 3 phase power is much easier to filter.

You're welcome.

There are two ways to skip around in the recording.

One is to download the recording (by right-clicking on the recording's link and then saving it to your hard drive) and then simply listen to it on your favorite media player.

The second method is to use the embedded player on the Web page -- when you click the recording's link, you'll see a light grey bar appear under the link after some seconds have elapsed. It turns dark grey as buffering progresses. The dark grey is a progress bar which shows how much of the recording has been buffered to your temp file.
The left-hand part of the bar turns blue to show where you are currently listening.

By clicking on the bar, you can make the playback jump to any point that has been buffered so far. Eventually, depending on the speed of your connection, you'll be able to jump anywhere on the time line.
Below the bar you can see a readout of where you are relative to the total length of the recording.

Glad you find the posts of value,

Kevin, WB4AIO.

No argument. Still not an excuse to have a knee jerk reaction against them.

I agree with all of this, and would add that another famous pit bull was Luke, who was famously featured in the Roscoe Arbuckle - Buster Keaton early comedies. A complete sweetheart of a dog, smart, beloved and never a danger to anybody. To my knowledge, he was never leashed, and never needed to be.

Recently, a little girl in Terry,Mississippi was mauled to death by a Pit Bull dog.The little City of Terry is in Hinds County. Terry is near South side of Jackson, also in Hinds County.

http://www.devilfinder.com
Terry,Mississippi girl killed by a Pit Bull dog

At least two of the suburb Cities of Jackson have already banned Pit Bull dogs a few years ago, Richland, and Ridgeland, maybe it's Madison.

I don't care what anybody says, I Want ALL Pit Bull dogs and mixed breed Pit Bull dogs BANNED from the City of Jackson.Much better yet, I Say BAN ALL Pit Bull dogs from America.Pit Bull dogs are wayyyyy too Unpredictable!

My little doggy is 100 percent Blue Heeler Australian Cattle Dog.Troy Majure, Veterinarian at Animal Medical Health in Jackson told me so.I bought my doggy for $150.00 when she was an eight weeks old puppy.She Owns the couch.

I'd forgotten about Luke. You're right.

A dog will be whatever you want it to be. If that doesn't happen, except in the very rarest of cases, it's because you failed to communicate what you want the dog to be.

And for those who are about to bitch about the lack of radio content in this thread...well, this is perfectly on topic for this newsgroup. Because a dog's tail moves in short waves.

Thank you. I'll be here all week. Try the chicken.

Perhaps ;-) but like I said, I'd hate to see their engineers get fired (or worse)...it's probably something an hour and $5 worth of parts could fix - or maybe just turning a knob.

FWIW, not only do I get this Codar crap in the 60m band, but some yoyo has it running from 11.98 to around 12.1 MHz here too, screwing up the top of the 25m band middays and afternoons. Grrrr....

It was a made in Canada DeHaviland U.S.Army Airplane (a very nice STL, Short Take off and Landing, Airplane, by the way) I hopped on from Shannon Wright Compound, near Vin Long, to Vung Tau.From Vung Tau, a Helicopter to Soc Trang.I had to wait a couple of hours in Soc Trang to catch another Helicopter going to Shannon Wright Compound.I liked those U.S.Army Turboprop Airplanes.

I used to have a Vietnamese girlfriend (she and her sister were from Rach Ghia, spelling,,, about seventy something miles Northwest of Saigon) who worked at a bar across the street from the U.S.O.
I used to bring her sandwiches and Shasta (It Hasta be Shasta!) grape soda pop, she liked grape.Her sister worked at the bar in a hotel just up the street on the corner.I used to stop off there and drink a big glass of Elephant's milk,,, GOOD stuff, Elephant's milk is.

One of the purpose/reason, dogs have tails is to help steer them when they are running around corners.It is Wrong to cut off a Dogs tail! Doesn't look right anyway.My doggy still has all of her tail.Sometimes, when she takes a poop out in the front yard, a little piece of that poop gets stuck on her butt hairs, that annoys her.I get a little twig off of the yard and I knock that little piece of poop off of her butt.

Doggy is part Dingo Dog.I once read the oldest Dingo Dog fossil/bone/skull was discovered in Vietnam.So,,,, my little doggy and I have both been to Vietnam.Part of her Ancestry.

I just now stepped out front to my snail mail box by the side of the street in front of my house to get my snail mail.A U.S.Army Helicopter flying low, almost directly over my house, Helicopter was flying due Southwest.Of course, just like I always do, I Saluted and then I waved my right hand up at the Helicopter.

My todays snail mail, in case the Keystone Kops/Fumbling Bumbling Idiots/FBI wants to know issssss,,, some advertising, eat joints, Captain D's, Papa John's, Popeyes, Globe Life And Accident Insurance, Dish Network, O'Reilly's auto parts, Pizza Hut, ChecksUnlimited.com, Shoe Carnival, McDade's Market, Firestone Tires, USAFreePhone.com, Comcast, Kentucky Fried Chicken, Church's Chicken, Serta Mattress Direct, Premier Care in Bathing Inc, walk in bathtubs with the side door on them, Fred's Hometown Discount Store, (Fred's Discount Stores first got started/originated in Coldwater,Mississippi http://www.fredsinc.com) and also a letter from Motor Trend Magazine.

Currently, forty three degrees inside of my flower box on doggy's front porch, bouque Lots of Bright Sunshine out thar, but also windy too.I am going to wait untill the 12:00 PM WLBT channel 3 tv Noon News is done, and I might get back to working on that tree stump in doggy's front yard.

!!! Just remembered -

Interesting that you mention DW in the same breath as V. Nigeria - right after I ended with Nigeria yesterday, I tuned into DW's evening (UTC) English transmission from Rwanda. Not only was the signal wonderfully strong, but the audio quality was superb, 180 opposite Nigeria's mush. It was almost FM-Hi-Fi quality. It was not pure joy, though - I was rather hoping for a better signal from their Sri Lanka relay.

I do seem to remember that Radio Berlin Int. used to have somewhat squashed highs too, but that was a long time ago (1970s and 80s) and I may not recall correctly.

The Ford Tri-Motor -- the original STL craft. I was fortunate enough to fly right seat on a short trip once. But it -will- deafen you.

Little known fact: A couple of the engine gauges (oil pressure, cyl head temp, IIRC-- this was over 30 years ago) were mounted external to the cockpit, mounted in the engine fairings.

Have you ever heard of the Keys brothers, Meridian,Mississippi? They set a Flight record which still stands to this day.From that, the Aircraft inflight refueling valve was invented, also, VHF two way Radios too.

The Keys Brothers Meridian,Mississippi

Meridian is about seventy something miles East of doggy's couch, not far from Alabama.About ten years ago, I bought a hardback book about the Keys brothers, I bought that book at a Goodwill store.There is an elderly gentleman I know, he and his wife live in Jackson, he was born in Meridian, he used to go to the Goodwill store and the Salvation Army thrift stores and other thrift stores in Jackson almost every day.When I got through reading that book, I gave it to him.

I have a like new Studebaker radiator temperature gauge, the kind that screws onto the radiator in place of the radiator cap, like the old antique cars used to have.Yep, I bought it years and years ago at one of the Goodwill stores around here.

Those kinds of old style reproduction radiator temperature gauges are still available, if you know where to look for them.Studebakers, Fords, Chevys, Chryslers,,, you name it.

Can't download the audio file because I'm on dial-up and it would take 5 hours. Listening via stream I see all the fields and bar you mention and understand exactly what you are talking about. However the blue bar won't advance forward at all no matter how many attempts I make.

I have no problems doing this on other sites when listening to audio files but can't do it on yours and I've tried using three different browsers.

Anyway, thanks for taking the time to reply to my inquiry.

How about getting your facts straight before posting? Your city Council flat out stated there is NO chance of a pit bull ban.
Sober up and shut up. Better yet, shut up first and then sober up.

From the Jackson Clarion Ledger:
"Ward 1 Councilman Jeff Weill has been pushing the city for months to take a harder line on dangerous dogs. The issue will be discussed today at a meeting of the council's planning committee, which Weill chairs.
Weill favors a ban on pit bulls, but he said he does not have enough votes on the seven-person council to get the ban through." Rest of

You're welcome.

Probably your problems are just due to to your slow connection coupled with the huge 120 MB-plus size of the Liberty Net files. On a five to seven hour file, it will take a while -- say a quarter hour or so -- before the blue section advances much on the progress bar.

You could try the shortest file on the page as an experiment. It's in the left column of http://3950.net/ near the top, under Recent Recordings. It's titled "WA1HLR/WB2CAU discuss 75 meter numbers station." It's about 1/100th the size of the Liberty Net files.

Maybe I need to break up the Net files into smaller sections for people with slow connections.

With my best,

Kevin, WB4AIO.

I am positive about 50Hz. The hum frequency is slightly lower than our usual US 60 cycles. They had this problem for ages,at least since the early 70's! Poor shielding in low-level audio stages or a possible impedance mismatch . They obviously don't seem to care about that at all...

DW does not have a good signal lately (budget cutbacks+poor propagation), at least over here on the east coast. In better times they ALWAYS had an exceptionally deep bass and their transmitted badwith seemed to be somewhat wider than the usual 5KHz,like everybody else suppose to. Original Grundig receivers (the real Satellits and older tube stereos, not the current products) certainly emphasized lows as well and it was their main audio characteristic. RBIntl was awful in every respect- I really couldn't stand them, audio was never one of their strong points. Glad they are gone,what a disgrace...

You seem to blame the dog for the abuse that was really the humans' fault.

I say let's ban dog fighters from America. That alone would solve 99% of the problem. It would end a lot of rampant abuse of pit bulls and non-pits alike, it would help dry up wanton breeding of the critters, and it would leave a much larger proportion of pit bulls and non-pits in the hands of people who will love them.

Le's face it - if they aren't training and fighting pit bulls, it will be some other unfortunate breed that then gets the abuse and bad press. It is the vile idiots who breed them that must be trounced.

Not really. It's the idiots who train them to be mean, or who encourage the aggression, that need to be trounced.

Some pits, like dobermans, are kept as a deterrent to trespassers. Owners train, or have trained, these dogs for aggressive containment of incursion by non residents. The proverbial junk yard dog. The breeder has nothing to do with this.

Further, aggression can be enhanced by irritants like gunpowder in the food, physical abuse, and violent play. All of this is the owner's doing, not the breeder's.

Pits have taken many of the places formerly held by dobermans largely due to their more muscular physique, as well as their media enhanced reputation. Also not the breeder's fault.

Dog fighting is another issue. And that's pretty despicable on its best day. And everyone involved with it deserves their day in hell.

There are, in fact, many breeds that have an aggressive nature. Weimaraners are very gentle and protective dogs, with the family, but can also be highly territorial, and aggressive with strangers, attacking by going for the crotch. A Weim can render a pit bull owner nutless in less than 5 seconds.

But controlling such behaviours is also a matter of training, socialization and behaviour modification by owners who care to bring a good canine citizen into the community.

2115. External ferrite bar for 2-6 MHz?

Hi - I have a portable radio I am tinkering with, so far superficially. It has a ferrite bar inside for AM and SW reception up to 6 MHz with no provision for an external antenna. The ferrite bar works great on AM, but as you might guess, the SW reception is short-changed.

To start with, I was thinking of getting another ferrite bar about 10" long, wrapping a few turns of wire around it (probably try several turn values to see what works best), mounting it on the back of the radio broadside to the internal ferrite bar, and then hooking the leads up to my external wire antennas. Any reason why this would or would not work for better reception near 4-6 Mhz? Would an end-to-end configuration be better?

Thanks,
Bruce

You're unashamed of being a troll and a troublemaker?

You want us to bug Gregg about what he does on another group? What do you think we are, net nannies?

Then I'll just ignore your stuff. We're big boys - we can take trolls or leave them if we wish, and there have been plenty. I don't really care what happens elsewhere. Gregg's OK in my book, and as far as I'm concerned, you're the problem. Sionara.

Thanks Bruce, though I didn't need you to say that for me - it's appreciated.

I have to say - I have never had anyone follow me around on usenet and post or bring up what I am saying in ANOTHER group. Kind of weird even for usenet standards.

All you're going to do Bruce is get on his shit list for going against anything he says. He truly is a psychological nightmare and a usenet bully who thinks he has the biggest johnson in every room he walks into. You can't talk to him - so it is best you don't - unless you like the constant bantering back and forth. The way I handle him is like dealing with a child when they're throwing a temper tantrum - - ignore them and they will either quit or tantrum themselves to sleep.

But thanks again.

Didn't I tell you Fred. :-) He tries to get everyone to believe that the DTS is the problem and they ruin newsgroups etc. etc. etc. etc.
to the power of ten. But there was no problem with you guys in here. You left. But I TOLD YOU didn't I ;-) how it would go down and that then it would REALLY prove who the TROLL was. <shaking my head and rolling

my eyes>

Everyone in this group is rather bright IMO Fred, if there was any doubt, there is now no doubt who the real troublemaker is/was.

I'm with you in theory, but asking the posters here to ignore trolls is like asking dogs to ignore poop. It just ain't gonna happen.

I don't know whether it will work or not, but here's a source for some seriously big ferrite rods:

If you don't mind it looking strange, it would probably work just as well to wrap a few turns (experiment with the number and orientation) of wire around the outside of the radio and then attach the ends of the wire to your external antenna.

Better yet, open the radio and wind a few turns around the existing rod, then bring the ends out to a terminal strip or connector.

With every good wish,

Kevin, WB4AIO.

"Standing firm, Univision pays a price"

It’s been months since Univision has encoded its signal for PPM. And it's been months since some Univision stations have subscribed to PPM ratings. The impact is being felt. Univision Radio revenue was down 9.2% in fourth quarter and the company says it’s seeing “softness” in markets where it has no ratings.

A word of caution! Be extra careful with the existing rod(loopstick). The wires on it are so fine that it may brake off very easily. RShack used to carry thin enamelled wire of various sizes.
Experimenting is fun and sometimes the results are much better performers than ready made products. Actually, there is a company called Palomar Engineers in California which speacialized in small loop HF antennas,ferrite cores of various types and rf baluns.Fairly high quality products.

Thanks, Arthur - I noticed that when I opened the radio up - those connecting wires are no thicker than spider webs. I certainly agree with Kevin's idea about trying some twists around the internal ferrite; I'm sure it would be quite helpful, but the reason you just suggested gave me pause.

Anyway, I think first I will try an external parallel ferrite bar linked to my outdoor antennas, maybe with a variable cap for tuning, and see what happens. That certainly can't hurt, and who knows? Maybe it'll help...or not! I noticed a specific ferrite bar item at Stormwise that might be the ticket, with recommended number of turns for various freqs of interest.

Glas Srpske

VANCOUVER, British Columbia – Joannie Rochette’s bottom lip quivered and the tears finally came as she bowed her neck to be adorned with a bronze medal that felt more like gold.

A week of incomprehension and bewilderment, of professional fulfillment amid personal emptiness, culminated on the most cherished steps of the Pacific Coliseum as the girl who became Canada’s favorite daughter realized a dream in the midst of a nightmare.

Few glances and gestures to the heavens in a sporting arena have meant as much as this one, as Rochette reached upward to salute her mother Therese, who died of a heart attack in the early hours of Sunday morning.

In truth, she has been saluting her all week.

Not just on the Winter Olympic ice, where a commanding and confident long program on Thursday night kept her in third place after the tear-jerking effort 48 hours earlier put her in medal contention.

Not just with jumps and spins and moves and musical interpretation. And not just with that hunk of forged metal that is all too often the only barometer of athletic success.

More than all those things, Joannie Rochette honored her mother with her grace and class and incredible fortitude – all attributes Therese tried to instill in her daughter.

“Even though she is not here anymore, I am not afraid to say that sometimes my mom could be a pain in the ass,” Rochette said with a smile that blended sadness and loving memory. “She was my biggest fan, my best friend.

“She wasn’t confident for herself but she wanted the best for me. She would cheer me up when I was sad. She would put me down a bit when I got too proud. I would always remember the other moms leaving the skating rink and she would stick around, even when I wanted her to go so I could talk to my friends and eat my poutine.

Figure skating is a sport where turning up and going through the motions is a fast track to disaster. Engagement and emotion are what this outwardly picturesque but mentally tortuous game is all about.

Rochette had little option but to lay herself bare on the Vancouver ice and hope against hope that muscle memory and perhaps a smattering of help from above would pull her through. And it did.

There were two minor errors but no falls during Thursday’s free skate, and the display was enough to secure a medal she didn’t need in order for her Games to be considered a triumph.

“I am happy to be on the podium,” Rochette said. “That was my goal coming here and a lifetime project with my mom – and we achieved that.
Canada's Joannie Rochette reacts after receiving her bronze medal. (AP Photo/Amy Sancetta)

“I don’t know how I could skate, my legs were shaking. I don’t know how I did it, my mind was not here. But I am glad I did and 10 years from now when the pain has gone a bit I would wish I skated here and I know that’s what my mom would want me to do.

“I feel proud and the result didn’t matter.”

There may be no truer words spoken during these Winter Olympics. In a circumstance when mere participation would have been enough, Rochette’s bravery and resilience provided the most uplifting of stories, a wonderful antidote to the constant fervor for medals above all else.

This was about human spirit. Tears trickled down Rochette’s face and onto the ice, just like they spilled from countless faces in the Pacific Coliseum crowd, where the 24-year-old’s father Normand sat feeling a mixture of pride and loss.

“Joannie is a special person,” said her coach Manon Perron. “She believed and she knew what she had to do to honor her mother. She took the support of the people and she used it to help her.”

Rochette didn’t shoulder the hopes of a nation. Rather, she was pulled onto the shoulders of the Canadian people and the figure skating community. Not even the most forlorn blackheart could fail to have been moved by this tale of triumph.

The method of coping used by Rochette, utilizing an inner steel that bordered on defiance, just made the public want to embrace her even more.

Every jump was met with a collective intake of breath from 11,000 fans, every spin followed by a sea of eyes and hearts.

With a resounding hand slap for Perron, she skated to center ice to begin her routine. After landing the first set of jumps she was away again, lost in the most deeply personal of moments on a public stage.

A bad landing on a triple flip and double Axel ended any faint hopes of silver, as she couldn’t get enough height to make an ideal landing. But that wasn’t near enough to deny her a top-three finish behind Kim Yu-Na and Mao Asada.

Joannie Rochette is a quiet girl from a tiny town in Quebec, where she will return next week to reflect on the rollercoaster of emotion she has survived.

Yet she has left a mark on Vancouver and on everyone who witnessed her personal struggle. She provided these Games one of its most iconic moments.

And she made the most appropriate and moving of tributes to the woman who should have been here to see it.

Spent the afternoon re-furb'ing a GE Superadio I that I picked up yesterday.

Not much to look at, but after I got the dial back on track, and cleaned it up a bit it performs nicely.

Antenna is nice and straight, but the markings around the volume and tone controls are pretty much worn away.

Guess this will be my out back, kick back and smoke a nice cigar radio this coming summer.

Also, check IF alignment.
I found a 7-2940B that had been dunked in latex paint and then wrapped in a bag.
After cleaning it sounded ok but average sensitivity. I did a little alignment and it's now as good as my SRIII, except for bass.

Thanks, Arthur - I noticed that when I opened the radio up - those connecting wires are no thicker than spider webs. I certainly agree with Kevin's idea about trying some twists around the internal ferrite; I'm sure it would be quite helpful, but the reason you just suggested gave me pause.

Anyway, I think first I will try an external parallel ferrite bar linked to my outdoor antennas, maybe with a variable cap for tuning, and see what happens. That certainly can't hurt, and who knows?
Maybe it'll help...or not! I noticed a specific ferrite bar item at Stormwise that might be the ticket, with recommended number of turns for various freqs of interest.

BJ

Several websites have info on this. Both ferrite and larger air core loops.
I don't have the links handy, check Bill Bowden

I bought it at a Goodwill store a bunch of years ago for two or three dollars.It doesn't work, it wasen't working when I bought it.I don't know how to repair radios.I will keep it anyway.

I have a GE Superadio too, I reckon it is a Superadio I, but it doesn't say Superadio anything on it.I bought it new at a Service Merchandise store.It still works ok.

I have a nice Realistic DX300 FS radio plays nice and in good condition.
Only issue is the preselector slips. I do not have the time to pull it apart to tighten whatever needs to be tightened just bought a Drake R8a.

And that's all that's necessary.

The winding of wire around the radio, the external coupling loop, those are all constructs to deal with people not wanting to open the radio.

Winding some turns on the actual loopstick is what would be happening if that radio had an external antenna connection.

And it would be the same if a radio didn't have a loopstick but just a tuning coil, there'd be a few turns of wire as a primary to couple the antenna to the tuned circuit.

Well, that's the whole point! I did not want to open the radio up and mess with the ferrite already wrapped with the most fragile-looking wire imaginable.

Understood.

> Michael

I actually tried wrapping a wire around the radio per Kevin's suggestion. What I found was that a single loose wrap of wire, with about 10 feet going across the room and the other end attached to a ground, was enough to dramatically increase the coupled signal. 4.8 - 6.2 MHz became significantly louder. 1/2 additional wrap was enough to begin to overload the band with intermod products from 3 or 4 nearby 50 kW MW blowtorches. Two full wraps obliviated any resonant signals. My wires on the roof are clearly severe overkill, possibly in the literal sense. I did not try my PAR high-pass MW attenuation filter inline; it might have had some effect.

My guess is that this inexpensive old single-conversion portable is probably too sensitive and too loose on its front end to worry about it much more. If I did the external ferrite rod, it would likely perform best positioned linearly with the internal ferrite rod rather than broadside, although the radio is so sensitive that broadside might work OK. I think it might have to be tuned with a slug or a VC, just to allow some selectivity to remain.

"The BBC will close two radio stations, shut half its website and cut spending heavily on imported American programmes in an overhaul of services to be announced next month.

Mark Thompson, the Director-General, will admit that the corporation, which is funded by the £3.6 billion annual licence fee, has become too large and must shrink to give its commercial rivals room to operate."

Popular local host fired to create time slot for syndicated program

By CHRIS CHURCHILL, Business writer
First published in print: Friday, February 26, 2010

COLONIE -- Radio station WGY (810 AM) on Thursday fired host Al Roney and said it would replace his show with a syndicated program manned by Fox News personality Glenn Beck.

The decision quickly set off a small firestorm among Roney fans, who established a "Save Al Roney" Facebook page and decried the loss of what they called one of the few local voices on Capital Region radio.

"It's all gone national," said Geoff Searl, a 28-year-old from Clifton Park. "I just see this as a revenue-based decision instead of one that's in line with what the public is looking for."

As of 1855 UTC at least 147 dead and no doubt will climb.

They say it isn't "if" the tsunami will strike Hawaii but "when." They are estimating around 4pm EST it will hit the big island.

What is pretty wild IMO is that there is also a warning for California and the New Mexico/Oregon border. I think that is what I gathered.

How to spell Mississippi Emma come first

Say cuzz, day before yesterday, I saw on local tv news about a woman who called the City of Madison (Madison is a County, also a City, Northside of Jackson, of course you already knew that) about a neighbor next door to her who had/has a couple of junk cars in his driveway and she wants them hauled off.The tv video also showed a 1956 GMC pickup truck parked in his garage.If the truck is hauled off (if it hasen't already been hauled off by now) to the impound yard (in Jackson, I think) and if he doesn't pay the impound fee to get it back, do you know anybody who might be interested in that truck?

Been listening to KDKA AM radio in digital. What a crappy signal. It switches back and forth from digital to analog and during the transition the receiver makes this screech noise that sounds like the receiver isn't resolving the digital signal correctly. When in full digital the high frequencies are so dirty sounding, I guess due to the slow bit rate, that I have to ask myself, what's the point? When it goes back to analog the signal cleans up and sounds great. Tell me again why would anyone want this?

The people who forced IBOC on this country were billionaire media moguls who wanted a digital system that would preserve the signal superiority of their stations -- in other words, a system that would keep the existing power/quality hierarchy intact.

What they did _not_ want was a new digital band that would open up many new channels, all with essentially perfect quality and equal signal-to-noise ratios.

They didn't care very much about whether their IBOC digital system performed well.

They got what they wanted.

Is CBS really trashing itself or what? 1010, 1020 and 1030 all destroying each others' signal with IBOC. It's almost like they want to fail.

Greetings, mates!

The Crystal Ship is going on the air this evening on 5385 kHz AM.
Transmission will commence shortly after 2300 UTC, and likely continue through 0030 UTC or later.

We'll be grooving to the sounds of the 60s, so break out your peace, love and understanding. If you have misplaced them, we shall try to help you locate them.

Coming in fair to poor here in South Carolina. Music included Sonny and Cher's "The beat must go on", Gilligan's Island theme, and Nancy Sinatra's "these boots are made for walking". A lot of noise in the background.

billmc@agora.rdrop.com

Band allocations and time zone conversions for the USA. Includes broadcast bands used outside the USA. For multi-use bands, primary usage is shown.
Some stations operate outside official bands. Information is from Oct 2008 FCC rules and Sep 2009 NTIA manual, see Chapter 4 of:
http://www.ntia.doc.gov/osmhome/redbook/redbook.html

Frequencies are in kHz. Usual spacing in shortwave broadcast bands is 5 kHz. Frequencies above 10000 kHz tend to propagate better during the day; frequencies below 10000 kHz tend to propagate better at night.

Please e-mail suggestions and corrections to billmc@agora.rdrop.com.

Phone line as SW antenna

Changes preceded by "|".

WARNINGS AND DISCLAIMERS

Connecting unapproved devices to phone lines may be illegal in your area.
Telephone lines present a potential shock hazard. Do not use this antenna for transmitting. Use at your own risk.

INTRODUCTION

This article describes how to use a phone line as a shortwave receiving antenna. Performance will vary depending on the kind of phone line you have. Overhead lines usually make okay antennas, while underground lines | usually don't. Phone lines carrying DSL service may be unsuitable because | DSL operates over a wide spectrum. A phone line antenna will generally pick up more power line noise than a dedicated antenna, so don't expect to | use it for DX work. Nevertheless, I found that it outperformed the | telescopic whip antennas built into many portables.

A reader sent in this suggestion: If you're concerned about connecting the phone line directly to the receiver, try wrapping the phone cord several times around the receiver's telescopic whip antenna instead.
Performance may not be as good as a direct connection, but it will probably be better than the whip antenna by itself.

Someone else wrote asking about lightning protection. I haven't thought much about it because thunderstorms are rare in my area. Most phone lines have lightning arrestors on them where they enter the house, but the lightning arrestors may pass enough energy during a lightning strike damage a receiver. My suggestion is to disconnect the antenna when not in use if you experience frequent thunderstorms.

HOW TO DO IT

The simplest connection is a single capacitor between the phone line and receiver. The capacitor eliminates all phone line voltages, including | ringing, so that they will not harm the receiver. The capacitor should
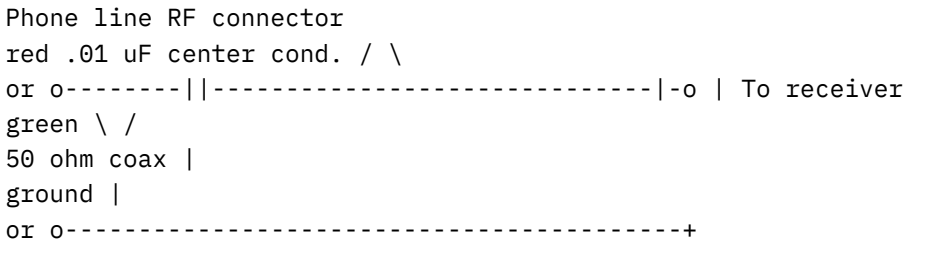
| be rated 250 volts or higher.



N.C. = no connect. I originally connected the phone line ground (yellow wire) to this terminal, but reception was better without it (if you do this, play it safe and put a .01 uF capacitor in series). If another ground is available, you can connect it to this terminal.

If you are picking up local AM or FM radio stations on the shortwave bands, it is likely that your receiver is overloaded. Inexpensive and portable receivers usually lack the filtering needed to eliminate this interference, but you can make your own filters. Filters can also be | purchased from shortwave dealers (see below for recommendations).

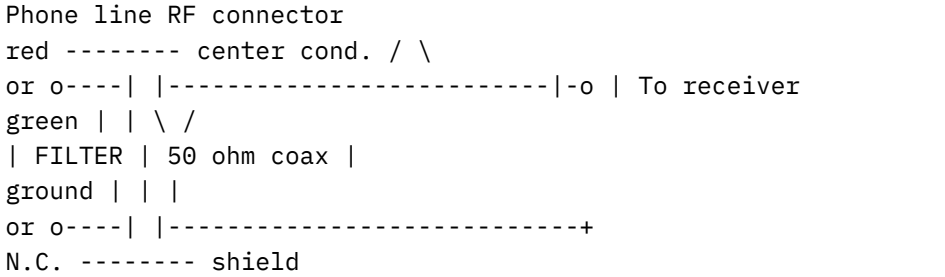
A high-pass filter can be used to remove signals below the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from local AM stations and presents a high impedance to the phone line at audio frequencies so that the phone line remains balanced.

A low-pass filter can be used to remove signals above the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from FM and TV stations, as well as VHF 2-way radio transmitters. If you use both filters, connect the output of the first filter to the input of the second (don't forget to connect their ground terminals together). It doesn't matter which filter is connected first.

These filters also work well with random wire antennas. Just connect the antenna in place of the phone line.

The filter(s) should be connected to the phone line in this manner:



| RECOMMENDED FILTERS
| If you don't want to make your own filters, the following have good | performance, are well-built and affordable:
|
| Model 400 BCB interference filter (3.5 MHz highpass)
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/filtersrf.html#bcb

| Model 420 HF lowpass filter (30 MHz lowpass)
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/filtersrf.html#3
| (scroll down a bit to see the model 420)
| If you have a random-wire antenna, the following unit will provide | impedance matching and lightning protection (connect antenna to 450-ohm | terminal):
| Model 182A beverage matching unit
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/reconly.html#Beverage Matching

FILTER PLANS

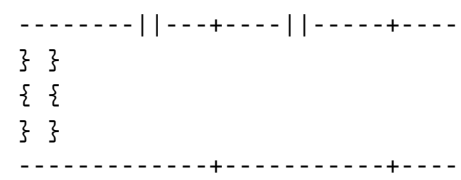
The original credit for the high-pass and low-pass filters goes to Paul Blumstein and John Shalamskas, respectively. Edited versions of their articles are included here:

Date: 09 Jan 91 00:54:08 GMT
From: paulb@harley.TTI.COM (Paul Blumstein)
Subject: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

The following ascii-schematic diagram is a high pass filter that will filter out Broadcast Band (MW) stations. I found it a great boon to my shortwave listening since local MW stations overload my ATS-803A front end & appear in SW, especially with a long antenna.

If you remember my antenna saga, I went from 50 feet to 150 feet & had overload problems causing me to cut back to 50 feet. (Even at 50 feet, I still have some MW interference). I took the advice of Gary Coffman and looked up filters in the ARRL Handbook. With the filter in place, I intend to try to increase my antenna length again.

Anywho, here is the filter, for interested parties.



The outer capacitors are 1500 pf ceramic disks.
The inner capacitor is 820 pf ceramic disk.
The squiggly things are coils (two total). Each one is 2.7 uh.
(a close value will do).

From: bill@videovax.tv.tek.com (William K. McFadden)
Subject: Re: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

I built the filter that Paul Blumstein posted recently and measured it on a gain-phase analyzer. Here are its characteristics:

100 kHz -120dB
500 kHz -68dB

1000 kHz -38dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2100 kHz -3dB

The source and load impedances were 50 ohms. Because the filter has five elements, the attenuation is 30dB per octave. The measurements confirmed this.

This filter seems to be a good compromise between interference attenuation and passband response. There is very little attenuation in the 120m band and above. It could use a little more attenuation at the upper end of MW, which could be done with more stages or a higher cutoff frequency. Alternatively, you could build two of these filters and put them in series. (Since two 1500pF capacitors in series are really 750pF, you could eliminate one cap.)

Just for fun, I put 470 ohms in series with the input to see how the filter performed with an antenna mismatch. The response was:

100 kHz -105dB
500 kHz -60dB
1000 kHz -35dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2300 kHz -3dB

These figures are normalized to the passband response of -15dB, which is due to the impedance mismatch between the source and load and would have been there without the filter. Hence, the filter works almost as well in spite of the mismatch, which is good news to those who use long-wire antennas.

From: johns@uhunix.uhcc.Hawaii.Edu (John Shalamskas)
Subject: Construction of filters for SW reception

Several people have asked for construction details of the filters I built for my DX-440.

The high-pass filter helped some, but in my location the VHF/UHF broadcasters are also causing problems. So, I dug out the ARRL handbook and chose a 7-element Chebyshev low-pass design that is -3 dB at 35 MHz, -20 dB at 43 MHz, and -50 dB at 64 MHz (all calculated; it works well in practice!)

LOW-PASS FILTER (Rejects FM, TV, etc.)

chassis ground

I had to do a little more improvising at this point. I used .33 uH instead of .36, and .66 uH instead of .42, but it works fine.

The 5-lug terminal strips were perfect for these circuits, since there are 4 lugs plus a grounded lug. All "ground" connections go to the lug that is mounted to the chassis, and the other 4 lugs are used for each of the connections on the signal line. One terminal strip is used per filter. Since both filters were necessary to clean up the hash, I am going to put them both into one box when I get the time.

The proper way to connect them is in series, i.e.

signal in ------- filter 1 -------- filter 2 -------- signal out

There is no difference between ends. They are "bilateral" which means you can't possibly hook them up backwards. (In the above schematics,

COIL WINDING

You can make the coils yourself using this formula:

L = 0.2 * B^2 * N^2 / (3B + 9A + 10C)

L is the inductance, in uH
A is the length of the coil, in inches
B is the mean diameter of the coil, in inches
C is the diameter of the wire, in inches
N is the number of turns

For small wire, you can assume C = 0.

PARTS SOURCE

Parts for the filters can be obtained from the following source:

Most hams will gladly send you a QSL card. The QRZ database has all their addresses.

Good info, but I think he's looking for SW radio station addresses.

I agree, some stations make it easy, some more difficult. WRTH and Passport used to have physical and e-mail addresses, but of course Passport is now "on hiatus". A word of caution - some stations that accept e-mail reception reports will also send back only e-mail veries....no physical QSL card, if that is what you seek specifically. Radio New Zealand is like this, for example, although for a postal RR and $2 US they will send a QSL card.

Thanks, Bruce. Shortwave stations is indeed what I was looking for (this being r.r.shortwave, after all.) So far I've only sent in one report (China Radio International, by email) and they responded by mail. I've been meaning to pick up the 2009 version of passport anyway, so it looks like this just gives me another reason.

Hey, Doc - if NHK is what you want, try this online form...

If you just ask them, they'll probably tell you exactly how to get a QSL.

You may also wish to be aware that some stations are quite eager to send QSLs, some just won't even bother. In the latter category, I have had no luck from RAI Italy (now apparently not on the air) and Radio Sri Lanka. I understand Voice of Nigeria is also a non-responder, although, I just sent them one. We will see...
```

To your own efforts, best of luck! Good info on the CRI - thanks.
Was your CRI QSL for a transmitter in China or one of their relays?

The QSL that I sent in was for 6005 kHz, which appears to be their Canadian relay station. They responded immediately by email, and a short time later I received an envelope with a postcard, a CRI calendar for the new year, and a few other very small items. I emailed in a QSL for Radio Turkey last night; I guess I'll see if and how they respond.

By Canada, I presume you mean via RCI's Sackville, New Brunswick transmitter. CRI also uses Radio Habana Cuba and quite a few others to get it's signal out. Here on the West Coast, relays are not very critical - CRI comes across the big pond just fine on it's own. NHK, however, loves those relays, too, for some reason.

A clear audio of Turkey (from Turkey) is always very tough here on the West Coast. I think the substantially polar path may be a big part of the reason why.

I just mailed out a couple of reception reports this AM for Radyo Pilipinas and Radio Vaticana - we'll see what comes back. Another pair of stations who play coy with their e-mail addresses.

I have 50 kW KGO 810 about 5 miles away, grounded in the same SF Bay mud as my own ground.

It almost pins my S-meter at minimum 40-over even attenuated, and it takes a massive effort to hear anything 10 kHz away from it; my MFJ-1026 works totally overtime to crush the signal even when I use USB/LSB on narrow and passband. Even worse is another 50 kW blowtorch just 1.5 miles away on 1100 - yecch! Not only that, but its harmonics are potent on 2200 and 3300 (farewell, R. Cultural, Guatemala). I wonder if the 1026 can wipe that 3300 harmonic...

If you're getting harmonics from a BCB station, there's something wrong.
Either their TX is REALLY dirty, and should be addressed to their engineering staff or the FCC, or your antenna system is rectifying and causing the harmonics locally (much more likely). What are you using for an antenna? On the frequencies you are talking about (even 3300 KHz), a loop may be the way to go. Nulls are our friends.. I have a home made broadband loop here. It's got a ton of LOSS, but the nulls are very good. I run it through my active preselector to bring the gain back up to a bit above unity. I can actually hear signals with it that would be far below my usual 10dB over S-9 noise level.

Dave, in all actuality many (most) hams no longer qsl for actual over the air contacts let alone (most gladly send you a QSL card). Sadly the cost of not only the cards but postage required to mail the cards has relegated this activity as a dying exercise. Sad to say!

To answer both your and Brenda's questions - I have an Alpha-Delta DX UItra Multiband dipole and a 50-foot inverted L up about 20 feet.

Obviously, these two antennas will not be a perfect match for all kinds of noise or nulling a superpower radio station a mere 5 miles away. However, they do a respectable job - I can kill a lot of noise with the 1026, and believe me, I have a TON of it. I can make most local AM stations nearly inaudible with this set up - but KGO and the thing on 1100 are just too potent. I receive them powerfully with no antenna at all attached. It is hard to overstate the signal of these monsters at this location. There are two others at 1050 and 1550 that come close, also both a stone's throw from here.

I am aware of the rectification potential of poor solder joints and dissimilar metals. It is entirely possible that I have one or both of these problems after having these antennas up for a decade or so. It has always been thus, though, and even when I attach a simple wire directly to the Hi-Z input of my R75. FWIW, only 1100 seems to have this effect very strongly, and it is better than it used to be (I used to get it on 4400, 5500 and occasionally 7700).

I may have mentioned earlier that I also use a PAR electronics inline high pass BCB filter. IT does a tremendous job killing the freqs below about 1.7 MHz, bit I still get some harmonic interference from 1100, which is still fairly strong even with the filter turned on.

I would not mind building a loop for 2-5 MHz, but I have not gotten to it yet. What kind of preselector do you use?

If I were contacting a ham, I would send him/her the card plus a return stamp or postage. I would expect no expense out put on his/her end, times being what they are. I would hope that his/her being heard by a distant receiver would be reward enough :-)

That was an excellent game, could have gone either way.....they were so

They can't make up their mind. From 5070 to 4775 to 4840. Alex Jones on at 0530utc.

And WTWW appears to be on 5755khz at night. So much for the excitement of a new shortwave radio station, they are just another frequency for "Scriptures for America". And they wonder why almost no one buys shortwave radios in the US anymore.

Basically a ditto on this, except clear and loud at 0550z March 2, 2010. Spanish language time stated by a male announcer every ten seconds. Would be absolutely perfect copy, no fading at all and very little noise, except for some silly hams in the U.S. co-channel wondering "what the heck is that?" in the background and chuckling about it. SINPO = 31453.

Signal is very strong tonight; I'd be curious what the xmtr power is...

Addendum - based on what I hear, I would guess this station transmits a carrier plus LSB; no USB is apparent from listening...neither voice nor pips.

Yeah, I noticed. By going to 4840 they avoid the worst of the Codar.
They also screw up Mauritania on 4945 and almost cover 4935 as well.
Oh well. At least we get Nigeria and Brazil back on 4770 and 4775.

Reception from the S. Pacific is unusually bad here in California 2nite.

I am used to SIBC Honiara being hit or miss, and Bangkok Meteorological Radio too, but R. Australia on 9660 sounds like a distant weak station, bad fluttery fading, and R. New Zealand I. on 11725, usually an S-9+ powerhouse, is MIA completely. Not even a het on USB. Weird, since Europe is just fine and Latin America is slightly better than usual.

The guy's cheese has slipped off his cracker. The only ones that would really benefit from his idea are the big comms companies. His idea that it would help make your iPhone better is dead wrong.. what it WOULD do is obsolete millions of current generation cell and smart phones, in much the same way that switching to digital modes did to analog cell phones (only many times more people own the current generation of cell phones.)

Kind of snarky...

I transmit narrow bandwidth digital signals around the world on "shortwave". I have a 45 Watt transmitter and a negative gain antenna.
Call it 35 Watts ERP. This is where SWL led me.

The 1857 Ft. Tejon Earthquake: In Brief

Many people think that the 1906 San Francisco earthquake was the largest earthquake to strike California in historical times, but that distinction actually belongs to the shaker that rocked southern and central California on January 9, 1857, uprooting trees in the San Bernardino Mountains and causing the Kern River to flow backwards for a time. Because of the small population in the state in 1857 (perhaps 350,000 people), there were only two fatalities, one near Fort Tejon, where many buildings were destroyed.

The earthquake was strongly felt from Los Angeles to San Francisco. The rupture on the surface of the earth can still be traced to this day, extending from near Parkfield, California, to near San Bernardino, California, over a distance of roughly 225 miles. Strong shaking from the earthquake was said to last from 1 to 3 minutes.

The earthquake occurred along the San Andreas fault, the major fault in California. The latest estimate of the size of this earthquake is magnitude 7.9. An earthquake of this size will certainly recur along the San Andreas fault, with devastating results given California's population today. The average recurrence interval for this earthquake has been estimated at 140 years ï¿½ 40 years. Since it is already 144 years since the last earthquake, the next one may not be too far in the future.

Despite the size of the earthquake, it occurred far enough away that only minor damage occurred in Santa Barbara, although the earthquake was strongly felt in that city.

It's Fox Sports in Lancaster. My IBOC receiver seems to have a very mushy mediumwave tuner. I'll drag it in here and hook it up to the longwire. All I've ever been able to get in AM IBOC is KSPN, 710, a 50 KW station in North Hollywood.

I've never been into QSL card collecting, but when I was a kid my best friend was.

I'll send a QSL card with one of my astronomy photos on it to anyone who gets me a reception report.

If I know it's a kid I'll probably try to do something extra.

I gladly send QSLs to SWLers - that's how I first got into the hobby and I am happy to encourage anyone who monitors me on HF to send me a report - I actually will QSL anyone - ham or SWL - no postage necessary - maybe I don't make that many contacts or maybe I just reckon that's a part of the hobby that should be kept alive.

I don't think it was meant "as opposed to" or 'in comparison with" any other truth. He is simply saying that an Indian news source may well have some bias (and thus should be taken with a grain of salt) when reporting on anything related to Pakistan. Do YOU trust an Indian news source when it relates to news about a sworn enemy? I'd be skeptical.

That being said, it's pretty hard to find an unbiased news source anywhere these days. Maybe it has been true forever, but I cannot be sure, not having lived that long (yet) ;-)

Correct - and it really stands out over there just N. of the Dumbarton Bridge east end. By contrast, the four towers for 1100 about 3.5 miles farther north are practically invisible owing to sun angle - but they are there.

No, but a darn good idea - I intend to try whomever I can - VOA, DW, or anyone else who still relays there - ASAP. DW in English was blasting in here from both Rwanda and SL a few days back, so they should be easy, if they still verify. RSL just burned my grits - I was so proud of getting them, sent them detailed 1/2 hour to 1-hour reports three times, each time with return postage, each time with a follow-up by e-mail - not a peep. The truth is definetily out there... BBC is still remarkably quite objective, despite all the shenanigans that it has been experiencing lately. R.Netherlands is another good source with very minor ethnocentric tendencies, but it is so negligible in comparison to the majority of of broadcasts on HF as well as the internet and other mass media.

South Pacific stations are not very powerful to begin with. Even R.Australia and R New Zealand usually do not have stable signal over here on the East Coast during better propagation times. SIBC on 5020KHz is normally impossible to catch on any of my receivers (must be low powertransmitter). And RHC is all over the dial day and night.

I suppose the title of 'first' depends upon how you define 'regularly scheduled' since Reginald Aubrey Fessenden was undoubtedly the first man to transmit sound (mainly to very surprised marine spark operators) via radio. That happened in 1900, eight days before the dawn of the 20th century, and again with better quality in 1906 -- but Fessenden's transmissions were irregular experiments, repeated only a few times and not on any kind of schedule.

It could be argued that Fessenden (who was also a pioneer in the development of CW) was the inventor of both radiotelephone and amplitude modulation. He also discovered the heterodyne principle, very important for all of us here in rec.radio.shortwave!

With all good wishes,

Kevin, WB4AIO.

Cuhulin, you realize that the huge majority of people reading this

Those are salt ponds, of course. Purposely filled with water that is then allowed to stagnate and evaporate.

On further thought, I have not driven along that road in awhile - I am trying to recall whether that area is open water or more of a plant-laden wetland. Now I need to check!

Sure does. It could be - but I am unsure whether panels of that size can generate the necessary wattage. It is possible perhaps - you can usually get up to a megawatt per acre with current technology. Unless they have big storage batteries, it won't keep them on the air all night, though.

I s'pose you're right. Until recently I've been something of a

I agree about RHC - those guys and China are like flypoop.

On the S. Pacific, West Coast NA is different. NZ and the Aussies are loud and easy here, in fact RNZI is one of the three most powerful stations I receive outside U.S. boundaries. I can get RA easily on two to a half-dozen different freqs any given time of night or day. I can usually get at least faint words from SIBC, although R. Rebelde has been killing them lately with their "new improved" signal.
Thailand, Japan, Philippines, Guam, Indonesia, all barrel in here, may even when they are transmitting in the other direction. Obsequious CRI often feels like a big sloppy dog trying to crawl into my lap.

However, yesterday AM UTC they were DEAD. I have not seen anything like it before.

OTOH, it was not just RHC - the Brazilians were pretty nice, and the Ecuadorian time signal on 3810 was armchair alongside the hams.

They were all back last night local time, though, so all's well that end's well (WS) :-).

BTW, it's Mongolia season! :-) Gonna stay up late this weekend and see if I can pick' er out.

Well, that's not the point. This is a shortwave group, not a local TV station news group.

Unless I tune in on my computer, I (and 99% of all the people likely reading this newsgroup) won't know or care what TV news program you watch, because we are too far away to receive it! So, why would you mention it?

Doggy is fine; yuor screwy neighbors are fine; your posts about interesting websites are fine, and your outdoor stump is fine. Those are interesting things in your life, and we are happy to hear of them because we care about you. However, nobody here cares what time your local news comes on, because we cannot possibly receive it. You realize this, right? That's why I never tell anyone about my local news on KPIX. Nobody else talks about their local news, either.

There is a new kind of solar cells which has been recently invented, it uses fiberglass, maybe it is plastic, ''strings/filaments''.It is much more efficient and also much less costly than the older style of solar cells/panels.I read about it somewhere on the web, a few weeks ago.

cuhulin, are you referring to the "thin film" technology? Looks like big sheets of plastic with wires coming out the end? These certainly hold some promise.

It really does not matter. Since there are such large incentives to do it, they can put in a solar array much smaller than needed to power the station and still eliminate the cost of electricity.

A friend of mine did it in Pennsylvania, he got 1/3 of the array paid for by the state as a grant, 1/3 by the US government as an income tax deduction, and the rest will be paid for in 4-5 years by the Philadelphia Electric Company if he lets them offset their coal fired production capability by "virtual rental" of his.

This is without ever producing a single Watt of power. Anything his system produces will offset his electric bill, and if he produces more than he consumes, he gets paid for it at a higher rate than he pays to consume.

Here in Israel, there is a 5:1 bounty on locally produced power.

Geoff.

Incentives come and go. Here in California, we don't quite get the same benefits - yet - that some others do. We do get some help, but not as much as in Pennsy. Now that we're on the brink of economic catastrophe in the tarnished Golden State, it is hard to tell when, if ever, it may happen.

When we produce excess residential solar power, our power company is only required to pay for a tiny fraction of it; the rest they get free. I have no real problem with this, as I believe the real value of alternative energy lies in the reduction of fossil fuel use; but most others don't see it that way.

I could put solar on my roof for about $18-20K U.S. right now, but it would require about 12 years to recoup my investment assuming some gov't aid help and typical grid buyback rates. That does not count the fact that I'd need to remove a large shade tree ($3,000) and find another place to hang my HF antenna ;-)

Where it says, IBM's New Thin Film Solar Cell is 40% More Efficient.

Actually, it might have been in one of my latest snail mail issues of Popular Mechanics or Popular Science magazines where I first read about it.

There are some good articles in those magazines about new solar power technology and also new solar cell electricity storage technology too.Head on over to your local area libraries and read up.That will give you something to do while you are resting.

When I was a kid, the Eastern Bloc countries all had interval signals that, somehow, were as frightening as the spectres of the things that I imagined going on behind the Iron Curtain. Radio Tirana in particular had a desperate sounding minor key IS that made me feel terribly sorry for the persecuted people in that horridly backward and iron-fisted nation.

But there was one IS that really creeped me out on any given cold Massachusetts winter's night sometime in the 1970's. I would sit in the dark all snug and warm in front of my Hammarlund HQ-100 or my Astronaut-8, the only light in the room emanating from the radio before me, and scanning around 31 meters this minor key theme would pop up 2 minutes before 10 PM...

The station never IDed in English, so I never found out what it was (until today! :-D), but the Interval Signal and the language my naive ears heard made me imagine it was some Soviet satellite where people lived lives of utter despair and destitution under the cruel eyes of a secretive Stalinist government, always wondering whether they would see their loved ones again when they got home work in the dim, smoggy factory. The terrors were almost unimaginable...it sent fear through my soul.

Imagine my surprise when I found out what it really was today!

Once here, open up Israel - R. Israel - 1978 using Realplayer. It still sends shivers down my spine.

While you're at it, check R. Tirana 1974 too :-)

Cuhulin is one of a kind, he likes old b/w TV programs, he does not care for new shows or movies. At least that is the general impression
I am getting (judging) from his most 'unusual' remarks! Callsign prefix 'W' used to be reserved strictly east of the Mississipi; lately it is not always so indeed.

V.of Turkey must be THE KING of thriller interval signals. I would say no eastern block country came even close to THAT piece of frightening composition! Turkey has retained some elements of music of the ancient peoples that inhabited Asia Minor since time immemorial...
Albania too, though not so deeply moving.

I agree, it's beautiful. But IMHO when it comes to simple beaty, there is no other that beats the IS of R. Norway [1]. The modern-music composer Arne Nordheim [2] has made a marvel of an IS. This is considered his best work ever by many.

Hmmm - to each his own I guess. Turkey's IS, for me, is essential ancient Middle Eastern / Asia Minor - exotic, but not frightening.

That's right, my bad - the two big Texas "W"s west of the Mississippi. I used to hear them quite well from Massachusetts 35 years ago. From California - not so much.

Massachusetts was a great place to hear AM BCB DX. I managed to get almost every state in the lower 48, including California and Washington, plus a bunch of Canadians across the prairie, on a Radio Shack portable using just the internal ferrite bar. Everything east of the Rockies was a cinch. Had I know then how to loop a wire aorund the radio for added induction, who knows what else I could have grabbed.

Nobody aims their signals thisaway, I guess...

I like old shows too - I'll take a silent movie over anything post-50's anytime.

The two Texas "W"s - WOAI and WBAP - have been around awhile.

One interesting thing I did just discover - and I would not have expected it - is that V. Russia, on it's "contact" webpage, provides a mailing label that anyone in the world can use to send them letters FREE. It's an odd label, it seems to route business mail through the Netherlands, but I have no reason right now to doubt its usefulness.

Here is a link or two:

and the address label they provide:

Oh, just let him be. This goes back quite a ways, and I think he's a good egg :-)

It's interesting to think that everything we write - including Cuhulin's prose - is being preserved for posterior, er, posterity, by Google and whomever else has storage space to burn...

Try a Google search of the groups for "cuhulin" - I'll bet it's amazing!

Thanks for those links.

To me, the most magical interval signal of all time was that of Russia's Radiostantsiya Rodina (which, I believe, means "Radio Homeland"). The IS spoke to me of infinite longing, of distant seas, of lost loves contemplated at sunset. It was beautiful, though probably only a dozen notes or so.

The BBC's European Service IS of a morse code "V" on tympani (which also sounded like the opening notes of Beethoven's Fifth) was also haunting. It wasn't too many years ago they were still using it on 3975 kHz.

With every good wish,

Kevin, WB4AIO.

Kevin, for the BBC, I trust you mean this "V" IS on the timpani...

http://www.intervalsignals.net/files/ukg-z-bbces_vis_c1940.m3u

This one goes back to WWII, apparently, when England used whatever means it had to portray a mood of defiance and strength against German aggression. I have never heard it, even when I was a kid in the 1970's. I have, however, heard this variation:

http://www.intervalsignals.net/files/ukg-bbcws_v_interval_signal_170701.m3u as recently as a few years ago. I don't know if it is still used, but either of these is haunting and full of historic meaning.

What a silly dipshit. You spend on all your time digging up nonsense on a dead issue. You're a "kick a dead horse" geek!

BTW, I am also a "geek" about hiking, mountaineering, bicycling, photography, geysers, volcanology, astronomy, geology, meteorology, steam and model railroading, classical and folk music, rollercoasters and most of all, my beloved family - and I seriously doubt that my wife, who knows me a lot better than you do, would consider me shy.

So, consider the brief time you have on this planet, and consider whether it may be used more wisely than when saying endless stupid puerile things about dead issues. Geek.

Well, had an OM-1 for ages - but after beating it to death for 25 years in the mountains and thunderstorms and tornadoes and blizzards, I got me a Canon XTi. It's just an entry-level camera, but with a decent replacement zoom lens in place of the stock POS and a 70-300 zoom, it does almost all I need it to do ;-)

I'd love a nice 500mm fixed lens for it - for the Yellowstone wolf and grizz shots. $$$, though, and as you can see, all my hobbies are expensive ones.

I have a few shots here:

http://www.neo-tech-lab.co.uk/Panoramio/PhotoViewer.htm?1314131

None are radio-related, unfortunately ;-)

I've always thought the theme music from Zurich Insurance's commercial "Change Happens" would be the perfect IS. Played by Spacetrain, it is paradoxically the most calming and uplifting composition I've ever heard - almost mysteriously so.

Almost all Turkish folk music is essentially very sad. Once I inquired a native from there and got a fairly honest responce: nearly all folk songs of Turkey is same as crying !

I'd love a nice 500mm fixed lens for it - for the Yellowstone wolf and grizz shots. $$$, though, and as you can see, all my hobbies are expensive ones.

I have a few shots here:

http://www.neo-tech-lab.co.uk/Panoramio/PhotoViewer.htm?1314131

I KNEW that beautiful canyon shot was Bryce before I even moused over it.
There's just no place like it in the world. Some other nice canyons there (Big and Little Cottonwood), but not a lot else to draw anyone to Utah (unless they're Mormon, and even the Mormons are getting to be a minority in their own state anymore..)

Great shot. Would love to see the uncompressed version.

R.Israel has been using the refrain from their national anthem as an interval signal for as long as I can remember. Great performance,not shure when it was recorded. Might be the philarmonic orchestra . None other than Arturo Toscanini was conducting it's inaugural concert in 1936 !

When I was a kid growing up near Phoenix I could DX all of N. America on an All American 5 tube superhet (with 100' of wire inductively coupled to the loop). I listened to WLS regularly, and could get many Eastern Seabord stations, e.g. WBZ, WIBG, etc., when conditions were right.

When you could only own a handful of stations you were much more protective of your spectrum and much more original in your programming. Group ownership of too many stations has turned the product into audio junk food.

Adams said that the camera is just a box. It's the lens that makes the picture. You spend on good glass, the body can become irrelevant for most applications. The only reason I upgraded my Nikons, is I needed faster burst speed for aerials covering boat races.

Thanks, Brenda, that one Bryce shot I have up is a scan from a 1984 slide - it was an incredible moment, I had never seen light like it before or since, really. I added narrow border, but otherwise, that's the scan. I have no digital photos of the place just yet.
Want to get back there soon.

If you want to see the shot as best as it can be, click on the tiny thumbnail shot, then at the Panoramio webpage that comes up click on the larger image again - that gives a full-size version.

Night times, on the AM band, even with some of my cheap radios, I used to pick up a station in New York City, and Minneapolis and San Francisco and Seattle and Miami and Denver and quite a few other long distance AM stations in America, and Monterey,Mexico and Havana,Cuba, I think I once picked up a station somewhere in Canada too.Too much damn crap screwing up things nowadays/nowanights.

What's up with that crap?
All of the local tv channels here, via DirecTV are unavailable right now, since 12:00 PM this afternoon when I clicked on WLBT (NBC affiliate) channel 3 Noon News.
It says on my tv screen, same as it says on WJTV (CBS) and WAPT (ABC) and WMPN (PBS) and WRBJ (CW Television Services) and WUFX (MNT Television Services) WDBD (FOX Television Services) No need to call us - We are aware that this TV station is temporaraily unavailable,,, We'll have this channel back as quickly as possible.Sorry for the interruption.

Those tv channels are still unavailable right now as I am typing this.

This isn't the first time they have done that, unavailable bullsh.t.

Screw it!,,, I am going to the food store.

There's very little I have up on the web. Most of the images I have are commissioned shoots, so I don't own rights to the images.

Boat races, air shows, motorcycle rides, even pictures of me behind the wheel of my own car at the race track, all belong to the entities that have commissioned me to shoot for them.

I'll dig through some and see if I can find some shots I own the rights to.

Yes that one stood out along with the "1922 photo Woman listening to pocket radio" - carrying an umbrella in one hand and the radio in the

When foolish Americans abandoned off air TV and rushed to hook up to cable and satellite TV, they begged the providers to have their way with them. You've given up all the power to jackasses like Turner, the cable outfits and the satellite scumbags. Americans have backed themselves into a corner. They all want to drink from the hose but the water valve is now controlled by someone else.

I am seriously thinking of turning off the TV cable altogether. There are only five or six things on that are worth watching ever, and most of them are available elsewhere.

That's their problem.
It wouldn't be an issue of Americans were content to take the stuff free off

Liberty Net for Week of February 27 ï¿½ March 6

http://3950.net/2010/03/liberty-net-for-week-of-february-7-march-6/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

TERRIFIC STORMS knocked out Net Control Station W1WCRï¿½s main antenna system and propagation was poor, but the Liberty Net ï¿½ amateur radioï¿½s historic free speech net of four decadeï¿½s standing ï¿½ continued as usual with more mind-expanding information than can ever be found on the commercial broadcasting bands. In fact, the Liberty Net alone is enough to justify the effort and expense of purchasing a shortwave radio and setting up an antenna system. And when the criminals in Congress are eventually ordered to shut down or censor the Internet, shortwave radio may well be the only way to freely communicate over wide areas.

Thanks to Marty, N2IRJ, youï¿½re able to listen to the Liberty Net right now on your computer ï¿½ or download the file and listen on your portable mp3 player. And N2SAG operates a live feed and chat during Net times that lets you make an end run around jammers and a fickle ionosphere.

Here are just a few of the many subjects of discussion and debate on this weekï¿½s Liberty Net recording:

ï¿½ The census departmentï¿½s so-called ï¿½American Community Surveyï¿½ is intrusive and unconstitutional. The supreme law calls only for enumeration, nothing more. Americans are right to refuse to answer. (31 minutes)

ï¿½ A Compton, California fraternity supposedly held a ï¿½ghetto partyï¿½ and the usual suspects wrung their hands and cried ï¿½racism.ï¿½ But, it turns out, a Black comedian with a sense of humor about his own peopleï¿½s foibles was behind the whole affair. (46 minutes)

ï¿½ A grassroots movement called ï¿½Unplug the Signalï¿½ asks the question: Are we being manipulated by the media to accept the eliteï¿½s ï¿½changeï¿½ agenda through a false Hegelian dialectic ï¿½ and visceral fear? (57 minutes)

ï¿½ Why do neither the Democrats nor the Republicans have an industrial policy for this country? All we have are industries frantically re-domiciling outside the U.S. in an effort to escape the regulation- and tax-mad Washington regime. We should send a research team to Switzerland to see how they succeed in attracting industry: they have a population with high intelligence and genetic quality which leads to good schools, a clean environment, low taxes and regulations, and exceptionally clean and safe cities. (1 hour 30 minutes)

ï¿½ A huge percentage of the so-called ï¿½stimulusï¿½ money goes directly to an unintelligent underclass which immediately spends it on landfill-bound Chinese junk at Wal-Mart or the equivalent ï¿½ effectively a subsidy of the Chinese regime by American taxpayers. (1 hour 31 minutes)

ï¿½ ï¿½Conservativeï¿½ hucksters are trying to get viewers to buy the Iraqi occupation governmentï¿½s ï¿½dinarsï¿½ in hopes of making a killing once the war is over. Itï¿½s far more likely that the value of the occupiersï¿½ paper will quickly trend to zero once the invaders leave. (1 hour 36 minutes)

ï¿½ The NAACP has given an award to self-described Communist Van Jones, calling him ï¿½an American treasureï¿½ and ï¿½the most misunderstood manï¿½ in this country. (1 hour 56 minutes)

ï¿½ Historically, numerous African tribal kingdoms captured members of other tribes ï¿½ or their own undesirables ï¿½ and stored them in barracks near the coast to facilitate easy access and higher sales to slave traders. (2 hours 0 minutes)

ï¿½ Should the scientists who falsified data to support governmental climate change ï¿½solutionsï¿½ be prosecuted? (3 hours o minutes)

Even though the storms in New Hampshire caused W1WCRï¿½s main antenna support to come down, his array of verticals was not damaged. Propagation for short and medium distances was poor, but the long skip brought a check-in from Panama. Itï¿½s worth listening through the tough spots and the weaker signals to get the interesting and uncensored content.

Remember that the Liberty Net is a free speech discussion net. No one, myself and the regular participants included, agrees with everything said by everyone there ï¿½ that would be absurd and impossible. Any licensed amateur station who brings courtesy and proper operating to the frequency is welcome to participate.

This weekï¿½s recording is 3 hours 54 minutes in length and about 80 Megabytes in size. The discussion portion of the Net begins at about the 22 minute mark. Listen to the Liberty Net every Saturday night ï¿½ within 10 kHz or so of 3950 SSB, starting at 10PM Eastern Time.

Our thanks go to W1WCR for his hard work and courage in keeping an important part of the amateur radio service alive since 1974!

Sounds like you are rather impressed with your pitifully and woefully erroneous world view. Shrug..no biggie one way or another.

You will likely be killed in the next couple years when the Great Cull happens.

Works for me.

Big difference in 1776.. most everyone had equivalent weaponry. Not so now.
The government has the planes, the bombs, the rockets, etc. to take us out from a distance. As stated, we would never see the enemy to shoot at them.

They're probably using a Winegard antenna clamped to the side of an

The only times I watch any of the local CBS/ABC/NBC channels are for local and state news.I couldn't care less for the other programs on those three channels.I pay a little over $72.00 each month to DirecTV.To Those channels probably each have 24/7 sub-channels carrying nothing but news, you know.

Former 60s radical/SDSer David Horowitz http://frontpagemag.com explains clearly the who and the what of the Progressives' agenda:

GLENN: Well yesterday was kind of a big day for education. National Day of Action to Defend Education. There were national calls for action. This sent thousands of people out into the streets, California, there were people in Wisconsin, there were people in Illinois. There was violence involved. UC Berkeley probably was the biggest. David Horowitz is here with me now. Hi, David.

HOROWITZ: Morning, Glenn.

GLENN: David, you were part of the 1960s generation that, you know, you were a useful idiot. Would you agree with that?

HOROWITZ: (Laughing). Well, I thought of myself as more than that.

GLENN: No, but I mean, that's what Stalin

HOROWITZ: I was a Marxist revolutionary. That's the way I would have described myself. And I was a leader of the new left and edited its largest magazine. And what the new left was, you know, was created, it was a disintegration of the Communist Party really because of the revelations about Stalin coming from Kruschev. So what happened was that the movement, it was a lot of groups. What you see in these protests is hundreds of groups. We used to call it the hydraheaded monster and we created it to fool people that we had different agendas from the from what the communists had. But actually they're the same agendas, that corporations are evil, we want socialism, we want the government to own everything and control everything and create social justice. And that's what happened yesterday.

If you look down the organizations, they were all in a coalition called Defend Education. But if you look at them, for example, there's one, Bail Out the People Movement, bail out the people, not the banks. This is a front group for International Answer, which is a pro North Korea Communist Party. I mean, it's a Bolshevik party that demonstrated the anti Iraq organizations. It was the leading organizer.

GLENN: I remember that.

HOROWITZ: Yeah, you have something called Anakbayan. There's a lot of those, which means sons and daughters of the people. If you look at the movement, you know how they support Hamas and Hezbollah, the terrorists. They have got this campaign to stop the U.S. military occupation of Haiti. This is what I call the neocommunist core of the progressive movement. The progressive movement includes fellow, what I would call fellow travelers. I mean, there are a lot of people who are on the left who would understand that there's a lot of crazies in the movement. And then you have SDS, you know, which is a violent campus organization.

GLENN: SDS, SDS is where the Weather Underground came from.

HOROWITZ: That's right, yes.

GLENN: Right.

HOROWITZ: They were all SDS. They got elected to the SDS leadership and then they said we're going underground and we're going to, we're going to you know, we're going to be authentic revolutionaries. We're not just going to scream revolutionary slogans. We're going to actually blow things up. That was their

GLENN: What's the

HOROWITZ: There are a lot of groups in here like that. There's MEChA which wants to take back the southwest, is a racist organization. They call the southwest Aztlán, which I think is an Aztec name.

GLENN: Well, I love the logo of this organization because it has the eagle with a stick of dynamite in its claw.

HOROWITZ: Well, yeah. I mean, I actually, I like the out front people.

GLENN: Yeah. Me, too.

HOROWITZ: They tell you

GLENN: They're much better than, they are much better than what we have in the White House right now, the Van Jones of the world.

HOROWITZ: That's right.

GLENN: That are I mean, is there any doubt in your mind that Van Jones because I've read what some of these people are calling for. It's exactly what Van Jones is calling for. Is there any doubt in your mind that Van Jones is as radical as these groups?

HOROWITZ: Of course he is. You can always ask somebody who came out of the left, I can you know, I can tell you if you turn against it, if you understand how evil it is and destructive and it wants to destroy America and you don't want to do that, you do what I did. I mean, you get out and you denounce them and you work against them. It's very easy to tell who's an authentic person who's authentically had different ideas and somebody who's just concealing the same agendas, you know, with a front. And that's what Van Jones is.

GLENN: I was in a cab I was at a cab yesterday and the cabdriver was from Russia, former Soviet Union. And he said finally he just pulled over to drop me off and he said, Mr. Beck, I want you to know I am a very big fan. And I said, thank you very much, sir. And he said, people in America, they don't understand. We talked for a little while about the code language. He said even my daughter now, he came before the fall of the Soviet Union. He said, even my daughter who is in college now is falling for the code language, and she doesn't believe me. And I keep telling her, listen, this is the code language of the Soviet Union. Agree or disagree, David?

HOROWITZ: Absolutely, I call them neocommunists. We have a term, you know, neoliberals, neoconservatives, neo Nazis. These are neocommunists. Same agendas, different faith. Like parents who are members of the Communist Party never refer to themselves as communists. They were always progressives. The slogan of the Communist Party at the height under Stalin was peace, jobs and democracy. That was the Communist Party slogan. But you can look, if you just go down the list of these organizations. And let me just say not only are there these, you know, fight imperialism and so forth but there's the American Federation of Teachers, there's all these graduate

GLENN: There's unions.

HOROWITZ: Unions. There's the department of English at Penn State. Indiana university is one of the GLENN: David, are the unions .. you watch the TV show, right?

HOROWITZ: Yes.

GLENN: Yes. Have you seen the language that we've been showing people lately from Andy Stern, with the Workers of the World?

HOROWITZ: Andy Stern is an old SDS radical. He's a Leninist. The two, what I would you [to] know, the two communist unions, aside from the teacher unions would be the SEIU and AFSCME, which is the municipal employees which is also here.

GLENN: It's a sponsor of this.

HOROWITZ: You know, when there were antiglobalization riots, they're there. They're part of this movement. There's a good one that I like here: Destroy Industry in Raleigh, North Carolina. I mean, that tells you what they're about. It's just terrible.

GLENN: David, how much I said earlier today, we played this Bald Communist. Play this for David, will you, Pat, the Bald Communist? Listen to this.

VOICE: And this is part of the thing is I don't think we're going to be meeting people's day to day needs and I don't think we have to help this capitalist system which has met the needs of American working people on the backs of third world plantations for my whole lifetime. We don't have to help that. We have to help bring this government down. We have to help destroy this system and that requires increasing the alienation that working class and oppressed people feel.

HOROWITZ: Yeah. Glenn, yeah, I saw that tape. And thank you for bringing that to light. What this guy is saying is what everybody on the left believes. It's very hard to convey this to people. People, Americans, it's just very benign and tolerant and they're always giving people the benefit of the doubt. What this guy is saying is what they believe. He has the poor judgment to say it on tape. But this is what

GLENN: Thank God.

HOROWITZ: What everybody who wants to change the world, what else could they be thinking? You know, there are ways of changing the world which is that you tell people, you know, we want to create a society where the government controls everything, and you put it up for a vote. In a democracy you put it up for a vote. But these people have these hidden agendas and that's what makes them so dangerous.

GLENN: So David, let me ask you two questions. The first one is, my theory is the people that are your generation that were part of SDS, that were part of the radical left back in the 1960s, they now are the ruling class and they are in Congress, they are in the White House, they are in business. They're everywhere. They have power. And they're also very sly now because they're undercover. These people are at the top and they understand because they did it themselves, they understand now what they didn't have in the 1960s was power at the top. So now they can stir up the hate and the students and bring the student activists into play, get them going while they apply pressure at the top and they pop the middle. Does that sound reasonable to you?

HOROWITZ: Well, yeah. I think that it's a little bit more complicated, but you have absolutely described what it is. That is, the people who were in the movement, we used to call it the movement in the Sixties now are running the government and they run the New York Times and the Washington Post. All those people were part of the left, of the Sixties. And their agendas are the same as these other people. Their tactics are different. So I don't I think some of them are, you know, embarrassed by this kind of radicalism. Certainly by that guy who you have on tape. They feel he is hurting their cause. We want to conceal, we want to conceal the agendas of the cause.

GLENN: Right. But their agenda is HOROWITZ: But their agendas are identical because, look, to defend the free market system, you defend private property, you defend individual rights and you oppose group collective rights, or you don't. And we saw all these so-called liberals and progressives, they are against the First Amendment, they attacked the Supreme Court decision which was a basic First Amendment decision. They are for racists. They are for racial preferences that is privileging certain designated groups who they call oppressed. I mean, they've corrupted our laws that way. And they are for socialism.

GLENN: Okay.

HOROWITZ: Obviously there wouldn't be this unbelievable push for a healthcare plan that, you know, a vast majority of people does not want if they didn't have these agendas. They want control. It's about control.

GLENN: David, hold on just a second because I have to take a quick break and then I'm going to come back and I want to ask you this one question and that is, how much danger are we in from the extreme radical left if things like healthcare don't pass? If this, if this movement now breaks down, how much danger is the country in? Back in just a second.

…: Back with David Horowitz, we have a special tonight on indoctrination, video you must, must see, things that are going on in your country that you had absolutely no idea. I asked David before we went into the break, I'm concerned about this extreme left because as Andy Stern said, you know, we want our money's worth. These people have put a lot of time, a lot of attention, a lot of manpower, a lot of money behind this agenda, specifically healthcare, and counted on Barack Obama. They are starting to mobilize in kind of violent ways. How much trouble are we in, David, if this thing starts to fall apart with Barack Obama and healthcare isn't passed?

HOROWITZ: I think the potential for violence and actually disastrous violence is very real and that is because these first of all, these are violent groups and they will commit violent acts. But much more serious is that they are integrated with our terrorist enemies. They have networks and their ideology links them into the Islamic jihad. I've written a book about this called Unholy Alliance [Google book; Amazon]. I actually, I mean, I have experience of this. I mean, I was a very intellectual leftist. I never threw a rock. But as the editor of Ramparts magazine, which was the biggest magazine of the left, I was approached by an editorial board, was approached by a defector from our intelligence services. And we printed national secrets in the magazine and, of course, nothing, nothing happened to us. We were advised by .. I was advised actually by a Harvard law professor, still a professor of constitutional law on exactly how to commit treason.

GLENN: Holy cow.

HOROWITZ: So this mentality, I'm telling you the revolutionary mentality, the idea that you can change the world or change America fundamentally, which is what Obama said, is a very, very dangerous mentality.

GLENN: All right. David, I've got to run. Thank you so much. We'll talk again. I'd like to follow up some more with you in the coming days on Andy Stern and his connection to SDS.

I never bash anybody for spending hundreds of thousands of their dollars for a new fancy expensive car, or a yacht, or a tv set, or whatever.

Heyyy, Jay Leno will be on Top Gear this coming Monday, on the BBC America tv channel, that is ayycordin to what Top Gear dude Jeremy Clarkson said last Monday night on Top Gear.

I am Glad Jay Leno buys those old vehicles and gets them restored, it's his money and a super duper Great auto hobby.If I owned all of those vehicles and Jay Leno had a feather up his arse, we would both be tickled.

I have a pair of old rubber boots I sometimes wear, if it is muddy when I am working outside.I also have a pair of white heavy ass thick insulated U.S.Army, Korean War era ''Mickey Mouse'' boots.

Yesterday, on my way to the food store I saw a 1964 Chevrolet Impala car.Looked like it still had the original factory paint job, the body wasen't rusted out, only one or two dings in the chrome strips on the body of that car.It was running Good, no smoke was coming out of the tail pipe either.I was driving my 1983 Dodge van right behind that car, right up at the top of the hill from doggy's couch.

Good old Detroit Iron, you just can't beat it!

I don't ever want any Toyotas or any of that furrin brand name crap vehicles.

So with 49% of the population owning at least 1 firearm..which makes it somewhere around 150,000,000 gun owners, the majority who have done military service at one time or another, or have been law enforcement etc...(and it should be noted that there are at least 400,000,000 privately owned firearms in the US)....and the government who has less than 2,000,000 "troops" in all branches of the service...and the vast majority of those troops being conservative....and private gun owners.... one wonders how all those bombs, rockets etc etc are going to be delivered against the people?

Lets look at it another way. The American Revolution was fought by 10% of the colonials. 10% of 150 Million people is 15 MILLION armed and pissed off individuals.

Do you honestly think that the Government will be able to declare war on 15 Million "minnows in the swarm" and rocket and bomb all those individuals before the officials and those sent against them are killed?

True, most of those 15 million people dont have antiaircraft weapons etc etc. Indeed. But the Government has to land, sleep, fuel, rearm, go off duty etc etc. Where each and every one of them become extremely vulnerable to those 15 Million people.

Leaderless resistance works admirably well in large developed nations.
Think there are huge machine shops and oil wells on military bases?
Ultimately the Goverment will run out of fuel, parts, pilots and other necessary individuals. Assuming that a very large part of them simply dont go home to the state national guards they come from..or simply dont frag the officers that give them the orders to blow up a town, freeway etc etc.

You simply havent thought it through well enough. Nor have been in the military.

Pity.

No. The only difference is this...

"I, _____, do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; and that I will obey the orders of the President of the United States and the orders of the officers appointed over me, according to regulations and the Uniform Code of Military Justice. So help me God."

The first thing the tyrants have to do is get 1.3 million Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen to violate their oath and obey UNLAWFUL orders.
Okay maybe that's the second thing they have to do.

The first first thing is to run like hell. Because when you screw with the Marines, you die like the rest.

before there were guns, there were arrows. Before that, swords and earlier, rocks.

The guns replacement could be...
*acoustic, electromagnetic ray guns or lasers.
*Genetically selective viruses

Also, since most all food and materials are now under the elite control of the rich through corporate consolidation, your life will pretty much be reduced to the life style of the camel jockeys we now Battle.

I still own two of the three Toyotas I ever had. One, a 1994 Corolla wagon, has well over 200k miles, all original, and still runs great. The bets car I've ever owned. The other is a 2005 minivan with 86k that never has a problem of any kind, unlike my earlier Dodge minivan, which was a worthless lemon from the word GO. I also had two Ford/ Merc sedans - both crap by the time they reached 100k. The only reason I do not have my older Toyota, which had over 200k, 40-mile-a-gallon, trouble free miles on it, was that some butthead smashed into it and totaled it. It still ran, though. I donated it, and a few weeks later, I saw someone driving it around with some patchwork on it. For all I know, it still is operating, with 300-400k miles on it.

That "old Detroit iron" let me down too many times.

So you think it's hopeless and will suffer any denigration because you can see no way to fight back?

Your lack of understanding of guerilla war is astounding. Not really, you seem to be the type that doesn't educate themself.

Are you imagining large armies in the field? Armies of militia marching in tight formation to a battle front?

Honey, you have no clue. Sit down and shut up before you really embarass yourself.

<serious>
I honestly feel hurt in my heart for people that had to fight in wars that were fought for corporate power and served no direct purpose in defending our nation. The Iraq war only put more money in the pockets of the rich while Afghan war on the other hand, where the terrorist really were to begin with is directly protecting our country. To make a comment like you made of disrespecting the current administration shows you do not take your oath seriously and have mis-placed your loyalty to the one rich president instead of the elected government of the people you are to defend. There was a reason the people voted out the last administration!

If your oath is only as good as the one administration that YOU like, you are defaulting on your oath. On the other hand, if you like your oath but not the president, you have your vote....Just like the rest of use... nothing else.
</serious>

Now that we got that over... THINK FOR YOURSELF and don't follow faux news! It's run by an Australian who has more interest in the asian stock market and is profiting off the united states losses!

The ObaMao - Lehman Bros. Connections

http://therealbarackobama.wordpress.com

Democratic Presidential candidate Barack Obama was quick to blame the bankruptcy of Wall Street giant Lehman Brothers on Republicans' "failed philosophy". Obama's September 15 comments were repeated throughout the media--yet reporters have not noted Obama's glaring conflict of interest--the Lehman debt owed to a bank owned by the financier who loaned millions of dollars to Tony Rezko.

Jockeying among the other debtors seeking repayment under Chapter 11 bankruptcy rules is BNP Paribas, a large French bank whose largest single private shareholder is Nadhmi Auchi's General Mediterranean Holdings (GMH). BNP Paribas is owed $250 million by Lehman.

http://money.cnn.com/news/newsfeeds/articles/djf500/200809150751DOWJONESDJONLINE000296_FORTUNE5.htm

http://query.nytimes.com/gst/fullpage.html?res=9805EEDE1E3DF933A05757C0A9659C8B63&sec=&spon=&pagewanted=all

Auchi was also a key financial backer for Chicago political fixer and dual US-Syrian citizen Tony Rezko. This writer explained the complex web of relationships in an August 24 article titled, "Iraqi Billionaire Threatens Reporters Investigating Rezko Affair":

http://www.aim.org/aim-column/iraqi-billionaire-threatens-reporters-investigating-rezko-affair

A secret $3.5 million loan from an Auchi company to key early-money Barack Obama fundraiser Antoin Rezko was exposed while Rezko was awaiting trial on fraud and money-laundering charges earlier this year. Rezko's bail was revoked and police showed up banging on the doors of his Wilmette Chicago mansion to drag him off to jail early in the morning of January 28th. Auchi's loan to Rezko had come on May 23, 2005 but had not been disclosed to the Court as required in his bail agreement. Three weeks later, on June 15, 2005, Rezko's wife assisted the Obamas in the purchase of their South Chicago mansion by purchasing a next-door undeveloped lot being sold with the house.

http://www.chicagotribune.com/news/chi-tony-rezko-arrestedjan29,0,2985016.story

According to the Times of London, http://www.timesonline.co.uk/tol/news/world/us_and_americas/us_elections/article3433485.ece?token=null&offset=24&page=3
"Mr. Rezko's lawyer said his client had 'longstanding indebtedness' to Mr. Auchi's General Mediterranean Holding (GMH). By June 2007 he owed it $27.9 million. Under a Loan Forgiveness Agreement described in court, M. Auchi lent Mr. Rezko $3.5 million in April 2005 and $11 million in September 2005, as well as $3.5 million transferred in April 2007. That agreement provided for the outstanding loans to be 'forgiven' in return for a stake in the 62-acre Riverside Park development."

Rezko's relationship with Barack Obama goes back to at least 1990, when Obama's law firm did work relating to thousands of now-decaying Rezko apartment units in South Chicago. Rezko was a key early-money fundraiser in Obama's state Senate campaigns and his failed run at the U.S. Congress.

http://www.boston.com/news/nation/articles/2008/06/27/grim_proving_ground_for_obamas_housing_policy/?page=full

According to The Times of London,
http://www.timesonline.co.uk/tol/news/world/us_and_americas/us_elections/article3433485.ece
"Mr. Auchi first met Mr. Rezko after the 2003 Iraq war and they have a business relationship." At the time Auchi was facing the possibility of extradition to France. The Times of London explains: "Mr Auchi was convicted of corruption, given a suspended sentence and fined £1.4 million in France in 2003 for his part in the Elf affair, described as the biggest political and corporate scandal in post-war Europe. He, in a statement from his media lawyers, claims he is appealing against the sentence."

In 2003, Nick Cohen of the UK Guardian wrote:
http://www.guardian.co.uk/world/2003/nov/16/iraq.politicalcolumnists

Allow me to introduce you to Nadhmi Auchi. He was charged in the 1950s with being an accomplice of Saddam Hussein, when the future tyrant was acquiring his taste for blood. He was investigated in the 1980s for his part in alleged bribes to the fabulously corrupt leaders of post-war Italy. In the 1990s, the Belgium Ambassador to Luxembourg claimed that Auchi's bank held money Saddam and Colonel Gadaffi had stolen from their luckless peoples. In 2002, officers from the Serious Fraud Squad raided the offices of one of Auchi's drug companies as part of an investigation of what is alleged to be the biggest swindle ever of the (British National Health Service). With allegations, albeit unproven, like these hanging over him, wouldn't you think that British MPs would have the sense to stay away?

One might think Obama would also stay away, but in truth it is only the US media who are ducking this story. While ideological bias and a predisposition towards inanity might explain some of the media ignorance, the August 24 article cites another cause:

Working for Auchi... attorneys from London law firm Carter-Ruck have for several months been flooding American and British newspapers and websites with letters demanding removal of material they deem "defamatory" to their client.

In its June 28 edition, http://righttruth.typepad.com/right_truth/2008/06/obama-and-the-mysterious-mr-auchi.html
British satirical magazine Private Eye explains: "Until Carter-Ruck and Partners and England's stifling libel laws got to work, the few American journalists not caught up in Obama-mania were turning to the archives of the British press to answer an intriguing question: who is Nadhmi Auchi?"

http://www.gmhsa.com/directors.html

What is so "stifling" about English libel law? In the U.K., as Carter-Ruck explains on its own website, "A libel claimant does not have to prove that the words are false or to prove that he has in fact suffered any loss. Damage is presumed."

http://www.carter-ruck.com/FAQs/Libel%20and%20Slander%20Cases.html

The Obama campaign recently issued a non-denial denial in response to claims that Obama met with Auchi--contained in Jerome Corsi's bestseller, The Obama Nation. They cited only two references. One is, "Mr. Auchi's lawyer" who told the February 27, 2008 London Evening Standard, "As far as he can remember he has had no direct contact with Mr. Obama." Another is, "A lawyer for Auchi, Alasdair Pepper" who says, according to the April 16, 2008 Washington Post, "Auchi Had 'No Recollection' Of Meeting Obama or Michelle." Alasdair Pepper is the attorney whose name appears on the Carter-Ruck demand letters.

Here are some questions reporters should be asking Barack Obama:

Senator Obama: Lehman Brothers owes over $250 million to a bank owned in part by Nadhmi Auchi's holding company. Auchi was a key financial backer of Tony Rezko. Sources indicate you met Auchi twice when he visited Chicago in 2004. If elected, how will your relationship with Rezko and Auchi affect your policy towards Lehman Brothers?

Senator Obama: There are reports that Nadhmi Auchi was in 2004-2005 seeking US residency while appealing his French court conviction in the ELF-Aquitaine case. If elected, would you look favorably on a US residency application from Auchi?

Senator Obama: You stated that the Lehman bankruptcy shows that Americans cannot afford four more years of the Republicans' "failed philosophy". Can Americans afford a President whose home was purchased with the assistance of now-convicted-felon Tony Rezko, a man characterized as having "permanent indebtedness" to Nadhmi Auchi?

Odd that your feelings about Afghanistan were 180' off prior to the Interesting how that happens, isnt it?

Pity that your skillset doesnt include rational thinking. But then...as it would appear you are at the least..a Leftwinger and as such..as a given, are mentally ill.

I never see any real old furrin name brands of vehicles runnin around here.My big old full size 1978 Dodge van I bought in 1989 already had about 184,000 miles on it.The speedometer cable wasen't hooked up to the rear of the speedometer.The guy I bought the van from said it has at least twice that many miles on it.He was in the Air Force and he and his family did a Lot of traveling in that van, all over America.He said he disconnected the cable in it because it had a kink in it.I bought a good cable at a junk yard.I have put about 75,000 miles on the van myself. My 1983 big old full size Dodge van has an original 146,000 miles on it.I am the second owner of the van.I rebuilt the carburetor last January because it needed rebuilding.

Bowery Boys. Now there's a collection I'd like to have.
Bela Lugosi once said they were the funniest bunch of boys he's ever watched and was very honored to have met them. He really admired their work.
Mugs, Sach(Slip), Whitey, Tommy etc ..... always a good memory.
PS ... The last time I saw Huntz Hall (aka Sach/Slip) in anything was a Flipper episode where he was fishing from a row boat in a polluted inlet.

Personally, I'd be more honoured to meet some gals, rather than some boys.

But then, some of you clown 'tards would indeed be happier to meet some boys.

That excuse does not stand.. Saddam only killed around 5->10k AT THE MOST while many more die in C. Africa and our efforts there would have saved many more lives. The only difference between C.Africa and Iraq is oil. Beside, how can we justify spending the trillions we did in Iraq to 5. Im a veteran

6. Im an ex police officer
7. I dont drink booze nor do I do drugs
8. Im a life member of the NRA
9. Im a firearms instructor
10. Ive got a better machine and welding shop at home, than do most commerical enterprizes.
11. Im not a Leftwing Extremist
12. Ive got an IQ of 155

Now there are 12 quick reasons why you and I are vastly different.
In fact..there are 12 reasons why Im superior to you.
13, if one considers that Im not mentally ill.

But hey...do as you wish. In less than 2 yrs, People will hunt you down and kill you. I hope they hang you using barbed wire..but simply "necklacing" you would be good as well.

I hope they send me a video.

A million people? Where the fuck did you come up with that bogus number?

Even the radically Leftist

http://www.iraqbodycount.org/\

Only claims between 95k-105k ...1/10th your claim...and if you read the notations..you will find that most of those deaths were Iraqis killing Iraqis..generally terrorists killing massed groups of people.

But hey...your blatant stupidty continues to be displayed in full.

Hi, Arthur - I have an Icom R75, fed by (1) 16-meter inverted L at 20 feet, and (2) DX-Ultra multiband dipole through a MFJ-1026 noise canceller.

BTW, also have another Argentine Ham on 7069 usb, LP1H at about 0420 to 0428. Excellent signal and copy. Must be a lovely late summer evening down there for contest expedition!

Israel Radio is the same as The Voice of Israel. In Ivrit it is pronounced Kol Israel. Due to numerous budget cutbacks their N.American service is no longer alive. In fact, all of their external broadcasts except the one beamed to Iran,have been shut down as of April 1,2008. Officially the only HF broadcast on the air is in Farsi and it must be dedicated to the President of Iran, who may be listening to what his neighbors are thinking of his superbright policies! Internet is really replacing many different long established technologies...

And the system has grown so fragile it wouldn't take much to disrupt those monthly checks. Then you'll see real panic.

Don't confuse your views for those of others. Yes there are many sloths, but there are some who would relish a chance to fight, no matter how long it took. There are so many who deserve to be fought against.

And face it lots of people soil themselves and want to surrender when bad things happen overseas. When it's happening in thier neighborhood and the govt seems helpless to stop it...

Gunner, I can only assume from your attitude that you consider yourself "informed" because you listen to Limpballs each day to find out what the latest right-wing rhetoric is to repeat mindlessly.

I bet you'd even vote for "Clueless" Palin if she ran for President. And, by the way, she was only part of McCain's reason for losing. The other was that he was going to be another BushWhacker and "We the people" didn't want another four years of THAT moron.

Responding to your signature comment: Whenever a Conservative utters the term "Common Sense approach".... grab whatever you own and head to a communist country because you'll have more civil rights there after he's done the "nasty" to your constitutional rights.

I, for one, would like to see Bush and Cheney both arrested and waterboarded until they admit to all the illegal actions they both perpetrated during the worst eight year administration this country has ever been subjected to. They sure can't complain about the torture since they defend it so vehemently.

My favorite bumper sticker stated "I'm too well-informed to vote Republican".

Just wondering,do you switch between the two antennas and is there any grounding invoved.

Well - both antennas enter the house via coaxial cable and meet at the MFJ-1026 - a phaser - that allows the signals to be combined to either fortify a signal or null a noise/groundwave station. The DX-Ultra, being a balanced antenna, is not grounded at any point until the coax arrives at the 1026, where a ground line runs to a ground rod outside the house. The coax, however, arrives from a 9:1 matching transformer outside the house at the ground rod, so that one is grounded.

In the 1026, I can shut off one or the other antenna if I wish.

I have been seriously thinking of reconfiguring some of this. I'd like to add another wire - the 1026 likes two equally matched antennas - and maybe a large closed loop around the yard for lower noise on 60 meters. I hate to lose the DX-Ultra - it's good on 41 and 49 meters and da bomb on 25 meters and higher freqs, quiet and strong, much better than my wire - but on a tiny lot I am afraid it may interfere with any other antenna I may put up.

I'm able to buy a Grove SP-200 from some individual in the States, since I live in the UK I never worked/heard such a device. Is this what can really help to improve weak stations to hear or is/was it more a hype?

I Like to hear your experience with this device (ore other maybe better?). Thanks.

It's actually easier than that page makes it sound.

You need a plain M/F 9 pin serial from your computer to your R75. The settings for that particular radio are already built into the software.
A serial cable is not absolutely necessary, but your reports are more complete if you have one. Then you'll also need mono in and out of a soundcard. I use an uber cheap Asus netbook (no hard drive, no windows) cas a dedicated spotter box, but you can use your main computer (the tones are very musical).

I am curious about the longevity of the tube radios on the market.

The higher end boat anchors (HRO50/60, R390A, Collins, Drake, et al) compare quite favorably especially on noise floor. Jay Rusgrove, has compiled (and done his own tests) on quite a few BA receivers (Minimum Discernible Signal, Dynamic Range). You can see the test results here:
http://www.w1vd.com/BAreceivertest.html and here: http://www.w1vd.com/BAdynamicrange.pdf

For comparison here are lists of more modern receiver test results:

Two separate issues.

All of the old radios are starting to show their age. Capacaitors are failing. tubes are failing (some of the cheaper ones were not as "airtight" as people thought), and so on. Once they are properly maintained, with replacement capacitors, new tubes if needed, etc, they can perform as well as they did the way they were made.

However the chance of finding an old (1930-1940's) rig that has sat on the shelf for 30 years, turning it on, and not seeking smoke and actually hearing anything except hum is pretty small.

There are proper ways to bring them back to life, and often they work with few parts needing to be replaced.

As for performance, it depends upon the radio. On the lower frequencies (below 15mHz) they should do quite well, some of the 1930's vintage rigs tuned up to 30 or 40mHz, but were quite "deaf" there.

Since they do not have sythesizers, they are generally quiet, with low internal noise. What they lack is filtering, although some were made with Collins mechaincal filters (or similar ones) which are as good as or better than their modern equivalent.

You also should, IMHO look at some of the lesser rigs too. People sat around for hours listening to them, the way they spend time watching their plasma TVs these days before hitting pause and switching to their email. :-)

They won't hold up well on a crowded band, but if you can find a clear signal with little close by stations, they can be a pleasant listen.

Hello,

Senior citizen that enjos HF and vhf/uhf listening, but frankly not very technical.

A few years back, I had to order some bnc, etc. connectors.
Ordered from supposedly popular source who said they had it all in stock, and had to wait weeks and weeks to get it as they obviously didn't. Would sure like to avoid that kind of experience again.

Do listening only.

So, please let me ask you folks:

for sma and bnc connectors, as well as preassembled (bnc or sma on the ends)short (3 ft or so) coax assemblies, who do you recommend as being reasonably priced (I'll use reasonably rather than cheap) and usually having in stock ?

For short lengths of coax, and listening only up thru the scanner freq's, what coax should I go for that would be inexpensive ?
RG 8x, RG 59, or...?) What to stay away from ?

Again, I need something "usable" up to about 1.5 GHZ or so, listening only.

Thanks,
Bob

One of the best of the "lesser rigs" is the Hammarlund HQ120/129/140 series. Very well built, easy to work on/recap, excellent performance.
You can find nice ones for $150 or so. Also the older Super Pros including the mil. versions (SP200/400, BC779, etc.).

The cheaper Hallicrafters, generally speaking, suffered from cheap components & build quality.

Depends on the radio. There is no hard and fast rule about hollow state vs solid state. Each operator may have his or her preferences and prejudices, but it comes down to what you like and how well the circuitry was designed.

R-390/R392 still stands in legend as the lowest noise floor of hollow state.

While the higher end Ten-Tecs and W-J stand toe to toe with it in solid state.

Tube receivers are prized for their audio. Warm, smooth, and pleasing to the ear. And this can be true.

Then again, solid state audio can be more precise, almost clinical, and equally pleasing to the ear. It depends on the circuitry, and what attention to detail is paid.

And it depends on application. A noisier receiver with a good antenna can easily outperform a better receiver with a mediocre antenna.

Now, there have been some very good development in receivers since the end of the tube era. No longer do we have to toy with phasing on a crystal filter for reasonable selectivity. We can now select from a range of filters, shift the passband, and engage synchronous detection to clean up a buried signal.

Similarly, performance over a wider range of frequencies with excellent consistency is possible with modern receivers than with vintage boatanchors. In many cases. But certainly not all.

Modern receivers can be far more power efficient, present a smaller desktop footprint.

But the truth is, that if you select your receiver wisely, and you apply an antenna that will bring the most out of your receiver, you can use, effectively, any receiver you enjoy, and achieve the results you're looking for. Older rigs will take more fiddling, and there will be thermal drift to deal with. Newer rigs will come up quickly, stay put sooner, and will require less fiddling to do the same job.

> I am curious about the longevity of the tube radios on the market.
> Thank you,
> Mike McManus

That's going to depend on the availablity of tubes, mostly. Some are getting difficult to come by. Some may still be substituted with more available, or better, tubes. But nearly all tubes are out of print for RF work. You're going to have to scrounge for NOS. And sometimes pay obscene prices from scalpers. (Many of whom frequent these groups.) And some specific components like tuning capacitors and IF cans are getting difficult to find, as well.

That's not to say that tube rigs are any worse than solid state in this regard. The most recent generation of AOR rigs is now based on out of print chips for which there are no substitutes. And displays for Drake receivers have been drying up for a number of models. Similarly, many rigs are finding themselves to be of limited serviceability due to discountinued parts of all types.

Find an SP-325. Ten-Tec doesn't even acknowledge that they built it. While Fair Radio sells parts and whole subchassis for R-390 and R-392.

That said, it is generally easier to modify a point to point wired tube rig for a different tube, or other component, than it is to modify a PCB based solidstate rig for a newer IC. But, too, that's not always the case.

So, again, it depends on the radio. And it depends on your commitment to the receiver of your choice. You'll can always build a receiving station to fit your needs and the rig of your choice. And at the same time, you can always find SOMETHING to keep your favorite rig working, if you ensure you have the technical understanding, and the tenacity to keep it working.

Once you understand the limitations and the advantages of each, the whole tube vs solid state thing becomes largely a non issue.

My Drakes and Ten-Tecs sit next to my Hallicrafters and Hammarlunds. Everyone of them gets a regular workout.

Audio wise, many of the old radios are much better, but in most other ways, especially stability, the radios from the last 30 years are totally superior. Some of them have almost zero drift, like a few hertz over hours.

I had an Hammarlund HQ-180 and it was a great radio. I had it for about a year, and sold it at a nice profit. It was totally reliable for the time I had it, and since then, the new owner reports in 10 years, it's needed a couple tubes, that's it. Cost? about 10 bucks.

I've had an cheapie Hammarlund HQ-100 for about 6 years, with all kinds of mods. It's really good on AM, and SSB is very good, since it has an added product detector, but you can't just walk away and let it sit, as it drifts around to the point it's annoying to listen to for long periods without constant tweaking of the tuning knob. All I've had to do to it since I bought it was to change two tubes that were getting weak,

I got it for $58 on Ebay, and I consider it one of the best bargains I've ever had, only beaten by the vacuum desoldering station I got a couple years ago for $24 shipped.

I've had a couple others, but they needed things from caps to tubes, to a transformer (Worked for almost a month before it cooked itself), and one needed almost everything in it replaced. A friend bought it for the chassis, it was in great shape, and he transplanted the guts from his radio into it, and then slowly fixed the guts from the original radio.

Feel free to have other complaints about Obama if you wish, but why

Presidents who use/have used the Teleprompter:

Nixon

Ronnie Reagan

Bush I

Bush II

Mike,
You ask a couple of interesting questions, but you need to focus a bit more.

To take Hallicrafters as an example, they made a wide range of receivers, ranging from the entry level S-38 (really mediocre as you would expect), to their final, top-of -the line SX-115, still able to hold its own with modern receivers. (I am ignoring all their pre-WWII radios).

This would hold true for most manufacturers except for Collins -- where everything they made was "top of the line". ;-)

>> I am curious about the longevity of the tube radios on the market.

Again, you should clarify a bit. Not sure what you actually mean by "longevity".

The components in the tube radios are anywhere from 30 to 70 or more years old. Once components that age have been replaced, the old set's service life should generally compare favorably with the solid state radios.

Whatever - when I have mucho local hams right on 3953.5 kHz and all around it doing nonstop contest calls, I am not going to hear somebody in Virginia ragchewing about politics.

My brother in law has a big old boat anchor radio.I don't know what brand name it is.I saw it a few years ago, sitting on his work bench in his two story work shop/storage building in his back yard.I don't snoop around about his things.He is a retired Air Force Colonel, I assume he bought that radio somewhere when he was in the Air Force.Of course, he had that radio tuned to the local MISS 103 FM Music station.That is the Only radio station they listen to over there.

Local tv channel WRBJ, (WRBJ.CW television services from WRBJ-TV, 34, Jackson, MS, it says so) I once watched a couple of old Gomer Pyle U.S.M.C. movies on that channel a few years ago.Maybe it was on WUFX?) at 4:00 PM this afternoon, Blame it on Rio movie.That is a good movie.I can watch it on DirecTV, if I wants to.WUFX and WDBD are running that Unavailable message on screen again right now.Suppose to be NASCAR Racing on WDBD right now, so the tv channel listing says.

Huh???

I don't believe that even the most rabid Obama supporter ever said that.
And even if they did, that STILL doesn't explain why it's OK for ALL presidents of ALL parties to get a free pass to use a Teleprompter and Obama doesn't.

Don't let the aging capacitors and tube fears deter you from considering one of the better pieces made by National, Hammarlund, Hallicrafters or Collins. Aligned and maintained they will outpace anything new that has come along in the last 30 years. The dynamic range is superb and makes the comparison with new stuff like comparing the audio of the old well-built Western Electric telephones with the raucous crappy audio that is found on cell phones.

Stability? Most of the better receivers from that era pose no NOTICEABLE drift. Nit-picking absurd specifications like saying a new rig is better than an older one because it only has 10 Hz drift is nonsense. Even on CW or SSB I doubt most listeners can even detect 100 cycles of instability.

Replacing capacitors is not rocket science. You remove one that says "10 uF" and you replace it with a new one that says "10 uF." Duh.

Tubes are still plentiful and with careful shopping (not the price gougers on scum-Bay) you can buy NOS or used-but-verified good inexpensively. I have restored lots of these receivers and even the worse cases never needed more than 1 or two tubes.

Of course, the contradictory thing is that the low end S-38 is so simple that it's easy to put in new capacitors, while the better old equipment has so many stages and so much shielding that it can be a lot of trouble.

Thus a cheap tube receiver is likely far easier to repair than a current tiny solid state receiver, but the latter have better performance generally. The old tube receivers that match the performance (or better the performance) of current "average" solid state receivers will be as difficult to repair, if not more so.

Consider also, that components replaced using contemporary materials and contemporary manufacturing techniques may deliver an improvement in performance over new specification.

I was thinking about getting a new C Crane SW so I can receive distant digital radio monodiale radio stations, but I was reading somewhere else that the portable radio receiver only has a 455 kHz output IF AM jack. That got me disappointed, cause I have to get a down-converter box or circuit to add to the radio receiver. C Crane should of added 2 different jacks on the rear panel a 455 kHz output IF jack and a 12 kHz AM IF output jack for just DRM reception from the computer. I just wanted to let everyone know about this. I hope someone can hear me on this and understand. That it's going to be challenging to get the new DRM stations on this receiver without that converter box. I want to share something with others who own the C Crane SW which I will be getting soon is called the ESP converter box I hope this helps new and old rec.radio.shortwave listeners with the difficulty of getting DRM digital radio reception with the C Crane SW or other receivers out there.

But unlike Obambi, they were, and those still living still are, able to speak without one Obambi always manages to get his foot in his mouth whenever he's without one
One really has to wonder how he was able to lecture,

It's a question of being UNable to function without one.

Back in the 1950s, a Cocker Spaniel I used to own.Actually, he was a family dog, we all owned him.His name was Tom Dooley.He never was one to pick any fights with other dogs, but only once that I know of, a dog picked on him.He came walking back to the house, from down the street around the corner.I heard them getting at it! He got back home and drank some water and he laid down on the front porch.I says to him,,, Well, Dooley, (I mostly always called him Dooley) did you win or lose?

Why don't you do what you want everyone else to do? Can you back up your definition of Obama as a "moron" with actual facts or just more simple minded parroting of Republican't lies? Do you have documents proving your ASS umption???

As to your accusation of "illegal actions that got Democrat vote majorities", what about the illegal actions that got the Bush/Cheney regime into power so they could start revoking the constitutional rights of "We the people"? Things like the right-leaning SCOTUS stopping the recount in the first election but NOT stopping the clock on amount of time allowed to actually finish it before, finally, allowing it? Their first "election" was actually, effectively, an appointment by conservatives. The second was based on results from machines contributed by a Repulican't sympathizer who "would do anything it takes to get them re-elected" which machines had absolutely no paper trail to prove the votes it received were accurate and thereby denied any possibility of a recount even if it was statutorily mandatory. These accusations are well documented. What do you have that proves any "illegality" on the part of the Democrats? Or is it that you just can't accept the fact that "We the people" were just plain pissed off and fed up with your regime trampling the Constitution and shredding the Bill of Rights? PATRIOT Act? Just another name for Nazi control.

Maybe you should wipe your OWN ass before telling someone else that THEIR shit stinks.

Humm...they all seem to be locked up with no access.

I wonder why? Perhaps its because he is proud of his strong grades?
Ah...then why are they hidden?

Well hummm...if they are hidden...it must mean he doesnt want anyone to look at them. So he must not be proud of them..and in fact...must consider their release to be harmful to him. Now if they were Good...they couldnt harm him, but if they showed he had the intelligence

Obamaï¿½s Top 25 Records Hidden From The Public

Top 25 records Barack Hussein Obama is hiding from the public.

1 Certified copy of original birth certificate
2 Columbia University transcripts
3 Columbia thesis paper
4 Campaign donor analysis requested by 7 major watchdog groups
5 Harvard University transcripts
6 Illinois State Senate records
7 Illinois State Senate schedule
8 Law practice client list and billing records/summary

9 Locations and names of all half-siblings and step-mother
10 Medical records (only the one page summary released so far)
11 Occidental College Transcripts
12 Parenti¿½s marriage Certificate
13 Record of baptism
14 Selective Service registration records
15 Schedules for trips outside of the United States before 2007
16 Passport records for all passports
17 Scholarly articles
18 SAT and LSAT test scores
19 Access to his grandmother in Kenya
20 List of all campaign workers that are lobbyists
21 Punahou grade school records
22 Noelani Kindergarten records are oddly missing from the the State of Hawaii Department of Education.
23 Page 11 of Stanley Ann Dunhami¿½s divorce decree.
24 Why did Barack Obama resign from the Illinois bar and where are all of the relevant documents?
25 Why did Michelle Obama resign from the Illinois bar after only about four years of practice and where are all of the relevant documents?

You gotta admit this is a lot of hidden information concerning the life of a sitting President. Iti¿½s only natural to wonder why Obama and his handlers consider it vital to hide so much personal information from the public.

You might even get the idea that a little skulduggery is afoot.

And where did you hear his records "all seem to be locked up with no access"? Limpballs, again? A "man" who ridicules the poor and the handicapped? A "man" who claims, along with Clueless Palin, that the health bill contains "death panels"? Show me! Show me where these claims of yours can be verified.

Besides, Limpballs and his cohorts, especially at FAUX news, have no idea what "factual evidence" is. And it has been mostly them that have been calling people racists, bigots and homophobes more than anyone else I've heard in ANY media.

Where can I find them? If THEY are not available, your argument is null

Okay. thanks for your replay.
I never seen such a device for sale here in the UK. You remember wich manufacturer it was?

I hope more people replay with there experience!

Does it realy make any difference?

Thanks,

100 Hz is a noticeable change in pitch. A 50 Hz step makes listening to music on SSB very difficult. I do my major DXing through a 250 Hz filter, so if you drift you go bye-bye.

Not a clue. I don't remember that particular incident. But it's certainly possible that the journalist in question was a either a fool...or experiencing what the Londoners in Victorian England called a "four penny knee-trembler". ;-)

> And then we had those kids who were marching while chanting the praise

Uh, you seem to be distorting the facts a bit, Sparky. Just because people demonstrate for their candidate is a looong way from saying Obama is "smarter and gooder than all of them combined" as did the original poster.

Well then, you are also implying that because Reagan, Bush I, Bush II, et al used a Teleprompter, that they couldn't function without one either. Sorry, Sparky...either your logic fails or you just shot yourself in the foot.

Whatever else you can say about Obama, good or bad, he IS very intelligent (demonstrably more so than his predecessor), and thus you saying "he is unable to function without one" is pure BS and sour grapes (and dare I say, a hint of racism?).

SaPeIsMa wrote:

"Legitimate" is intuitively obvious (and rhetorical)...

1) This is America. If every prez of both parties for the last 30 years used a prompter, there is no reason Obama can't use one nor is there any reason to hold its use against him.

2) BS statements like "Cuz he's supposed to be smarter and gooder than all of them combined" and "It's a question of being UNable to function without one" are just that... more BS and sour grapes, but certainly not legitimate.

Nice try Sparky, but no cigar.

Gee, if that's the case, why can we not see YOUR school records? Your records are convientiently "locked away" due to privacy issues. Guess you must be a moron, so that we have no reason to listen to you. Kinda like those records of George Bush about being charged with being AWOL. You know, those years he was supposed to be serving in the Guard (during Vietnam) but was actually out partying and getting doped up.

Were you with him at the time?

You believe because you've dropped the big bucks and WANT to believe.
But most of it is hype and the EIA has done a superb job of convincing consumers how badly they need the new whistles and bells. There is very little difference between the propaganda used today by the drug companies to sell their nonsense snake oil ("restless legs syndrome," etc) and that which the has come from manufacturers of modern day radios.

Save your money, pick up a cheap older rig and you'll enjoy it as much as (if not more than) the rigs filled with rarely used features and performance specifications that are patently unnecessary.

And while I am at it, my quote was that "MOST" can discern the difference in 100 cycles. I didn't say ALL. This group seems include many Doberman pinschers with keen hearing.

Funny you should mention this - I just listened to Radio New Zealand International the other night (our Thursday night, their Friday) and they had on a small panel of people - apparently NZ economic experts - discussing New Zealand's fragile economy and how it would be difficult to regain its footing in the manufacturing sector. It did not sound to me like they had pulled out of anything yet...

I am a meteorologist by education. What they actually need is a climatologist, not a meterologist. A climatologist would have the guy stammering to find a word to say.

Our NWS meterologists here in California get it right about 90% of the time, I'd guess. Based on their record I go to them, and trust them, more than I trust any private weather service I watch (which includes local TV, Weather Channel and Weather Underground). Their website gives me everything I need to check the stats, the forecast, and to assess on my own whether I think they're on the money.

Clive, I have an Icom R75, and although some will diss this radio, I can tell I enjoy the "bells and whistles" a great deal. The stability and crispness of the signal (both driftwise and in terms of AGC and S-AM) that can be achieved with this radio is quite nice. The S-AM on this set is only so-so, from what I understand - I would love to hear what the really good S-AM (on a more recent Drake, for example) sounds like.

Hi - actually, what I had remembered was this company:

http://www.bhi-ltd.com/

But BHI seem to have DSP noise-cancelling speakers, which is not quite the same as the Grove (which is more of a traditional audio-sculpting unit if I am reading it right). FWIW, Grove has always been (and continues to be) a "stand-up" kind of company, and although I would check for more reviews, I doubt if Bob Grove would have put his name on a lemon.

Best of luck!

2665. Radio Australia, missing transmissions

Both last night (March 8, 8:00 UTC and later) and the night before Radio Australia seems to be two transmitters short.

Missing were the transmissions on 9590 kHz (8:00 UTC to 16:00?)
and 9580 kHz (8:00 to 14:00), 7240 kHz (14:00-17:00?).

Also not heard was the earlier transmission on 9660 kHz and perhaps the Tok Pisin program on 9710 kHz. (Insomnia radio, accuracy not guaranteed).

Transmissions still present were 13630 until 9:00, but after that the only English language programming was on 9475, aimed as Asia, but weak and noisy here in Western North America (Seattle). And Tok Pisin on 6020 and 5995.

6020 shifts from Tok Pisin to English at 11:00 or 12:00 UTC, but often has strong interference from (last I checked) Radio Veritas in the Philippines broadcasting in Chinese at 12:30-14:00 (have not yet checked if this is still happening).

And when 6020 (English) shifts to 5995 at 14:00 it's getting stepped on by one of the American christian stations for the first hour. (The guy that sounds like Mr. Rodgers on Quaaludes. I've never bothered to figure out if that is "Pastor Pete", or "Harold").

6080 kHz is there around 14:00, but weak.

I've got sync on my Drakes, Lowe Ten-Tec and AOR. The difference is in the distortion during fades. There's less of it. The fades are still there, but the audio doesn't shatter.

If you know what you're listening for, it's a big difference. If not, it's not that big a deal.

I use my rigs without sync more than with.

I guess I noticed the same thing, but I was too sleepy and ready to crash to pay much heed - I just chalked it up to poor band conditions (which were not quite that bad, since RNZI on 31m was decent if not stellar). I hung it up shortly after 0800, so I cannot vouch for anything in the wee hours.

You didn't happen to give Mongolia a try last night, did you, by Thanks, Peter - well, that's about what I thought - the Kiwa-modified S-AM on the R75 definitely helps soften the blow of the fades (the distortion disappears for all practical purposes), and the AGC when the RF Gain is turned back a wee bit fills in and remedies all but the deepest fades. I just figured the Drake/AOR/etc. did it better. Not having ever heard one in person (NOBODY sells or demos them around this metropolis), I just don't know for sure. In fact, you can't find any shortwave receiver sales at all anymore except the usual lowball Etons at RS. HRO has nothing but tranceivers anymore.

When I used my R75 for program listening I used the SSB mode. The SAM is useless without the Kiwa mods, which I don't have.

It's no better, here. I have to go to a hamfest and look at mfr's rep booths to see, or to play with anything new. I bought my more recent receivers unheard, based on recommendations of users, and reviewers at RNW.

Although the R8A I bought at a model train show. It was in like new condition. Not a mark on it. It still smelled like fresh circuit boards when I opened the box.

That was a good day.

Hey, Dave, thanks for bringing up the Elecraft K3 (I'm sure my wife will thank you as well ;-) I just read the Receiver Topics section of the page, and I can hardly believe my eyes. It looks like a RX dream come true, even the XMTR notwithstanding.

I just have two questions - As I understand it, once in awhile it is desirable to download improved software and programming from Elecraft. Does this radio need to be always connected to a PC otherwise, or is it perfectly fucntional as a stand-alone unit?

And, as configured in basic format, will it receive and properly filter AM, or is that an add-on?

Thanks,
Bruce

The sync on R75 was not well implemented. It worked. And it worked according to factory specs. But it was what the techs at Lowe call 'fiddly' dialing it in was a job. And often more trouble than it was worth. I played with R75 at the ICOM booth at the local hamfest. Sync worked as described. But it took a lot of attention to keep it in place.

The complaints did not go unheard. The rep I spoke to several months after the release of R75 told me that ICOM had heard the complaints, were very uhappy, and had made reimplementing the sync a priority. Trouble was, that the firmware for the rig wasn't readily upgradeable, and hardware modifications were going to be time consuming and expensive. R&D costs would have been a significant issue. And considering what ICOM went through with PBT on R71, they were not eager to step on technology that may produce another expensive and damaging legal skirmish.

This at a time when SW was in sharp decline among broadcasters, and most users applying sync for broadcast listening, ICOM put the reimplementation of the sync on a back burner.

I spoke to the same ICOM factory rep a couple of years later, and when asked about the sync on R75, shook his head and changed the subject pretty quickly. With KIWA doing the job, there was no motivation for ICOM to reengineer the sync, themselves, and with broadcasters abandoning SW, there was no reason to continue development of receive-only general coverage SW radios.

Can you point to any source anywhere wherein are contained BHO's academic records?

Supposedly noone who was at Columbia at the same time that he was supposed to have been remembers him. There are no available records of his attendance, classes, teachers, grades, demeanor or how his tuition was paid. Unless you know of a source, of course, because I have looked.

The MSM has displayed a remarkable lack of curiosity regarding this.

BTW setting your posts to only accept wmail replies doesn't work. It's a public forum. Get over yourself.

'Cuz he's not President, dumbass. You see, when you run for President you are applying for the job. One of the things I want to see froma job applicant is his college transcripts. Working at McDonalds you may never had someone ask you for yours so you're unfamiliar with the concept.

Now large numbers of people who didn't want to appear racist didn't bother to ask any embarassing questions of BHO when he was running. Me, I do like to be fully informed. As of this moment in time, that has not happened. Now honestly if he'd gotten As in Marxist studies and Fs in capitalism that should make a difference to people. it now appears that is in fact the case. Would have been nice to know that BEFORE the election, though.

But if you have a cite as to BHOs college transcripts I would surely like to see them, he is going to be applying for the job again in a few years and based on current performance I don't think it looks good. But who knows, maybe there is something in his past to redeem him. I guess we'll never know, though.

I'm searching for the right words. Perhaps D. Peter might help.

At any rate, one can spend just so much, and after one reaches a certain point, it ain't gonna help.

It has to do I think with the 'law' of diminishing returns, or something like that.

Bingo. Actually, the Kiwa mods solve quite a few problems (The S-AM is only only one of them; the AGC time constant and the constricted audio are two others). The mods considerably improve the sound and performance on both AM and SSB. Now, I can enjoy Radio New Zealand on Friday nights with good audio and no fading distortion :-)

Well, that's easy to enough to understand...that is EXACTLY how I felt (and still feel) about my Kiwa-modded Icom R75. For 50% more at the time, I could have gotten 5% more performance. But based on what I've seen for prices, the law of diminishing returns does not apply here in a straightforward manner. Good older radios like Drakes and the better JRCs don't seem to lose any value at all, and in many cases cost more than when they were new as collectibles.

OK - So I buy a used Drake R7 or R8B for $1,400, or a new K3 for $1,400.

Or an NRD-515 and a Sherwood SE-3 for $1,800 or any other decent but old radio for the same price range.

Unless I can find a place to dependably buy something of this calibre for much less than $1,500, why should I not get the newer one with better specs and modern features and upgradeable software/firmware? The Elecraft, in my estimation, is a significant improvement over the R75. The others I mention above, for the same price, are not.

Don't get me wrong - I'd love a Drake. But penny for penny, I think the Elecraft would be a better choice.

I think I'm beginning to figure myself out!

At one period in my life, I was used to telling someone to do something, and I expected it to be done. No explanations needed.

At one time if I said 'go dig a hole over there', I didn't expect to deliver a long winded explanation of why I wanted the hole dug.

That has followed me through the rest of my life.

No, at the time it all worked out pretty well! But in 'real life', some folks expect more.

There's a lot more use to a 455KHz out jack than a 12KHz out jack. An IF out jack was never common, but neither were they completely rare. You'd use it to add an SSB adapter or an FM detector. Or add an IF based RTTY detector. Place it early enough in the IF chain (ie before the filtering) and you could connect a panadaptor to see what was going on. It was great for experimental use, since you could do all kinds of modifications without having to modify the receiver.

Indeed, the one mod many might make was to add a jack to feed the 455KHz IF out of the radio.

12KHz is pretty much for only one purpose, your DRM converter. Well there are other uses, but might as well stick to the standard. Why should the radio add another conversion stage to suit your needs, when it isn't likely to be needed by many? The 455KHz jack adds little to the cost, but saves you having to modify the radio. Anyone doing any playing around would be capable of adding that conversion stage, if they needed it, to any project that they wanted to tack onto the radio.

FOr instance, if I wanted to use that good 250KHz mechanical filter I have lying around, I'd have to add a conversion stage to use it with just about any radio. But with a 455KHz jack, I'd only have to convert to 250KHz. If all the radio had was a 12KHz jack, something I don't need, I'd have to convert that back up to 250KHz externally, adding another stage of unwanted and unnneded conversion.

In the military, there's a kind of clarity. You know your place in things. You know your responsibilities. You get up in the morning, you know your mission, your purpose, and the expectations on you.

It's a more structured and orderly life. Less chaotic. Which, of course, clears your mind for the duties at hand should you find yourself in combat, where training becomes autonomic.

Out in the civilian world, things are not so clear.

Life in the civilian world...

...is High School.

Clarity is the instrument of frustration there.

Some might wish to Google 'operation frequent wind' to learn more about the evacuation of Saigon.

As I recall, it may have been the largest group of naval ships since the D-Day landings, and probably will never be seen again.

It's totally self-contained if you want to use it that way. It even decodes "Morse" and PSK31 on the front panel. The FlexRadio requires a host computer running Windows Direct X 9, which is why I didn't consider getting one. I like PowerSDR, but I'm not going to spend $200+ on Windows to run one app.

I'd seriously considered the K3, but another Ham who owns a couple of them told me he doesn't like them at all for sideband. He feels the audio is rather thin.

So he uses his K3's for CW contest work, and he has a pair of Yaesu FT-1000mp's for sideband.

I was on the Elecraft reflector for a couple months, and I can tell you they seem to do updates to firmware on a weekly basis (maybe even more often) but there was also some grousing that the updates all seem to be for folks who use CW instead of phone.

You don't need to have the radio hooked up to a computer for operation, but if you want to install every update, it might make sense to leave it hooked up.

The General Coverage bandpass module is a $140 option. I believe you'll also need a $126 6khz filter.

I ended up buying a Ten-tec Jupiter. The Omni VII has a stronger front end (helpful when someone is running 1500w a couple khz away), but the audio on the Jupiter is quite nice, and the fish finder is pretty neat. I think I can just about shoehorn it into a car loaded with stuff for a star party.

My NRD-515 tunes in 100 HZ steps and SSB would be really annoying if it didn't have the (modified) delta tune for pitch control. 10HZ is fine, but 1HZ, is better.

Like any other hobby, once you get to a certain point, it's all pretty much nitpicking. A friend of mine is into radio control helicopters, and he puts down the cheaper plastic and partially CNC aluminum ones that do 99% of what his all CNC headed ones do, just not as precisely. I'm kind of thinking about getting one, but he's pushing me towards the higher end ones, and I'm thinking it's gonna crash anyway, so why not start out cheap?

Then there's a friend who is into cameras, and buys another insanely expensive one about every year and a half or so. Pics don't look much different than when he had his 4 megapixel camera. Now he has an 18 megapixel (I think that's how many it's got)camera that costs what a used car does.

The only thing Drake ever made I really want, or want to keep is the R7A. The R8 and R8A, I sold pretty quickly.

You can get an R7 and turn it into an R7A rather quickly! They are essentially one and the same.

Off the top of my head (pointy as it may be) as I recall, the difference between the R7 and the R7A was that the R7A came standard with the noise blanker (NB7A, at the time) and I think the 500 kc CW filter, AND, a jumper across the filter board which APPROXIMATED a 6 kHz filter for AM reception.

I currently have an R7 with 8, 6, 4, 3, and 2.3 kHz filters, the NB7A noise blanker and the AUX7 board.

In particular, camera megapixel size is REALLY overblown. Unless you're going to shoot for billboards to be examined at a distance of two feet, you don't need much over 6Mp. I have a 10.1Mp - because that's what they had at the time - and it is way more than adequate.
I often find myself reducing it for manageability.

As Peter has suggested and I concur, much better to put some $$$ into decent glass. That'll get you a lot more sharpness and resolution than doubling your pixel count.

No, for a long time I wanted to try the RV75 VFO with the R7 which I'm led to believe is more stable. At one time, I did have a mint in the box RV75, however, I didn't have the 1544 adapter that went with it to hook up to the R7/A.

But, if one has an R7/A, no need for an extra VFO, turn the darn thing on, it will warm up, and after all, that's what the tuning knob is for.

Having a higher pixel count allows for more editing choices, as well. Especially when shooting in the field when things are moving VERY quickly, you can crop out more unnecessary material with less loss of resolution. There are limits, of course. But as a rule, more pixels means more options.

When I was only shooting a D70, I put premium glass out front and it made a dramatic difference in the finished image. When I put the same glass out front of the D300, with twice the pixel count, I got a little better color. Somewhat better resolution on the monitor.
But nothing compared to the improvement of changing glass.

To bring this back to topic, it's not very much different than putting better antenna on the front end of your radio.
